GAUHATI CEMETERY NOTICE.

MR. KELLNER.

The representatives of the late Mr. H. Kellner, Sub-Assistant Commissioner, who died February 15, 1847, are requested to repair the pillars erected to his memory in Gauhati Cemetery, as unless so repaired, it must be levelled by order of Government.

P. NICOLAS,
Chaplain, Gauhati.

GAUHATI,
The 15th January 1878.

NOTICE

Is hereby given that the Government building for Ice-machine together with the Bungalow and Out-offices, erected for the use of the Engineer in charge of the Machinery and of a Non-Commissioned Officer, with a large compound and Ice-machinery capable of turning out (40) forty maunds of Ice in (24) twenty-four hours, turning lathe, well and pump, and numerous other items, all in working order, will be sold by public auction on the 4th February 1878, at an upset price of Rs. 10,000 for Ice-machine with its apparatus, and Rs. 20,000 for the Buildings and Out-offices.

The sale will take place at Executive Engineer's Office, Military Works Division, Lucknow Cantonment, at 2 P.M., and the purchaser will be required to pay 5 per cent. on the fall of the hammer, and the balance before taking possession of the above property.

The purchaser will have all the property at his risk after the sale is completed.

In case of failure in paying up the balance, the above property will be re-sold, and the loss thereby sustained will be recovered from the purchaser, who will have no claim to the increased sum if obtained by this re-sale.

The buildings are situated on the south side of the Railway line running to Benares, near the General's Bungalow and the Railway Over-bridge.

The purchaser will hold the land on the conditions specified in paragraph 1984 of the Bengal Military Regulations. He will likewise have to comply with all the rules now in force or that may hereafter be introduced in Cantonments.

On completion of the sale, the purchaser will be required to sign a declaration to this effect in the presence of the Cantonment Magistrate.

Some ether expected to arrive shortly from England for use with the Machine will also be offered for sale at the same time and place on conditions to be stated at time of sale.

G. E. SANFORD, Major, R.E.,
Exc. Engr., Lucknow Divn., Mily. Works.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 16th January 1878, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 1 of 1878.

A Bill to make better provision for the management of the Husainábád endowment at Lucknow.

WHEREAS in the year 1838 the third King of Oudh Muhammad Ali Shah, built at Lucknow a Mosque called Husainábád Mubárak for the purpose of the celebration therein of certain religious ceremonies and for the ultimate interment of himself and his mother;

And whereas, on or about the twenty-third day of November 1839, the said Muhammad Ali Shah deposited the sum of twelve lálkis of Lucknow sicca rupees in the treasury of the late East India Company at the Residency at Lucknow;

And whereas by a deed of gift dated the fifteenth of the month of Ramazán in the year 1255 of the Hijra, corresponding with the said twenty-third day of November 1839, the said Muhammad Ali Shah declared that the annual interest on the said sum of twelve lálkis of rupees at the rate of four per centum per annum, together with the rent of certain shops therein referred to and the income of certain religious offerings, should be applied to the payment of the pensions of certain persons therein mentioned and their descendants (hereinafter called the pensioners) and to defraying the expenses of the said Mosque and the repairs of a road therein mentioned; and by the same deed the said Muhammad Ali Shah appointed two of his servants named Rafik-ul-Daulah Sayyid Imám Ali Khán Bahádúr and Azímulláh Khán Bahádúr, and after them their descendants, generation after generation, to be Superintendents (mutawallís) of the said Mosque, and Sharfu-d-Daulah Muzaffar-ul-Mulk Muhammad Ibráhim Khán Bahádúr Mustakím Jang, and his descendants after him to be Agent of the said pensioners only, and the expenses of the said Mosque were to be paid in perpetuity from the said treasury to the said two Superintendents and their descendants after them, and the said pensions were to be paid through the said Agent; and the said deed further provided that, in the event of failure of heirs of the said Superintendents or Agent, the British Resident for the time being at Lucknow should, with the concurrence of three-fourths of the said pensioners, appoint one of their number to the vacant post. And the deed now in recital also contained the following provisions:

As the pensioners enumerated in this deed are objects of our peculiar consideration and favour, it is necessary that the Resident for the time being, owing to the union and friendship subsisting between the two Governments, treat them with kindness, and considering them deserving of the support of the British Government, always afford them his aid and assistance.

“The undermentioned items of income are hereby remitted and shall be devoted to the expenses of the Husainábád Mubárak and its dependencies, and all the property in it is given by us as a gift. It shall not be optional with the sovereigns of Oudh, at any time, on any account whatsoever, to interfere in any way with it, and let the Resident for the time being, at the request of the mutawallis, or superintendents, in this particular matter, give his countenance and support that this good work may continue in existence for ever;”

And whereas the items of income so referred to were the rents of certain shops attached to the said Mosque and the income from religious offerings thereto ;

And whereas on the fifth day of December 1839, Colonel Caulfield, the British Resident at Lucknow, addressed a letter to the said Muhammad Ali Shah in which he acknowledged the receipt of the said deed of gift, and stated that His Majesty might rest satisfied that every attention would be paid by the Resident to the wishes therein expressed, that his relatives would ever meet with the utmost attention, and that their interests would always be attended to by the Resident so far as his official duty permitted ;

And whereas some time after the said twenty-third day of November 1839, the said Muhammad Ali Shah added to the endowment so created Government promissory notes amounting to the sum of two millions four hundred and seventeen thousand five hundred sicca rupees, but he did not expressly declare any trusts of such further endowment ;

And whereas the said notes are believed to have been in September 1841, converted into Government promissory notes for Company's rupees, and to have been then endorsed in favour of the said Superintendents and the Agent ;

And whereas at some time between the same date and the month of February 1856, certain surplus-funds of the said endowment were invested in Government promissory notes, some in the names of the said Superintendents and Agent, and some in the names of the said Superintendents only ;

And whereas, after the mutiny of 1857 and the re-occupation of Lucknow, the said Mosque was found to have been stripped of all its valuable property and the promissory notes of which the said endowment then consisted were missing, and it appeared on enquiry that the said Agent had joined the mutineers and been killed during an attack on the said city, and that the said Superintendents had sold certain of the same promissory notes ;

And whereas the Government of India thereupon removed the existing Superintendents from their office, and called upon the existing pensioners to appoint under the hereinbefore-recited provisions of the fourth article of the said deed of trust two other Superintendents and an Agent ;

And whereas the Nawábs Muhsinu-d-Daulah and Mumtázu-d-Daulah were accordingly appointed Superintendents and Shahámat-ulláh Khán was appointed Agent, and such appointments were confirmed by the then Chief Commissioner of Oudh in the year 1860 ;

And whereas in the meanwhile most of the promissory notes so missing as aforesaid were recovered and of some of the others duplicates were granted by Government ;

And whereas the Superintendents and Agent appointed as last aforesaid, subsequently obtained from the Civil Court at Lucknow a declaration of their title to the arrears of interest which had accrued due on the promissory notes then constituting the said endowment ;

And whereas in the month of June 1864, the said promissory notes and arrears were assigned to the said Superintendents and Agents free from all restrictions ;

And whereas the said Nawáb Muhsinu-d-Daulah has recently died, but the said deed of trust confers no power to appoint any other person to be a Superintendent in his stead ;

And whereas it is doubtful whether the aforesaid appointment of Superintendents and Agent was a regular and valid appointment, and whether there exists any person who can exercise the power of appointment conferred on the Resident by the said deed of gift ;

And whereas, owing to the changes which have happened since the death of the said Muhammad Ali Shah, it is expedient to provide for the management of the said endowment in manner hereinafter appearing ;

And whereas it is also desirable to empower the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad to settle a scheme for the payment of the pensions referred to in the said trust-deed, and for the application of the surplus-income of the said endowment in defraying the expenses of the trust and in support of the Mosque, road and other objects contemplated by the said Muhammad Ali Shah ;

And whereas it is also expedient to indemnify all persons for anything done before the passing of this Act, which might lawfully have been done if the said appointments of the said Nawábs and Shahámat-ulláh Khán had been valid ;

It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. The said pensioners and such of the descendants of the said Muhammad Ali Shah as may for the time being reside at Lucknow may from time to time nominate so many persons as they or a majority of them think fit to be trustees of the said endowment ; and the Local Government may from time to time appoint from amongst the persons so nominated such persons, as it thinks fit, to be such trustees : provided that the said Nawáb Mumtázu-d-Daulah shall be one of the said persons to be first nominated and appointed as aforesaid, and that the number of the said trustees shall be not less than three and not more than five, as the Local Government may from time to time direct.

2. If any of the said trustees dies, or is desirous of being discharged, or refuses or becomes incapable to act, then and so often the Local Government may appoint any other person to be a trustee in the stead of the trustee so dying or desiring to be discharged, or refusing or becoming incapable to act.

When any of the said trustees is guilty of any misconduct which in the opinion of the Local Government disqualifies him to be a trustee, the Local Government may with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council appoint any other person to be a trustee in his stead.

3. After the first appointment of trustees under this Act, the whole property of the endowment shall always be vested in the whole body of trustees for the time being.

4. The trustees shall have the entire management of the property and affairs of the endowment, and shall be responsible for the due conduct of such affairs.

5. The trustees shall elect one of their own body to be their Chairman and to convene and preside at their meetings. If at any such meeting he is not present within an hour from the time appointed for holding the meeting, the trustees present shall choose one of themselves to preside for that occasion.

6. Every trustee shall have one vote, and no more. All questions arising at meetings of the trustees shall be decided according to the votes of the majority of those present; and if their numbers are equally divided, the Chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

7. Business may be transacted at any meeting at which more than half the existing number of trustees is present, if such meeting has been regularly convened.

If within an hour from the time appointed for the meeting, a quorum is not present, the meeting shall stand adjourned to the same day in the next week, and if at such adjourned meeting a quorum is not present, it shall be adjourned sine die.

8. With the previous sanction of the Local Government the trustees may from time to time appoint some person, not being one of their own body, to act as their Secretary, to keep their accounts, conduct their correspondence and perform other ministerial duties; and may pay him such suitable salary as they may fix and may suspend or dismiss any person so appointed.

9. The appointment of trustees under this Act shall be effected by a notification in the local official Gazette, and the appointee shall become a trustee on the date fixed in the notification, or if no date is fixed, from the day after its appearance in such Gazette.

10. The validity of any such appointment so notified shall not be questioned in any Court of justice.

11. The Local Government may from time to time call for such accounts and other information respecting the said endowment as it thinks fit; and any person disobeying such requisition, or furnishing false information respecting such endowment, shall be deemed to have committed an offence under section 175, section 176 or section 177 (as the case may be) of the Indian Penal Code.

12. The Secretary of State for India in Council may, from time to time, institute a suit or suits in the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad for the settlement of a scheme consistent with this Act for the said endowment:

for the modification of such scheme:

or for the purpose of compelling the restitution of any property belonging to the said endowment.

The procedure in any such suit shall be governed by the rules for the time being in force in the said High Court in the exercise of its extraordinary original civil jurisdiction, and the decree in such suit shall have the same effect and be executed in the same manner as if the property comprised therein were situate within the local limits of such jurisdiction.

An appeal shall lie from any decree made under this section, subject to the rules for the time being in force as to appeals from decrees made by a Judge of the said High Court in the exercise of extraordinary original civil jurisdiction.

13. The plaintiff in such suit and the memorandum of appeal (if any) shall not be chargeable with any Court-fee.

14. All officers and other persons are hereby indemnified for anything done before the passing of this Act, which might lawfully have been done if the hereinbefore-recited appointments of the said Nawábs and Shahámát-ulláh Khán had been valid; and no suit or other proceeding shall be maintained against any such officer or other person in respect of anything so done.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

This Bill has become necessary in order to provide for the due administration of the Husainábád endowment at Lucknow. The preamble recites in detail the history of that endowment. It was originally created by Muhamínad Ali Shah, third King of Oudh, on or about the 23rd November 1839, on which date the King deposited twelve lakhs of Lucknow sicca rupees in the treasury of the Lucknow Residency, and by deed of the same date declared the trusts upon which that sum was deposited. Those trusts were that the annual interest, together with the rent of certain shops referred to in the deed and the income of certain religious offerings, should be applied (1) to the payment of certain pensions to persons mentioned in the deed and their descendants; (2) to defraying the expenses of a Mosque called Husainábád Mubárak, and (3) to the repair of a road mentioned in the deed. The deed appointed certain servants of the King, and their descendants in perpetuity, to be Superintendents (mutawallís) of the Mosque and Agent of the pensioners respectively, the management of the Mosque and road and of the pensions being kept distinct. In case of failure of descendants of these persons, the Resident at Lucknow, with the concurrence of three-fourths of the pensioners, was empowered to appoint one of their number to the vacant office.

The Resident at Lucknow accepted the charge committed to him by the King; and the King afterwards increased the endowment by Government promissory notes amounting to sicca rupees 24,17,500, but without declaring any fresh trusts. The preamble then traces the fund so created, which was lost during the mutiny of 1857, but most of it was afterwards recovered. The Agent had also joined the mutineers and had been killed; and after the mutiny fresh Superintendents and a new Agent were appointed by the pensioners, and these persons obtained possession of the fund in June 1864. One of the Superintendents has, however, since become incapable of acting, and it has therefore become necessary to provide for the appointment of a new Superintendent. But doubts have arisen as to the power to appoint, and as to the validity of the appointment made after the mutiny. The Bill provides for this matter, as well as for the settlement of a scheme by the High Court of Allahabad, the provisions of the deed being very vague; and for indemnifying persons for acts done by virtue of the appointments abovementioned.

Section 1 provides for the appointment of trustees, from time to time, by the Local Government upon the nomination of the pensioners and such of the descendants of Muhammad Ali Shah as may for the time being reside at Lucknow; such trustees to be not less than three in number and not more than five, of whom the present Superintendent, Mumtāzu-d-Daulah, is to be one.

Sections 2 and 3 provide for the appointment of trustees in the place of deceased, retiring or incapable trustees, and for the vesting of the property of the endowment in the trustees for the time being.

Section 4 commits the management of the endowment entirely to the trustees.

Sections 5, 6 and 7 provide for the transaction of business by the trustees at their meetings; and section 8 authorizes the appointment of some person, not of their own body, as paid Secretary to the trustees.

By section 11 the Local Government may call for such accounts and information respecting the endowment as it thinks fit.

Section 12 empowers the Secretary of State in Council to sue in the Allahabad High Court for the settlement of a scheme for the endowment, or to compel the restitution of any property belonging to the endowment. An appeal is allowed as in cases decided by that Court in its extraordinary civil jurisdiction, and the plaint in any suit under section 12 is (section 13) exempted from Court-fees.

Section 14 indemnifies all persons for anything done before the passing of the proposed Act which would have been valid if the appointments abovementioned had been valid, and saves such persons from suits or proceedings in respect of such acts.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 31st January 1878, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 2 of 1878.

A Bill to assimilate certain powers of the Local Governments of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

WHEREAS the Lieutenant-Governorship of the North-Western Provinces and the Chief Commissionership

of Oudh are now united under the administration of a single officer; and whereas it is expedient that, so long as such union continues, the powers of the Local Government of Oudh under the enactments hereinafter mentioned should resemble the powers of the Local Government of the North-Western Provinces under the same or like enactments; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. In the Oudh Rent Act, 1868, sections 29, 85, 87 and 91, the following Omissions from Act XIX of 1868. words shall be omitted (namely): “with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council,” “subject to any orders that may from time to time be issued by the Governor General in Council,” “subject to any orders in this behalf that may from time to time be made by the Governor General of India in Council,” and “with the sanction of the Governor General of India in Council.”

2. For the first sentence of section 6 of the Prisons Act, 1870, the following Alteration of Act XXVI of 1870, section 6. words shall be substituted (namely)—“An Inspector General of Prisons shall be appointed in the North-Western Provinces, the Panjab and Oudh by the Local Government and in the Central Provinces and British Burma by the Governor General in Council.”

3. In the Oudh Land-Revenue Act, 1876, section 4, the following Omissions from Act XVII of 1876. words shall be omitted in both the places in which they occur (namely)—“subject to such rules as the Governor General in Council may from time to time prescribe in this behalf;” and in sections 7 and 9 of the same Act the following words shall be omitted (namely), “subject to such rules as the Governor General in Council from time to time prescribes in this behalf;” and in sections 14, 19, 20, 51, 183, 212 and 220 of the same Act, the following words shall be omitted (namely)—“with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.”

To section 43 of the same Act the following Addition to same Act, section 43. words shall be added (namely)—“provided that in the case of settlements of individual mahāls or parts of mahāls, undertaken at other times than at the general settlement and sanctioned by the Chief Commissioner, such confirmation shall not be necessary.”

4. In the first clause of the Oudh Laws Act, 1876, section 39, the following Omission from Act XVIII of 1876, section 39. words shall be omitted (namely): “with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.”

5. For the purpose of the Prisoners Act, 1871, Modification of Act V of 1871, sections 30 and 31. sections 30 and 31, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh shall be deemed to be subject to the same Local Government.

6. This Act shall come into force on the passing thereof, and shall continue in force until the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, otherwise directs.

Commencement and continuance of this Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Oudh having been placed under the control of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, it has become desirable, for administrative purposes, to assimilate certain powers of the Chief Commissioner in Oudh under the Kent Act, the Revenue Act and the Laws Act to the powers that, as Lieutenant-Governor, he exercises in the North-Western Provinces under Acts dealing with like subjects. This Bill has been framed to effect this assimilation, and no change whatever is contemplated in the distinctive features of the Oudh administration, and still less in any of the rights or privileges of any class or classes of persons in Oudh, which have been guaranteed by the Government of India either in Acts of the legislature or by established practice.

For the purpose of removing prisoners from one jail to another or to a lunatic asylum, it is convenient that, under present circumstances, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh should be treated as forming one Local Government. The Bill contains a provision to this effect.

The proposed law is intended to continue in force only so long as the union of the two Provinces under the same Head continues.

in British India of wages due to, and expenses incurred in respect of, certain seamen and apprentices, was referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin.

2. We have added sections 3, 4 and 5 to the Bill as introduced.

Section 3 has been added to supply an accidental omission in the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1875, recently brought to notice by the Board of Trade, and owing to which a question has been raised as to whether, in certain cases, the certificate of a master, mate or engineer could be cancelled or suspended on proof of a wrongful act or default by him causing the loss or abandonment of, or serious damage to, a ship, or loss of life.

Section 4 has been added with a view to supplying a power (the want of which has recently been felt) to direct enquiry into casualties to foreign vessels occurring on the coasts of British India, and section 5 has been added at the suggestion of certain members of the mercantile community in Bombay, to compel persons recovering bales of goods, ships' stores and other property, which may have fallen overboard or otherwise got adrift in a port, to deliver up such property to the Conservator, and to regulate the right to salvage, about which it is said disputes sometimes occur.

3. The publication ordered by the Council has taken place ; but we consider republication to be desirable.

4. We recommend that the Bill as now amended be passed.

A Bill to provide for the recovery in British India of wages due to, and expenses incurred in respect of, certain seamen and apprentices, and to amend the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1875, and the Indian Ports Act, 1875.

WHEREAS by the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, section 213, and by the Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1855, section 16, it is enacted that the Board of Trade may, in manner therein mentioned, and in the name of Her Majesty, sue for and recover the wages due to, and expenses incurred in respect of, the distressed seamen and apprentices in the said sections mentioned; And whereas it is expedient to empower such persons as the Governor General in Council may think fit to sue for and recover in British India in the name of the Secretary of State for India in Council, such wages and expenses, when the same are charged upon any ship, or recoverable from any master, owner or other person, found in British India;

And whereas it is also expedient to amend the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1875, and the Indian Ports Act, 1875, in manner hereinafter appearing;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. The Governor General in Council may, from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India, authorize, either generally or specially, such persons as he thinks fit to sue for and recover, in manner in the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, section 213, provided, any wages or expenses recoverable under the said sections of the said Acts in cases where such wages and expenses are, under the same sections, a charge upon any ship, or recoverable from any master, owner or other person, within the jurisdiction of any Court in British India.

Every person so authorized shall be entitled to sue and recover accordingly in any such Court, and shall be deemed to be a person filling a public office within the meaning of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 57, clause 7.

2. All suits and proceedings under section one shall be instituted and carried on in the name of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

3. In sections 6, 7, 9 and 17 of the said Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1875, the word "misconduct" shall be deemed to include, besides drunkenness, tyranny and other similar misconduct, any wrongful act or default causing the loss or abandonment of, or serious damage to, any ship, or loss of life.

4. Notwithstanding anything contained in section one hundred and fourteen of Act No. 1 of 1859 (for the amendment of the law relating to Merchant Seamen), or in section twenty-eight of the said Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1875, the word "ship" in section three and the word "ships" in section five of the latter Act, shall be deemed to include all ships except ships belonging to, or in the service of, Her Majesty or belonging to any foreign Prince or State.

Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to give power to cancel or suspend any certificate granted by the Board of Trade and held by the master, mate or engineer of any ship belonging to the subject of any foreign Prince or State.

Amendment of chapter V of Act XII of 1875.

5. For chapter V of the Indian Ports Act, 1875, the following shall be substituted (namely)—

"CHAPTER V.—Of Salvage in Ports.

"43. If any anchors, wreck, stores or other property be recovered by an officer employed by the Local Government for that purpose, from the surface, below or shore of any port subject to this Act, the Local Government shall be entitled to receive a reasonable sum for salvage, having regard to the place of recovery.

"If any such property is so recovered by any other person not entitled thereto nor authorized by the person so entitled to recover the same, he shall, without unnecessary delay, deliver the same to the Conservator, or to such other officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf, and shall be entitled to receive a reasonable sum as aforesaid in respect of the same.

"A register shall be kept of all property so recovered, in such manner and at such place as the Local Government may direct.

"It shall contain a description of such property, and of the times and places where the same has been recovered.

"and it shall be open to public inspection at reasonable office-hours, except on Sundays and such holidays as the Local Government may direct.

"Nothing in this section shall authorize any person to creep or sweep for any property in contravention of section forty, or entitle any person to salvage in respect of any property recovered by so creeping or sweeping.

"Any person omitting to deliver any property to the Conservator as required by this section shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

"44. If the property recovered under the last preceding section, or by a Conservator acting under section fifteen, is unclaimed,

"or if the person claiming the same fails to pay the amount due to the Local Government, or to the finder of such property, in respect thereof,

"such property may be sold by public auction, if of a perishable nature, forthwith; and if not of a perishable nature, at any period not less than six months after the recovery thereof;

"and on the realization of the proceeds, the amount due to the Local Government, or to the finder of such property, for salvage, or for the expenses incurred under section fifteen, shall be deducted therefrom, and credited to the Local Government, or paid to such finder, as the case may be, and the balance shall be paid to the person entitled to the property recovered, or, if no such person appear and claim the same, shall be held in deposit for payment, without interest, to any person thereafter establishing his right to the same.

"Provided that he makes his claim within one year from the date of the sale."

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH THE SECRETARY OF STATE CONTAINING FURTHER ACCOUNT OF THE FAMINE-STRICKEN PROVINCES IN INDIA AND OF THOSE THREATENED WITH FAMINE.

No. 39, dated Simla, 30th October 1877.

From—The Government of India.

To—The Secretary of State for India.

In our letter No. 38 (Famine), dated 11th October, we had the pleasure of reporting to Your Lordship the very favourable change caused in the prospects of the season by the rainfall in Northern, Western and Central India, during the second week of the present month.

2. Since the date of that letter matters have gone on satisfactorily. Taking the several provinces in order, we have to report as follows:—

Favourable rain has fallen regularly throughout the Presidency of Madras gauging, on an average, about two inches a week up to the 22nd October. The north-east monsoon (or latter rains), on which the crops in the districts of the Coromandel Coast and the Carnatic greatly depend, did not burst with its usual vigour. But the change of wind from S. W. to E. set in on the 16th; and since then partial but heavy storms have fallen in most parts of the Presidency. Up to the 26th the monsoon was unsteady and variable; the latest telegram, dated 30th October states that the—

Successive weekly reports have shewn that the early crops which suffered much from the drought during August, had revived greatly from the September rain, and have yielded an out-turn averaging more than half of a full harvest. The winter crop is almost everywhere in good condition; cultivation and sowings for the spring crops are making satisfactory progress.

3. Prices have fallen steadily both at Madras and in the interior; at Bellary and Kurnool in the north, and at Tinnevely and Madura in the south, the quotations of the cheaper food-grains range from 19 lbs. to 20 lbs. per rupee. Importations of grain by sea and by railway have decreased considerably; the despatches of rice from Bengal and Burmah to Madras ports averaged during last week 1,095 tons daily, as compared with 5,454 tons daily during the corresponding week of September. Consignments to the Madras districts by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway have fallen to about 350 tons a day; this decrease is due, not to any failure in the railway working, but to the backwardness of consignors. There are in Madras town accumulations of grain, which are estimated by the Local Government to suffice for six weeks. Despatches of grain from Madras into the interior now average about 1,100 tons a day; dealers at Bellary and Bangalore are stopping their consignments; and the Madras Government report that holders are speculating on the failure of the north-east monsoon. For the present there is no fear as to the sufficiency of the supply of grain.

4. We reported to Your Lordship, in our letter quoted above, the substance of telegrams which had passed regarding the cessation of the preference shown by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway to grain consignments to the famine districts of Madras. We explained that, though we were most anxious to meet the wishes of the Bombay merchants who urged a withdrawal of the preference, yet we considered that the requirements of the famine districts were of paramount importance. The Governor of Madras telegraphed on the 24th October that—

“the preference given failed to bring at present any large quantity, that the traffic was very small, and that the Madras Government therefore, although prices were still high and imports needed, did not see any objection to the Bombay order for preference being now held in abeyance.”

We accordingly (on the 25th October) informed the Bombay Government by telegraph that the preference, granted on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway in favour of grain consignments to the famine district, might cease for the present; and we at the same time explained that the north-east monsoon had not yet burst at Madras, and that therefore the withdrawal of the preference could not, as yet, be final and permanent.

* A later telegram received since this letter was struck off reported that the monsoon had burst well everywhere except in Ganjam.

5. The combined result of the revised relief rules,* and of the favourable change of the season, has been to reduce considerably the numbers in receipt of State relief in the Madras Presidency. The numbers have been—

For the week ending	On relief works.	On gratuitous relief.	Total.
29th September ...	628,259	1,603,721	2,231,980
6th October ...	587,228	1,531,255	2,118,483
13th „ ...	550,299	1,283,966	1,834,265

The reduction during the last three weeks has thus been 687,589, or about 30 per cent. So far as we have learnt, the people, who have thus ceased to be recipients of relief, have gone back to their homes and their fields, to the great advantage of themselves and of the country, as well as to the benefit of the public treasury. The shortening of the administrative chain in famine matters has certainly conduced to efficiency and economy in relief operations; and, so far, the arrangements made by the Viceroy and the Governor of Madras on the 31st August are working well, though there was at the first some delay in giving effect to those arrangements. Subsidiary instructions have been issued by the Government of Madras on minor points and local details outside the scope of the revised relief rules; these instructions all tend to prevent waste of public money and demoralization of the people on the one hand, while on the other they provide that people in real distress shall not be left to starve. A copy of one of the more recent of these instructions, with our letter approving its principles will be found in enclosure No. 1 to this letter.

6. Throughout the Bombay Presidency there has been sufficient rain, and Sir Richard Temple telegraphed (on the 21st October) that “a new form of anxiety is arising from excessive rain in parts of Sholapore, Sattara, Kaladgi, Belgaum and Dharwar, where fine weather is much needed, as damage is caused by wet to autumn and winter crops.” Later telegrams, dated the 28th and 30th, say that excessive rain continues to retard harvest and threatens to reduce the yield, and that “no favourable change has occurred in the weather save in Sattara and Sholapore,” where it is now dry.

On the whole, the prospects of the autumn and winter crops throughout the Bombay Presidency continue to be good. Prices are falling, and they now range from 24 lbs. in Khandesh to 13 and 16 lbs. per rupee in Dharwar, Belgaum and Kaladgi. The numbers in receipt of State relief were—

So that during the last four weeks the reduction in the number of relief recipients has been 187,818, or about 48 per cent. The Bombay Government has from time to time issued orders providing that, while all who can leave the relief works should be encouraged to do so, destitute persons and wanderers who are unable to labour or who cannot get employment should be carefully looked after and relieved. We are satisfied that relief is not being withheld from any who are really in want.

7. In Mysore there has been moderate rain throughout the fortnight. The condition of the winter crops is good, and the prospects of the spring crops are most favourable. Prices have fallen, and are now quoted at 20 lbs. per rupee in Bangalore. Markets are everywhere sufficiently supplied; new grain is being brought for sale; and dealers are reducing their importations from Madras and the seaboard.

8. Detailed instructions for the administration of relief of all kinds have been drawn up, on the basis of the orders issued by the Viceroy at Bangalore on the 8th September. These instructions have been thrown into the shape

* Other copies will be sent hereafter; only one is available now. of a Famine Code for Mysore, copy* of which will be found as enclosure No. 2 to this letter. The Code has been drawn up by Mr. C. A. Elliott, the Famine Commissioner, under the orders of the Chief Commissioner. It is an excellent compendium of instructions suited to the present state of affairs in Mysore; many of its provisions, founded on the orders of the Government of India, will be found applicable to famine relief administration elsewhere. In our Secretary's letter (see enclosure No. 2) acknowledging the Code, we expressed our special satisfaction with the clauses, which carefully provide for the humane treatment of those who are unable to do a full day's work, or who are in need of medical care and special food.

9. During the past month 25 relief officers (five of whom were native officers of the Bengal Army), 20 engineers of different grades, and 34 medical subordinates have been sent to Mysore. Much has been done to systematise and improve the arrangements at relief works and relief camps, to secure the proper treatment of the suffering poor, and to prevent speculation and mismanagement.

10. Up to the latest report, deaths, mainly due to famine, are still occurring in and near Bangalore, whither had congregated tens of thousands, for whom adequate relief was not available in their villages. The poor creatures,—who thus wander in search of charity, grow weaker and weaker, and at last die during the cold rainy nights,—mostly come from the distressed tracts in the centre and north of the province; and they are said often to pass by relief works and relief houses, where they could at once obtain relief. A special organisation has been arranged by finding these wanderers, before they are past recovery, and bringing them forcibly into relief hospitals and relief camps. The reported famine deaths in and round the town and cantonment of Bangalore were—

during August	20 per day.
during 1st to 10th September	41 "
during 11th to 30th "	35 "
during 1st to 13th October	26 "
during 14th to 17th "	23 "
during 18th to 20th "	16 "

The deaths in relief camps and relief hospitals were—

during August	84 per day.
during 1st to 10th September	95 "
during 11th to 30th "	70 "
during 1st to 13th October	55 "

The numbers fed in the relief camps in and around Bangalore from the 1st August up to the 10th September were about 36,000, of whom barely one-sixth were permanent inmates of the camps. From the 11th September to the 30th October the average number of persons relieved in the camps was about 20,000, of whom from one-half to three-quarters were permanent inmates. The good done by the changes in the relief system, and by the improvement in the season, is apparent from the reduced mortality in Bangalore town and cantonments generally. The number of deaths, exclusive of reported famine deaths and of the deaths in relief hospitals, is returned at—in Bangalore town and cantonment	{ 884 for the month of July.

	1,185	ditto	August.
	225	ditto	September.

11. We have not yet received detailed reports, but we learn that the Famine Commissioner fears that the mortality from famine in the Tumkur district and other parts of Central Mysore has been very large. A recent telegram from the Famine Commissioner, who is still journeying through the distressed districts, informs us that the condition of the people in the north-western districts of the province is better than he had expected, and that additional relief operations there are not now needed. At enclosure No. 3 will be found the relief reports of the province for the last three weeks. The changes in the numbers in receipt of relief has been as follows :—

During the week ending				On relief works.	On gratuitous relief.
15th September	53,745	208,683
22nd "	56,551	161,892
29th "	58,693	136,204
6th October	62,506	103,750
20th "	78,478	72,838

It is satisfactory that the numbers on relief works now form a much larger proportion of the total numbers in receipt of relief. The reports state that the paupers gain much in health and spirits, within a few days of their being drafted from gratuitous relief at camps or kitchens, to relief works.

12. Major Moncrieff, the Acting Chief Engineer of Mysore, has returned from a journey to the district of Coorg. He reports that at the present season there is no need for extensive relief works, as the coffee gardens now, and for the next three months, will furnish ample labour. His detailed report has not yet been received, but we gather that there was ground for the representations made to the Viceroy on his visit to Mysore regarding the need for relief operations in Coorg during the summer and early autumn months.

13. There has been a heavy fall of rain in the Hyderabad country; the crops are in good condition; prices are cheaper; and relief operations are being closed. In Berar the prospects of the crops are excellent.

HYDERABAD.

14. In the Central Provinces there has been some loss of the rice crop in the districts of Saugor, Damoh and Sumbulpore, owing to the shortness of the September rainfall.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.

But, for the rest, the prospects of the winter crops, and the progress of the spring crop sowings, are everywhere good. Immigration into Saugor from the Central India States has now ceased; and the immigrants have begun slowly to return. As yet they return in parties of only 50 to 200 a day; and many thousands are still in Saugor and Damoh, for some of whom relief employment has to be provided.

15. Though the condition of affairs in Rajputana was very greatly improved by the rainfall reported in our letter of the 11th October, yet there were tracts where no autumn crop had been saved, and where spring crops never grow. These tracts were situated principally in Marwar and the desert States north and west of the Aravelli hills. Emigrants from these parts were reported to be still thronging Ajmere; and therefore, while postponing the preparation of railway work beyond the Sendra pass towards Erinpoorah, we have directed that our sanction to the prosecution of railway work in the pass shall hold good in order that relief employment may be provided for destitute immigrants. In Central India, though the prospects of the Malwa crops is good, and though there has been further rain in Gwalior, yet there is not sufficient agricultural employment for the many thousands of immigrants who have come into the country between Neemuch and Indore. On the representation of the Agent, Sir Henry Daly, we have directed that the earth-work on the Neemuch and Rutlam Section of the Central India Railway shall be commenced at both ends. In this way employment will be provided for immigrants into the Western States of Central India. But in the south-eastern States also there is need for relief to the immigrant poor, who were flocking down the great road from Agra to Indore. Though the emigrants are beginning to return home northwards, yet all have not the means of supporting themselves on their homeward journey, and deaths among them from cholera, and even from hunger, are reported. Goona is the only place where British Officers are quartered on the whole length of road from Gwalior to Indore. The officers there have, partly from private subscriptions and partly with the help of a grant from the Madras Relief Fund, opened relief houses, and have given food and clothing to many thousands of destitute wayfarers. The Maharaja Scindiah has engaged to maintain, and indeed has maintained, relief houses as far as Seepree on the Indore road; and arrangements are being made for opening relief places between Seepree and Goona. The recipients of relief are subjects of Native States, and the relief houses will be in Native territory. The cost of these operations ought not properly to be a charge on the British Indian tax-payer. But the relief is being given, and if the money for its cost cannot be had elsewhere, the British treasury will have to bear the charge. Effort will be made, however, to procure the necessary funds from the Native States interested. For those immigrants who require relief employment near Goona, work is being commenced on a cross road from Goona to Oojcin, for which funds are available in the Central India Agency budget of the current year.

16. There has been no further appreciable rain in the North-West Provinces, but there has been a good fall of rain at Rawul Pindce in the Punjab, which had not shared in the rain of the second week of October. Over the whole of the North-West Provinces, the Punjab and Oudh, preparations for the spring crop are making good progress; an unusually broad area is being sown with spring grains and prices have fallen somewhat. We have not yet heard whether all the proposed relief works can at once be foregone. But the schemes for extensive relief works in the North-West Provinces have been laid aside, while in the Punjab no need for special relief works had been represented by the local Government.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND THE PUNJAB.

17. The crop prospects are now good over Bengal and Assam. In the Bassein and Henzada districts of British Burmah, serious floods destroyed (see enclosure No. 4) large breadths of the young rice crop. But most of the flooded lands have been, or will be, replanted. The latest advices from Rangoon and Moulmein show that merchants expect a very large rice crop in Burmah, and their estimate is that the exportable surplus will reach 800,000 tons.

BENGAL.
ASSAM.
BURMAH.

18. At paragraph 3 of your despatch No. 58, dated 26th July, it was mentioned that a further report from Dr. Lewis and Dr. D. D. Cunningham, respecting the fevers recently prevalent in Bombay and Madras, would be awaited. We have now the honor to forward (enclosure No. 5) a short report in which these officers state their opinion that the fevers, prevalent in Bombay during the earlier part of the year 1876, were of the ordinary "intermittent" and "continued" types, and were not famine fevers. They state also that, in the Madras Presidency, fevers, "so far from being exceptionally severe during the early months of 1876, were decidedly in abeyance." The mortality returns of the Madras distressed districts for the six months, November 1876 to April 1877, show that cholera and small-pox were the most prevalent diseases from December to March.

19. In enclosure No. 6 will be found copy of a telegram despatched to Your Lordship on the 16th current regarding the death-rates of the Madras Presidency; also a table showing the reported deaths in each of the distressed districts during the six months, November 1876 to April 1877. The net result is that, in these districts containing a population of $13\frac{1}{2}$ millions, the reported deaths of the half-year were 373,993 (or 27 per thousand), 227,123 (or $16\frac{1}{2}$ per thousand) above the reported deaths of previous years for the same area and the same period, and 188,945 (or 13 per thousand) above what is believed to be the normal death-rate of an Indian population: 182,114 deaths from cholera were reported during the six months; this latter number is nearly equal to the excess of the reported deaths above the supposed normal death-rate. It is not possible to say how many of the excess deaths were due to famine. The Madras Government have been asked to furnish tables of the reported deaths in districts which are not distressed for the same six months, and also to send tables for subsequent months as soon as they are ready. The results which these tables may show will be reported to Your Lordship. The rural registration of deaths is not, as yet, very complete or trustworthy anywhere, so far as our Sanitary Commissioner is able to judge (see page 107-8 of his annual report for 1875); and the latest report of the Sanitary Commissioner for Madras (page 53 et seq.) would show that the registration of deaths in that Presidency is still capable of improvement. Accordingly we have preferred not to trust to the returns of births and deaths alone; but we have proposed a partial counting of the people in the distressed districts as soon as the famine is over, so that we may ascertain approximately what the loss of population may have been. At enclosure No. 6 will be found a circular letter in which we have issued instructions for a census of selected tracts in the famine-stricken country of Southern India.

From—The Secretary of State for India,
To—The Government of India.

The despatch of Your Excellency in Council, dated 30th October, No. 39 of 1877, giving a further account of the condition and prospects of the provinces in India which have suffered from or have been threatened by famine, has been considered by me in Council.

2. The statements submitted in the despatch are generally favourable. In Madras the north-east monsoon has broken in all the districts except Coimbatore, Salem, North Arcot, Ganjam, Vizagapatam and Godavery. The early crops have greatly revived, and a yield to the extent of more than half a full harvest is expected. The winter crops are in good condition, and cultivation and sowings for the spring crops are making satisfactory progress. Prices have fallen, and the numbers gratuitously fed and employed on relief works have decreased during the month of October, from 2,231,980 to 1,544,399, a fall of 30 per cent. Efficiency and economy have been secured by the shortening of the chain of administration, and the arrangements made by Your Lordship, in consultation with the Governor of Madras at the end of August, have been attended with success.

3. In Bombay a sufficiency of rain has fallen, but in Sholapore, Sattara, Kaladgi, Belgaum and Dharwar more than a sufficiency, which has caused some damage to the autumn and winter crops. At the date of the despatch improvement had been manifested in Sattara and Sholapore, and the general prospects of the crops continued to be good. Prices had fallen, and the numbers on relief works and on gratuitous relief had decreased in October from 382,742 to 198,924, a decrease of 48 per cent.

4. In Mysore moderate rain had fallen; the condition of the winter crops was good and the prospects of the spring crops favourable. Prices had fallen and the markets were sufficiently supplied. The Famine Code, drawn up by Mr. C. A. Elliot, is a compendium of instructions which will be of permanent value.

5. The statement of the mortality in and around Bangalore is a very melancholy record, but it is satisfactory to notice that the improvement in the season and the changes in the relief system had led to a large diminution in the number of deaths during the past month. The numbers gratuitously fed had fallen from 208,683 to 72,838, while the constant drafting from this class to that on the relief works had increased, the latter from 53,745 in the middle of September, to 78,478 on the 20th of October.

6. In Hyderabad the crops were in good condition, prices cheaper, and the relief operations closed.

7. In the Central Provinces there had been some loss of rice crop in Saugor, Dumah and Sambulpore on account of the deficient supply of rain in September. In the other districts the prospects of winter crops were good, and the preparations for the spring crops were in satisfactory progress.

8. In Rajputana and the Central Indian States the general situation was greatly improved by the rainfall in the middle of October. But there were parts, principally in Marwar, in which the autumn crops had not been saved and where spring crops never grow; for the relief of emigrants from these parts into Ajmere, railway work had been provided. Similar relief employment had been arranged for immigrants into the Western States of Central India. I note with pleasure that His Highness the Maharajah Scindiah had opened relief houses on the Indore road as far as Scepree.

9. In the North-West Provinces, the Punjab and Oude, preparations for the spring crops were in active progress and prices had fallen. In the Punjab no necessity for special relief works had been suggested, and in the North-West Provinces all schemes for extensive works had been abandoned. In Bengal, Assam and British Burmah the crop prospects were very favourable.

10. I am glad to understand that, in the opinion of Doctors Lewis and Cunningham, the fevers prevalent in Bombay in 1876 were of the ordinary "intermittent" and "continued" types, and were not "famine" fevers, and that during the same period in Madras, fever, far from being exceptionally severe was decidedly in abeyance.

11. I approve, in conclusion, of the resolution of Your Excellency in Council to have a partial counting of the people in the distressed districts of Madras as soon as the famine is over, in order approximately to ascertain what the loss of the population may have been.

WEEKLY CONDITION REPORT OF THE DISTRESSED DISTRICTS OF THE MYSORE PROVINCE.

PROVINCE OF MYSORE.
(No. 49).

Special Famine Report for the Week ending 12th January 1878.

Statement No. 49, regarding Famine Relief operations in the Province of Mysore for the Week ending the 12th January 1878.

The reports which have been received during the past week shew that the outturn of the crops which have been harvested or are in process of being harvested has not been equal to the expectations which were formed from the appearance of the fields earlier in the season. In North Kolar, where the Famine Commissioner has been lately on tour, the dry crops have been almost a total failure; in East Kolar, the return has not exceeded one-third of an average yield from the area sown, while in the Bangalore District, excepting the south-west portion, where prospects are fairly good, the estimate is only one-fourth. The area cultivated is also a good deal below the average. For the Tumkūr and Chitaldrug Districts, an estimate cannot yet be framed with so much certainty, but the accounts received warrant the conclusion that there too a serious deficiency may be expected. The irrigated area, which is larger than usual this year, will do something to supplement deficiencies, but its total produce is not a very large factor in the calculation. Under these circumstances, the Famine Commissioner has considered it necessary to call for statistical returns from each taluk, shewing the area and estimated or ascertained yield of the present harvest, and to ask the opinions of the District Officers regarding the sufficiency of the food supply and the probability of distress, or famine, having again to be met. As a precautionary measure, pending replies to these inquiries, the Chief Engineer is considering a scheme of useful public works which can be immediately opened in case relief be required. Were this an ordinary year, probably the circumstances of the season are such as could be dealt with by a liberal treatment of the revenue demand and an extension of the ordinary public works; but preceded as this year has been by a period of severe famine, the partial loss of the early harvest calls for the utmost watchfulness, since the strain the Province has passed through makes it hardly possible that people so recently dependent upon Government for the means of livelihood will be able to live under prolonged high prices without that aid.

2. The unfavorable turn in prices, noticed in last report, has become more marked and general this week. Rice has fallen, taking the Province generally, by about half a seer, an ragi by rather more, and there is no country ragi in the market. The imports by rail again increased and amounted to 1,743 tons, or 161 tons more than in the preceding week. The quantity exported, by the octroi returns, was 690 tons, or the same as last week, the largest export being to the Tûmkûr District.

3. The number of Civil Relief Works has been reduced to seven, employing 4,409 laborers, a decrease of 660, accounted for by the exclusion of the Kadur and Shimoga Districts from relief operations. More than half these laborers are on one road in Tûmkûr, and here the numbers have increased.

4. Under the Department Public Works, 42,070 laborers were employed, or 2,357 less than in the week previous. The decrease is due to persons leaving the State Railway, partly because task work is more rigidly exacted, partly because the portion of the line near Bangalore is almost completed, and persons who live in the town, and will not leave their houses to follow the work as it is pushed on further, are dropping off. So far the decrease is not to be regretted. On the other hand, numbers are increasing in the Tûmkûr District. The following is a list of the more important works :—

5. Thirty-four relief camps were kept open, and in these 5,856 infirm and sick were fed, giving a decrease of 1,124. There were 1,125 new admissions: 3,264 were allowed to return to their homes, with a grant of money to start them in life, and 195 were drafted to relief works. The following statement shews the daily average number relieved in each district and the cost per head :—

WEEKLY CONDITION REPORT OF THE DISTRESSED DISTRICTS OF THE
MYSORE PROVINCES.

PROVINCE OF MYSORE.

(No. 50.)

Special Famine Report for the Week ending 19th January 1878.

Statement No. 50, regarding Famine Relief Operations in the Province of Mysore, for the Week ending the 19th January 1878.

There has been no change in prospects since the date of last Report. The tur and ballar are in flower again, and though again attacked by caterpillars, it is to a less degree than formerly. The harvesting of the dry crops is nearly completed, and the threshing of the ragi has commenced. The returns called for, as noted last week, will give a fairly correct idea of the out-turn, and the Census being over, officers are now more at liberty to move about their charges and report any change in the condition of the people. It will depend upon these returns and reports where and how soon Relief Works should be opened. Just at present there is a lull. Prices are very unsteady, but the tendency to rise is not so marked, and the threshing out of the ragi may produce a slight change for the better. Field labor is still in demand. The pressure upon Government Relief is consequently less, and, except for the pauper classes, there need be no apprehension that assistance will be needed for some little time. The desire of people in Relief Camps and on Works to re-visit their villages has been very strong, and the Mansion House Money has enabled them in many cases to effect their wish and to ascertain for themselves what their means of livelihood are likely to be: but recent reports go to shew that the villages will not be able to support these people for any length of time, and that the hope of winding up the Famine must be deferred. The difficulty of appreciating the real state of the Districts is increased by the great ravages of fever. Throughout the cold season, the prevalency of fever has been noticed, and that the Relief Officers had themselves severely suffered. The mortality from this cause in some parts is now reported to be alarming, and to be more severe than even cholera. Crops lie unharvested and lands unploughed, because whole families are prostrated by this epidemic.

2. Imports of grain by rail amounted to 1,623 tons, or 115 tons less than for the week previous. The Octroyi returns shew 470 tons, or 220 tons less, exported from Bangalore to points in the interior.

3. The number of laborers employed on the seven Civil Relief Works still open was 4,147, or a decrease of 262. The decrease has been in Chitaldrug, where some works have been closed and one Civil gang transferred to the Public Works Department: in the Hussan and Tunkur Districts, the number again slightly increased.

4. Under the Department Public Works, 38,050 were employed, or 4,020 less than in the previous week. The falling off has been general throughout the Province except in the Tunkur District, where the numbers have kept nearly stationary. The decrease of wage, the insistence upon a better out-turn of work, the rumour of a distribution of charitable funds in the villages, and the easier circumstances following upon the reaping of such crops as have been got, have all helped to produce this result. Hitherto this decline has been matter of congratulation, but under the somewhat changed prospects, the people would probably shew a wiser discretion were they to remain on the works.

The following is a list of the more important works:—

No	District.	Name of Work.	Number employed.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS
FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 29th JANUARY 1878.

GENERAL REMARKS.—In Madras rain is reported from South Arcot, Chingleput, Tanjore, Trichinopoly, Madura, Coimbatore, and the Nilgiris: the harvest is progressing in most districts with a moderate outturn. The total number on works is 145,693, and on gratuitous relief 181,060: the former is 844 more and the latter 10,581 less than last week. In Mysore there has been no rain: the harvesting of dry crops continues, with an indifferent outturn in the eastern districts; prospects are not so good as was anticipated. The number on works for the week ending the 26th January was 42,197, and on gratuitous relief 6,408, a decrease of 4,282 and 1,150 on the figures of the previous week. In Bombay slight showers are reported from Sind and Broach: the reaping of the rabi is progressing. In the Central Provinces there has been no rain: it is however cloudy in many districts; prospects are good. In Berar the rabi is progressing favourably. Slight rain has fallen in Central India, where prospects are good. In Rajputana rain is reported from Jodhpore, Ajmere, Jeypore and Ulwar: the crops promise well. In Bengal rain has fallen in most districts of Behar, parts of the Bhágálpur division, Dinagepore, Jalpaiguri, and parts of Orissa; the rabi generally promises well. In Assam there has been a little rain: prospects are good. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh rain has fallen in almost all districts: the rabi is generally thriving, but fine weather is now required. More or less rain is also reported from every district in the Punjab, and prospects throughout the province are good.

Southal Pergunnahs ...	Nil	Weather fine, getting warm; no change in the state and prospects of the crops since last report; exportation of rice is active.

Presidency or Province and District.	Rainfall for week preceding.	State of agricultural prospects.
Bengal—continued.
Bhāgalpur ...	1.20	Weather clear and cold; the prospects of the rabi crops are good, but more rain is wanted, especially in the Soopda sub-division; prices of food-grains are still rising, owing to large exportations up-country by rail; general health is good.
Monghyr ...	0.54	Weather seasonable; state and prospects of the crops are good.
Purneah ...	0.39	Weather clear and cool; the prospects of the rabi crops still continue good, but more rain would be beneficial, particularly to the south of the district; toor i is being plucked.
Maldah ...	Nil	Weather fair; the ba o paddy plants are being transplanted, and in some places irrigated; the haimanti paddy and rabi crops are being reaped; fever of the malarious type is raging fearfully in some places.
Durbhunga ...	0.77	Weather clear and sometimes cloudy; the prospects of the rabi crops are fair; prices are still rising owing to exportation; public health is good.
Mozufferpore ...	1.27	Weather seasonable and cold; the rabi crops are doing well; prices of food-grains are stationary.
Sarun ...	Nil	Weather seasonable; west wind prevailing; the prospects of the rabi crops continue fair; no more rain is wanted; mustard is in seed; poppy is in flower; prices have fallen; public health is good.
Champaran ...	0.58	Weather seasonable; the prospects of the crops continue favourable; unportation of makai from Tirhoot continues; prices are stationary; public health is good.
Patna ...	0.35	Weather seasonably cold; the harvesting of the rice crop is almost completed; prospects of the rabi crops continue good; health is good.
Gya ...	Nil	Sky clear and weather cool; maximum thermometer in the shade 78°20; peas and mustard are being reaped generally; in Jehanabad the rabi requires no more rain; in Nowada the crops are everywhere excellent; but in Aurungabad it is reported that the linseed, pulse, and peas have suffered damage from the late heavy rains.
Shahabad ...	0.60	Weather clear, and cloudy occasionally; the rabi crops continue promising owing to the late rains; peas and gram are ripening; prices have risen.
Hazāribāgh ...	Nil	Weather warmer than in the preceding week; state and prospects of the crops remain unchanged.
Lohardugga ...	Nil.	The prospects of the rabi crops are good; public health is good.
	except a shower in one police circle in the extreme south.
Manbhoom ...	Nil	Weather very warm, and all signs of rain have disappeared; the prospects of the mohra crop depend upon rain now, and more a month hence, if rain does not fall a failure of the crop is apprehended, and consequent distress amongst the labouring classes and the poorer agriculturists in parts of the district; cholera is reported to have made its appearance in Raipur in the south of the district.
Singbhoom ...	Nil	Weather seasonable; nothing to report about the crops; the district is healthy.
Balasore ...	Nil	Weather warm for the season; the rabi crops are doing well, and in some places being reaped, fever is still prevalent in the north; otherwise the public health is good.
Cuttack ...	A heavy shower at Jajpore on the 22nd.	Mornings cloudy; weather hot in the day time; no change about the crops and public health since last report.
Pooree ...	Nil Kiencha 0.07	Weather warm for the season; sirad rice is being harvested; the crop is deficient; mustard, urhar and sugarcane are being cut; moong and kaldi promise well; the tobacco crop is likely to be a good one; the dalia rice plants are looking well in low lands, but on the uplands are suffering for want of rain; the mandia crop in the salt tracts is suffering severely for the same reason; the loss of the sirad rice crop on the sea coast tracts to the north-east of Pooree has been considerable; common rice is selling from 13½ to 21 seers per rupee; export by the Chilka Lake and by road to the Madras Presidency has increased; there is shipping waiting in the port of Pooree for rice; cholera is reported from some places.
General Remarks.—Rain has fallen in most districts of Behar and in Dinagepore, Darjeeling, and Jalpaiguri; there has been a heavy shower at Jajpore and a slight one at Khorda, and also in the extreme south of Lohardugga; the general prospects of the cold-weather and other standing crops are favourable, but rain is wanted for the upland dalia rice and mandia crop in Pooree and for the mohra crop in Manbhoom; some of the cold-weather crops in the Aurungabad sub-division of Gya are said to have been damaged by the late rains, and the sirad rice harvest in Pooree is deficient; prices have risen and are still rising in several districts owing to exportation; the public health seems to have improved everywhere except in parts of Burdwan and Moorshedabad; in Maldah, malarious fever is prevalent in some places. their contributions on their annuities at half the rates levied from subscribers in the service on their allowances, secure to their families, on the same conditions as above, in the first case three-quarters, in the second one-half, and in the third one-quarter of the amount of pensions and other allowances granted to the family of a subscriber dying in the service, or of an annuitant who has made up, on retirement, the full amount of Rs. 25,000.

With reference to the amendment of this Rule, the Financial Secretary to the Government of India demiofficially enquired whether the proceedings of the Fund go regularly to the Secretary of State and, if so, through what channel, and remarked that the amendment would require the sanction of the Secretary of State. Under the Managers' orders Mr. Chapman was informed that the Fund has no communication with the Secretary of State. In regard to the matter of sanction, it was pointed out that there had apparently been some misapprehension as to the rights of the subscribers to the Civil Fund, and that they had probably been confounded with the members of the Annuity Fund.

Subsequently, the following official correspondence passed between the Government of India and the Managers:—

No. 3441.

To

THE SECRETARY TO THE BENGAL CIVIL FUND.

SIR,

I AM directed by His Excellency the Viceroy in Council to request that six copies of the proceedings of the General Meeting of the subscribers to the Bengal Civil Fund, held on the 30th July 1877, may be forwarded for the information of the Government of India and transmission to the Secretary of State for India.

2. I am also to request that in future six copies of the proceedings of all General and Special Meetings of the subscribers to the fund may be forwarded to the Government of India for the same purpose.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT,
SILHIA ;

The 29th September 1877.

I have the honor to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient servant,

E. J. SINKINSON,

Offg. Under Secy. to the Govt. of India.

To

THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA,

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

SIR,

I HAVE the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter No. 3441 of 29th September last.

2. In accordance with the request contained in your first paragraph, the Managers have the pleasure of forwarding six copies of the proceedings of the General Meeting of 30th July last, already published in the Gazette of India (Part III, dated 25th August 1877), page 64 as required by Rule XVI.

3. The present Managers will also, I am directed to say, have pleasure in supplying in the same form information as to the published proceedings of General Meetings of the Fund held during their tenure of office, if the supply of such information will be of service to Government; but they desire me to say that they cannot undertake in any way to bind their successors or the subscribers to the Fund, as the supply of information to Government in this form does not appear to be contemplated by the rules of the Fund.

I have the honor to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient servant,

COLMAN MACAULAY,

Secretary.

CIVIL FUND OFFICE.

The 3rd January 1878.

4. The Managers submit for the consideration of the Meeting the case of Mr. R. Evans.

Under article eight of the Rules, subscribers who resign the service and wish to secure to their widows and children the full, three-quarters, half, or one-fourth benefits of the Fund, must, on retirement, make up their subscription balance to Rs. 25,000, 18,750, 12,500 or Rs. 6,250, as the case may be, and must continue their contributions on their annuities at half the rates levied from subscribers in the service. Mr. Evans resigned the service from 1st March 1877. On the 24th April last he was informed that he must at once pay Rs. 4,433-0-10 if he desired to retain an interest in the Fund by making up his balance to the sum of Rs. 6,250. He is anxious to keep up his interest, and he urges the three following circumstances which made it impossible for him to pay the money at the time specified:—(1) During his term of service, extending from 1867 to 1877, he never got beyond the grade of Assistant Magistrate at Rs. 500 a month. (2) When compelled to take leave on medical certificate in 1876, he had not completed the three years' residence after return from previous leave necessary to entitle him to the ordinary furlough allowance of £500. Instead of £500 per annum for two years, he could only claim £300 for one year. (3) His health was so bad when he returned home that he could neither raise money by insuring his life, nor increase his income by obtaining employment. Mr. Evans states that he will be prepared to pay the amount, with any fine that may be imposed within a fortnight after the decision of the subscribers is intimated to him.

The Managers recommend Mr. Evans' application to the favourable consideration of the Meeting.

5. In accordance with the request of the Managers, Mr. E. F. Harrison has been in personal communication with the Actuary regarding the valuation of the assets and liabilities of the Fund. He reports that it would be impossible to place the inquiry in the hands of any one more capable of doing justice to it than Mr. Hardy. Mr. Harrison was to have had a further interview with Mr. Hardy in December, and the Managers have thought it advisable to await the result of his projected visit before taking any further steps regarding the valuation.

6. The accounts of the past year 1876-77 are submitted.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 31st January 1878, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 2 of 1878.

A Bill to assimilate certain powers of the Local Governments of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

WHEREAS the Lieutenant-Governorship of the North-Western Provinces and the Chief Commissionership of Oudh are now united under the administration of a single officer; and whereas it is expedient that, so long as such union continues, the powers of the Local Government of Oudh under the enactments hereinafter mentioned should resemble the powers of the Local Government of the North-Western Provinces under the same or like enactments; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. In the Oudh Rent Act, 1868, sections 29, 85, 87 and 91, the following words shall be omitted (namely): “with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council,” “subject to any orders that may from time to time be issued by the Governor General in Council,” “subject to any orders in this behalf that may from time to time be made by the Governor General of India in Council,” and “with the sanction of the Governor General of India in Council.”

2. For the first sentence of section 6 of the Prisons Act, 1870, the following shall be substituted (namely)—“An Inspector General of Prisons shall be appointed in the North-Western Provinces, the Panjáb and Oudh by the Local Government, and in the Central Provinces and British Burma by the Governor General in Council.”

3. In the Oudh Land-Revenue Act, 1876, section 4, the following words shall be omitted in both the places in which they occur (namely)—“subject to such rules as the Governor General in Council may from time to time prescribe in this behalf;” and in sections 7 and 9 of the same Act the following words shall be omitted (namely), “subject to such rules as the Governor General in Council from time to time prescribes in this behalf;” and in sections 14, 19, 20, 51, 183, 212 and 220 of the same Act, the following words shall be omitted (namely)—“with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.”

To section 43 of the same Act the following words shall be added (namely)—“provided that in the case of settlements of individual maháls or parts of maháls, undertaken at other times than at the general settlement and sanctioned by the Chief Commissioner, such confirmation shall not be necessary.”

4. In the first clause of the Oudh Laws Act, 1876, section 39, the following words shall be omitted (namely): “with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.”

5. For the purpose of the Prisoners Act, 1871, sections 30 and 31, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh shall be deemed to be subject to the same Local Government.

6. This Act shall come into force on the passing thereof, and shall continue in force until the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, otherwise directs.

Modification of Act V of 1871, sections 30 and 31.

Commencement and continuance of this Act.

Alteration of Act XXVI of 1870, section 6.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Oudh having been placed under the control of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, it has become desirable, for administrative purposes, to assimilate certain powers of the Chief Commissioner in Oudh under the Rent Act, the Revenue Act and the Laws Act to the powers that, as Lieutenant-Governor, he exercises in the North-Western Provinces under Acts dealing with like subjects. This Bill has been framed to effect the assimilation, and no change whatever is contemplated in the distinctive features of the Oudh administration, and still less in any of the rights or privileges of any class or classes of person in Oudh, which have been guaranteed by the Government of India either in Acts of the legislature or by established practice.

For the purpose of removing prisoners from one jail to another or to a lunatic asylum, it is convenient that, under present circumstances, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh should be treated as forming one Local Government. The Bill contains a provision to this effect.

The proposed law is intended to continue in force only so long as the union of the two Provinces under the same Head continues.

TREASURE-TROVE BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR EDWARD BAYLEY presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to Treasure-trove. He said the report of the Committee would, he thought, explain itself. It would be observed that they had received a very large number of communications on this Bill, and its provisions had been, considering its importance, the subject of a very unusual amount of criticism. The result had been that considerable changes had been made. It would be seen that no substantial change had been made in the policy of the Bill, but the wording of it had been very considerably altered, with the effect, he hoped, of making it a practical working measure. There being no real change in the policy of the Bill or in any of its substantial provisions, the Committee did not think it necessary to recommend that it should be republished, and he therefore now presented the report, and hoped that it would be shortly taken into consideration by the Council.

ASSIMILATION OF POWERS (NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES AND OUDH) BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR EDWARD BAYLEY also introduced the Bill to assimilate certain powers of the Local Governments of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Messrs. Stokes and Colvin, the Hon'ble Sir Shamsheerparkáish the Rájá of Sirmur and the Mover. He had before explained to the Council that this Bill was really little more than a technical measure. It affected altogether four Acts, the Oudh Rent Act, the Oudh Land Revenue Act, the Oudh Laws Act and the Prisons' Act. The Oudh Rent Act was affected in four of its sections. By section 29 of that Act, the Chief Commissioner of Oudh was allowed to make rules for the guidance of Settlement-officers with the sanction of the Governor General in Council. As Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, he could make such rules without the sanction of the Governor General in Council. By section 85 of the same Act, the Chief Commissioner of Oudh was empowered to declare to which of the first three grades of Courts the Court of any Assistant Commissioner shall belong, and to invest any tahsildár with the powers of any of the same grades of Courts, but this also only with the sanction of the Governor General in Council. By section 87, he was empowered, subject to the orders of the Governor General in Council, to invest any officer who was making or revising settlements with the powers of a Collector, or of a Deputy Collector, or of an Assistant Collector, and so on. And by section 91, whenever the state of public business required it, the Chief Commissioner might vest a Deputy Collector with the powers of a Collector for the trial and determination of suits under the Act, but this also only with the authority of the Governor General in Council.

Under the Oudh Revenue Act, similarly, by section 4, the appointment of Commissioners was to be subject to the rules which the Governor General in Council might prescribe. By sections 7 and 9 of the same Act, there were similar limitations as to the powers which the Chief Commissioner might confer on Assistant Commissioners in charge of districts, and also to certain other powers which he might confer on certain persons either by name or by official classes or by official titles; and in section 14 and following sections of chapter III of the same Act, as well as in sections 183, 212 and 222, there were a number of similar limitations to the powers of the Chief Commissioner in Oudh; and in section 43 of the same Act, to the power given to the Chief Commissioner to confirm finally certain minor settlements made from time to time of small portions of the land-revenue.

Again, under the Oudh Laws Act, section 39, the Chief Commissioner was empowered to make subsidiary rules as to the discipline and remuneration of the Village and Road Police, the disposal of unclaimed property, public health and conservancy at fairs and other public assemblies, and for imposing municipal taxes for those purposes; as to the manner of keeping records, the appointment and dismissal of ministerial officers other than those employed in the Civil Courts, and the extent of land in respect of which a proprietor or under-proprietor was to be held to be a tenant with a right of occupancy. All these powers were subject to limitations by which they could only be exercised under the orders or subject to the control of the Governor General in Council.

In all these cases similar powers were exercised by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces without such limitations, and the limitations moreover had been found to create delay and inconvenience in the working of the administration.

Similarly, in the Prisons' Act, which was a general Act, not confined to the Province of Oudh, power had been taken for the Chief Commissioner himself to appoint an Inspector General of Prisons without sanction from the Government of India, and the Chief Commissioner was declared to be a Local Government within the definition of the Act.

This explanation would show to the Council the correctness of what he had said on a former occasion, namely, that the alterations to be effected by the Bill were purely technical and for the purpose of facilitating the administration, and would in no respect interfere with any peculiar custom or substantive law now in force in Oudh, but would merely give the Lieutenant-Governor in Oudh precisely the same powers in regard to the ordinary duties of administration as he possessed in the North-Western Provinces.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR EDWARD BAYLEY then moved that the Bill be published in the Government Gazette, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, in English and in such other languages as the Local Government thinks fit.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

DISTRESSED SEAMEN'S EXPENSES RECOVERY BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STOKES presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for the recovery in British India of wages due to, and expenses incurred in respect of, certain seamen and apprentices.

NORTHERN INDIA LICENSE BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the licensing of trades and dealings in the Panjáb, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

ADDITIONAL RATES (NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES) BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY also presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the levy of Additional Rates on Land in the North-Western Provinces.

ADDITIONAL RATES (OUDH) BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY also presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the levy of Additional Rates on Land in Oudh.

ADDITIONAL RATES (PANJÁB) BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY also presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the levy of Additional Rates on Land in the Panjáb.

ADDITIONAL RATES (CENTRAL PROVINCES) BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY then asked leave to postpone the presentation of the report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the levy of Additional Rates on Land in the Central Provinces, which the Committee had not yet been able to dispose of. As there was no motion now before the Council, it would be irregular if he were to make any remarks on the subject of these Bills. But with His Excellency the President's permission, he might be allowed to say that he hoped, at the meeting of the Council next week, to be permitted to move that the reports of the Select Committee on these Bills be taken into consideration, and then also to move that the Bills be finally disposed of.

Leave was granted.

STAMPS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. COCKERELL moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Morgan be added to the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Stamps and Court-fees.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Wednesday, the 6th February 1878.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.
PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

WILD HERBS, &c., USED AS FOOD IN THE KALADGI DISTRICT OF THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY DURING THE FAMINE.

Descriptive notes by Mr. James MacNabb Campbell, of the Bombay Civil Service, and remarks thereon by Dr. Wellington Gray, Professor of Botany, Grant Medical College, Bombay.

CLASS. I.

EATEN IN ALL SEASONS.

A climbing creeper, with white flowers. A favourite vegetable in all seasons, and said to be perfectly wholesome.

Remark by Mr. W. Gray.—No. 1 appears to be the leaf of an Asclepiad, possibly of Cosmostigma acuminatum. Its identity is, however, too doubtful to admit of my venturing any remarks as to the properties or uses of the specimen.

No. 2.

(S.) Chāgeri.(M.) Mābli.(K.) Mābli, Nyābali.(H.) Nyābali.

A plant about two feet high, with a white flower and small round fruit. Is used, in ordinary years, both as a vegetable and as a medicine. As a vegetable, the leaves are boiled and mixed with pulse. As a medicine, in cases of fever the juice is poured into the ear. It is not eaten by animals. As a vegetable, if taken in large quantities, this plant is said to cause diarrhoea.

Remark by Mr. Gray.—No. 2 is a leaf of Gynandropsis pentaphylla, a plant of the natural order Capparideæ; it is a common annual weed, and no doubt possesses, like many other species of the same order, antiscorbutic properties. The leaves are eaten as a vegetable, and bruised when fresh are applied as a counter-irritant in inflammations. The seeds are used as a substitute for mustard. As regards Mr. Campbell's statement, that the vegetable when eaten in large quantities causes diarrhœa, I cannot speak with any degree of certainty.

(H.) Gorji.

A plant, about six inches high, with a white flower. The leaves are at all times a favourite vegetable. It is not used as a medicine, and is eaten by cattle. Though in common use as a vegetable, this plant is said to be unsafe, except in small quantities, bringing on diarrhœa.

Remark by Mr. Gray.—No. 3 is Amblogyna polygonoides, belonging to the natural order Amarantaceæ, and a very common weed in cultivated ground. It is much used as a pot-herb, and reckoned exceedingly wholesome. So far as I am aware, it does not bring on diarrhœa.

(H.) Negli.

A low-growing plant, with a small yellow flower and round thorny fruit. Is used, in ordinary years, both as a vegetable and as a medicine. As a vegetable, the young leaves are eaten with salt, chillies and other condiments. As a medicine, the fruit is used as a tonic in cases of fever. The older stems and leaves are gathered as fodder for cattle. As a vegetable, this plant is said to be pleasant to the taste and perfectly wholesome.

Remark by Mr. Gray.—No. 4 is Polygala chinensis—natural order Polygaleæ. It grows in most parts of the Deccan. Mr. Campbell's remarks as regards its uses are, as far as I know, correct.

No. 5.

(H.) Nuch Ghol.

A small plant, with a light-coloured flower. Is, in ordinary years, eaten by people of all classes. As a vegetable, the leaves are boiled and eaten with condiments. It is not used as a medicine, nor as fodder for cattle. As a vegetable, it is said to be bitter to the taste, but safe and wholesome.

Remark by Mr. Gray.—No. 5 is Portulaca quadrifida, of the natural order Portulacaceæ, and a common annual weed in many parts of the Bombay Presidency. It is ordinarily used as a vegetable.

No. 6.

(S.) Madhuvrita.

(K.) Dod Goli.

(H.) Badi Ghol.

A low-growing plant, with white flowers, whose young leaves are at all times a favourite vegetable. It is not used as a medicine, nor as fodder for cattle. As a vegetable, though wholesome in moderation, if taken in large quantities this plant is said to cause diarrhœa.

Remark by Mr. Gray.—No. 6 is Portulaca oleracea, better known perhaps as Purslane, a widely-distributed plant. It is cultivated in Western India as a pot-herb, and possesses antiscorbutic properties.

No. 7.

(M.)

(K.) Ilikivi.

(H.) Chivikikân.

A creeper, with a green-coloured flower. A favourite vegetable, used at all times, and said to be perfectly wholesome.

Remark by Mr. Gray.—No. 7 is probably Tylophora mollissima, of the natural order Asclepiadeæ. Its identity is also doubtful.

No. 8.

(S.) Pithâri.

(H.) Fatarsoi.

A low-growing plant, with rose-coloured flowers. The leaf is eaten, in ordinary years, as a vegetable. In medicine, it is used as a remedy for fever. Cattle do not eat it. As a vegetable, it is said to be perfectly wholesome.

Remark by Mr. Gray.—No. 8 is a leaf of Glossocardia boswellia, a small annual plant of the natural order Compositæ, and a rather common weed in dry ground. With regard to its use as a vegetable, I am unable to speak from personal experience. It is said to be employed medicinally in certain diseases of women.

No. 9.

(S.) Tashta.

(H.) Tarota.

A small bush, growing to about two feet high, with yellow flowers and pods. The young leaves are at all times a favourite vegetable. It is not used as a medicine, or as fodder for cattle. The seed yields a blue dye. As a vegetable, it is said to be pleasant to the taste and wholesome.

Remark by Mr. Gray.—No. 9 is the leaf of a leguminous plant—Cassia Tora. This is an exceedingly abundant annual in grass lands throughout the Deccan. Mr. Campbell's remarks on the plant are correct.

No. 10.

(M.)

(H.) Dágadi.

A creeper, with no marked flower or fruit. The leaves are, in ordinary seasons, eaten by the poor. It is not used as a medicine, and is given to milch cows, to increase their yield of milk. As a vegetable, this plant is said to be perfectly wholesome.

Remark by Mr. Gray.—No. 10 is Coccyllus villosus, a slender climbing plant, found in nearly every part of Western India, and belonging to the natural order Menispermaceæ. A decoction of the fresh root is given as an alterative in cases of rheumatism and syphilis. The leaves, rubbed up with water, form a jelly, which is also taken for the same diseases. I am not aware that the plant is used simply as a vegetable, but the leaves are eaten as such by persons who are undergoing a course of the root decoction. Goats and cattle feed on it.

EATEN IN TIMES OF FAMINE.

No. 1.

(S.) Aml.

(H.) Aml.

The leaf of the tamarind tree, in ordinary years, is not eaten as a vegetable, or used as a medicine. Cattle eat it. At present it is used as a vegetable. But it is said to be unwholesome, and, even when taken in small quantities, to have a weakening effect.

Remark by Mr. Gray.—No. 1 is a leaf of the tamarind. The pounded seeds of this tree are commonly eaten in seasons of scarcity, and were largely consumed by the people during the late famine. It is highly probable that the leaves produce the effects mentioned by Mr. Campbell.

(S.) Jillika.

(H.) Bada Gokaru.

A low-growing plant, with yellow flowers, not eaten as a vegetable in ordinary years. As a medicine, it is used in cases of colic; and its juice is said to be strong enough to stupify a scorpion. Cattle eat it. The leaves are at present used as a vegetable by the poorer classes. They are said to be unwholesome, and, if taken in any large quantities, to cause diarrhoea.

Remark by Mr. Gray.—No. 2 is Tribulus terrestris, a small creeping plant of the natural order Zygophylleæ. It is abundant in all Deccan pasture lands. As a medicine, it is said to be aperient and diuretic. Except in times of scarcity, it is seldom eaten as a vegetable. Judging from its harsh nature, I should imagine it to be very difficult of digestion.

A hill shrub, with no marked flower or fruit. In ordinary years, though not eaten as a vegetable, its juice, mixed with whey, is a common remedy in cases of diarrhoea. Cattle do not feed on it. At present the leaves are eaten by the poorer classes. They are said to have no unwholesome qualities.

Remark by Mr. Gray.—No. 3 is a leaf of Corchorus trilocularis, an annual plant of the natural order Tiliaceæ, and found in parts of the Deccan. I see no reason why this plant should not be used as a vegetable in ordinary as well as in famine seasons; it resembles in properties another species, C. olitorius, the well-known jute, which is much eaten in Western India as a pot-herb. Medicinally, it is, like the other members of the genus, possessed of demulcent properties.

No. 4.

(S.) Trin Gharmu.(M.) Gavat.(K.) Hitgoni.(H.) Hitgovi.

A somewhat broad fleshy-leaved grass, growing in clusters; is not, in ordinary years, used either as a vegetable or as a medicine. Cattle feed on it. During the past two months (June and July 1877), in places where the supply of wild herbs is scanty, this grass has formed a very common article of food. Used in this way, it is said to be unwholesome, causing dropsy and diarrhoea.

Remark by Mr. Gray.—No. 4 is Commelyna communis, of the natural order Commelynaceæ. It is a spreading weed—not a “grass,” as Mr. Campbell states—growing abundantly in moist grass lands in the Deccan. Cattle eat it. The dropsy and diarrhoea, said to result from its use as an article of food, may, with greater probability, be attributed to the previous reduced and scorbutic condition of the consumer. The same observation will apply to other unusual articles of diet, which are asserted to produce disease: these are not resorted to, as a means of sustaining life, till the people are already suffering from the results of chronic starvation and scurvy. The phenomena of such a condition of body are at once laid to the door of the strange diet, to which the people have hitherto been unaccustomed. No doubt, this food is sometimes more or less difficult of digestion, thus giving rise to diarrhoea and other bowel disorders. It cannot be doubted, however, that, in a large majority of cases, disease attributed to an unusual kind of food is, in reality, the result of starvation and the use of inferior kinds of ordinary food.

No. 5.

(S.) Vrindi.(M.) Bhui Taravad.(K.) Nalavari.(H.) Tarota.

A small creeping plant, with white flowers and fruit. In ordinary seasons its only use is as a cattle medicine in cases of colic. At present the leaves are eaten as a vegetable. It is very bitter to the taste, and is said to be unwholesome.

Remark by Mr. Gray.—No. 5 is the leaf of a species of Indigofera, probably I. trifoliata, of the natural order Leguminosæ. Its identity is doubtful however, and I am consequently unable to offer any decided opinion on Mr. Campbell's remarks. Many species of Indigofera are indigenous to Western India. Cattle eat I. enneaphyllia greedily, and the seeds of I. glandulosa, the commonest species of all, are eaten, as pulse, by the people in seasons of scarcity.

GENERAL REMARKS BY MR. GRAY.

I may take this opportunity of mentioning that, besides the plants noted above, there are numerous other indigenous species—herbs, shrubs, and trees—which afford sustenance to the poorer classes during periods of famine. About the end of last rainy season, Mr. Richey, the Collector of Dharwar, forwarded to me the dried fragments of between twenty and thirty kinds of herbaceous plants, which were said to have been used as food by the famine immigrants into his districts. These specimens are, however, so imperfect, and in many cases immature, that I have been unable to determine the botanical names of more than a few. Some are identical with Mr. Campbell's specimens; amongst the others there are several species of Amarantaceæ, an order which furnishes a considerable number of the pot-herbs which are ordinarily eaten by the people of this country. I also observe in Mr. Richey's collection Oxalis corniculata, a very common creeping plant; the leaf of an Alseasia, together with some examples of the natural orders Leguminosæ, Compositæ, and Urticaceæ.

I trust it will not be thought out of place if I here suggest the advisability of causing a complete collection to be formed of all the indigenous plants which were used as exceptional articles of diet by the lower classes who inhabit the districts affected by the late famine. When the plant is small and of convenient size, the dried specimen should consist of the entire leaf or shrub, with its flower and fruit. If large, a flowering branch, together with some of the fruit and seed, would be sufficient. Each should be accompanied by its native names; its area of distribution should, as far as possible, be ascertained; information should be given as to what districts it is most used in; the parts of the plant which are eaten; the classes who eat it; the effects it is said to produce; and whether it is ever employed medicinally. In fact, the full history of the plant and its uses should be furnished. The complete specimens carefully gathered and dried can, then, be easily identified botanically, and any particulars of scientific interest they may possess added. With their histories detailed as above suggested, the entire collection would form a standard famine herbarium for present or future reference; and the value of such a collection it would be difficult to over-estimate.

Tragic.—The grain traffic has been almost all this month, caused chiefly by the want of good covered boats for the protection of perishable cargoes during this season of the year. The risk of sending grain in open boats is considered too

APPOINTMENT OF A COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE CERTAIN QUESTIONS CONNECTED WITH FAMINE RELIEF ADMINISTRATION.

No. 2 (Revenue), dated India Office, London, the 10th January 1878.

From—Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India,

To—His Excellency the Right Honourable the Governor General of India in Council.

MY LORD,

Para. 1. I have, on more than one occasion, expressed to your Excellency on behalf of Her Majesty's Government, their sense of the ability and devotion with which you and the officers serving under you have exerted yourselves to mitigate the calamities of the recent famine. The intensity of the visitation, the vast region which has been affected, the imperfect means of communication, the passive character of the population, the peculiarity of the languages, and the consequent loss of the services of many of the most competent and most trusted officers who, in the north of India, would have been available, have all contributed to impose a task of almost unexampled difficulty on the Governments whose duty it became to save the people from starvation. The energy and the unsparing labour with which, during so many months the Governors of the afflicted provinces, and the officers acting under their authority, devoted themselves to their arduous duties, are worthy of the highest commendation.

2. Your own personal interposition at the more critical period of the famine rendered assistance of the utmost value to the local authorities, not only of Madras, but still more of Mysore, in organizing an efficient and economical system of relief, and your exertions probably bore fruit in a great saving of human life.

3. It is not easy to ascertain with precision in what cases these praiseworthy efforts were rewarded with complete success, or how far they were defeated. The evidence which has been offered upon this subject is conflicting, and is evidently based more upon estimate than upon accurate knowledge. Scientific questions of much interest have been in issue in respect to the operations of relief, and have probably coloured some of the extreme views which have been expressed upon this point. The simultaneous appearance of epidemic diseases, especially of cholera in a visitation of unusual severity, has lent an additional and formidable element of uncertainty to the information we possess in respect to the famine mortality of the past year; for it appears that deaths from cholera and from want are often attended by symptoms sufficiently similar to mislead an untrained observer. At the same time the datum from which all calculations of increased mortality must proceed is in a great measure wanting. The registration of deaths in Southern India is of recent introduction; and a comparison of the alleged proportion of mortality to population during the last few years with the known mortality of healthier countries is sufficient to show that the registration has been very imperfect, and that the number of deaths in those years must have been seriously understated. Where the normal mortality is not certainly known, it is hopeless to attempt to calculate the amount of an abnormal increase; and as the organization for famine relief would cause a more careful observation of mortality, it cannot be assumed that the causes of error which have vitiated the statistics of ordinary years would operate with equal force on the year of famine.

4. I am not of opinion that any useful result would be obtained by instituting a special enquiry into this point, even if there were the slightest hope that trustworthy statistics could be collected as to the mortality due to famine alone. There seems to be little doubt that it was almost, if not entirely averted in Bombay, and that it has been terribly severe in Mysore. I have more than once joined with your Excellency in recognizing the wisdom of the principles on which the Bombay Government acted, and the vigour with which they were carried out; and I fear that my concurrence cannot be withheld from the unfavourable notice taken by your Excellency of the management of some of the officers who were responsible in Mysore during the earlier period of the famine. The brunt of the calamity fell upon Madras, and in this Presidency the success of the efforts made to combat it must, from the causes to which I have adverted, remain in great uncertainty. But no uncertainty exists as to the unflagging and self-sacrificing energy with which the Duke of Buckingham and all the officers under his authority applied themselves to the discharge of their tremendous responsibilities. Nor were these exertions confined to those who belonged to the administration of the Presidency. I have already had occasion to record my acknowledgments, which I now gladly renew, of the conspicuous and enlightened services, rendered in dealing with the famine difficulties of Madras, during the earlier period by Sir Richard Temple, during the later period by Major-General Sir M. Kennedy.

5. There are other questions, however, which have been raised in connection with this famine which cannot properly be dismissed without further investigation. Some points in the actual administration of relief were during the past few months the subject of warm controversy, while some others, which have reference either to the prevention of future famines or to the mitigation of the sufferings they cause, are still anxiously debated. It is desirable that the opportunity should not be lost of investigating these by the light of the experience which has been recently acquired. It must be for some time doubtful how far the meteorological phenomena of the last twelve years are to be taken as a fair sample of the climate of India. But in any case it is evident that the protection of the people of India from the effects of the uncertainty of the seasons will constitute in the future no inconsiderable portion of the work of the Government. It is, therefore, a duty to collect with the utmost care all information which may assist future administrators in the task of limiting the range or mitigating the intensity of those calamities.

6. A Commission, constituted of three or five of the most competent persons your Excellency is able to select, will be the most suitable instrument for conducting this investigation. It should consist of men who have not taken any active part in the labours or controversies of the past year, and it is desirable that it should include at least one Native Commissioner. It should enter upon its labours as soon as the local authorities have been released by the return of normal conditions from the pressing duties of relief.

7. I will indicate some of the points upon which difference of opinion has arisen, and in respect to which, therefore, the collection of evidence, and the expression of an independent and authoritative opinion would be valuable. But in doing so, I must not be understood to be limiting the scope of any inquiries which the Commission under your instructions may think it desirable to pursue.

8. One of the earliest points upon which discussion arose was the size and class of relief works which it was expedient to encourage. At the outset of the famine Sir Philip Wodehouse came to the conclusion that a few large works, giving employment to considerable numbers of men, and conducted under the officers of the Public Works Department, were preferable to a multitude of petty village works, conducted under the revenue officers of each district. In the first instance the Government of India, not having fully before it evidence of the aggravated character of the scarcity, declined to authorize the larger works to the extent which Sir Philip Wodehouse had desired. Shortly after this decision, your Excellency, on returning from the frontier, and Sir John Strachey, arriving from England, had the opportunity of conferring at Bombay with the Government of that Presidency, and the result of your inquiries was to lead you to accept substantially Sir P. Wodehouse's view, and to give your preference to the system of large works. In other parts of India during the remaining period of the famine you insisted upon this view, and one of the reasons which led you to visit the famine districts in Madras and Mysore was to supervise a stricter and more general organization of the same policy. I have already fully approved of your Excellency's proceedings in this respect, and do not doubt that you exercised a wise discretion. It is desirable, however, that for guidance in future famines the experience obtained of the working of the two systems should be ascertained and recorded. The relative value of the work done for the same wage in each case, the effect of the larger works in discouraging speculation and the relief of applicants not in want, and the extent to which the distance of relief works can without undue hardship be used as a test of destitution, are the points upon which evidence is required.

There has been, at the same time, a danger against which it has been necessary to guard, and to which you have not been insensible. In works conducted under the superintendence of Public Works Officers, it is evident that a full day's work is more likely to be exacted in return for a day's wage, than in the petty village works, over which there is no skilled supervision, and which are devised rather as an excuse for relief than for the public advantages which, when finished, they will confer. But this more vigilant economy carries with it a corresponding peril in those cases,—likely, when a famine is much prolonged, to be numerous,—where the labourer is too much reduced by privation to perform a full day's work, but is not so completely enfeebled as to be fitted only for gratuitous relief. It will be a matter of much interest to learn how far the precautions taken by your Excellency and the Governor of Madras to avert this danger, have, in the result, been successful.

9. Your Excellency in Council from the first insisted that the task of distributing grain throughout the famine area should be left to the unrestricted operations of trade. Under the principle you prescribed, no grain was imported by Government, with the exception of that which had been purchased by the Madras Government during the earliest weeks of the distress. The energies of private trade were in no case unequal to the task that was thus laid upon them. The high price which the trader was able to charge for grain undoubtedly imposed a heavy outlay on the Government in the administration of relief. But the cost would have been far heavier if, by importations of its own, the Government had paralysed private trade, and assumed the duty of replacing it through the vast area affected by the drought. The course which you took appeared to me to be judicious at the time, and has been fully justified by the result. It would be desirable, however, for future guidance that the details of the process of supply should, as far as possible, be placed on record. The cause to which the extreme prices of some localities were due, how far they were produced by deficient transport, how far by retardation of supply at the port of importation, are questions deserving the attention of the Commissioners. The experience of famine relief hitherto obtained in India would seem to show that the rule observed by your Excellency is sound, under ordinary circumstances, but that there are contingencies under which it cannot be sustained, especially where communications are liable to sudden interruption by the weather. In the Madras famine it appears to have been highly successful; in the Bengal famine a considerable deviation from it was found to be necessary; and its too rigid observance in the Orissa famine led to a great calamity. A careful examination, therefore, into the circumstances of its application during the past distress will be of material utility.

10. Another question which occupied the anxious attention, both of your Government and that of Madras, during the earlier stages of the famine, was the amount and quality of food which is necessary to sustain a native of Southern India in a condition fit for labour. A warm controversy arose among the medical advisers of the three Governments, in which the question was argued to a great extent upon theoretic grounds, and upon analogies derived from the experience of soldiers and convicts. This method of investigation led to no satisfactory conclusion, though possibly at the time no other was fully available. The experience of the past year will, if sufficient breadth and variety of evidence be collected, render it possible to arrive at a definite conclusion upon this vital point.

11. I have no wish to confine the investigations of the Commissioners to those points in the experience of the past famine which I have indicated above. There may be other points in respect to which your Excellency's Government, after consultation with the Government of Madras, may think that inquiry would be desirable, and might produce useful results. But an inquiry into the best system of famine relief will not be the whole, or the most important part of their duty. It is of still more essential importance to ascertain how far it is possible for Government by its action to diminish the severity of famines, or to place the people in a better condition for enduring them.

12. Works of irrigation are naturally the most effective remedy for a deficiency of rainfall, and no doubt can be entertained of the benefit they confer wherever they can be had without excessive cost, and where there is a permanent and sufficient supply of water to sustain them. The Government of India has spent and is still spending very large sums in the construction of them. More than sixteen millions sterling have already been laid out, and the works which are in course of construction, or which have been sanctioned, will, before they are completed, have cost 6,373,000*l* more. The financial results of these undertakings have varied remarkably. The earlier works, especially those which have been constructed in the localities already selected for that purpose by the earlier rulers of the country, have been singularly profitable. According to estimates now before me, the Eastern Jumna Canal has yielded 36 per cent., and the Western Jumna 27 per cent., no account, however, being taken of the value of the work which had been done by former rulers, or of the cost which has still to be incurred before these undertakings are complete. The irrigation works in the low countries of the Madras Presidency have also produced large returns. The Cauvery Delta, one of the earliest English works, is stated to have yielded 86 per cent., the Godavery Delta, 21 per cent., and the Kistna Delta 15 per cent. But more recent undertakings have been very much less successful, and some in a financial point of view have completely failed. The Orissa Canal system, and the Madras Irrigation Company's Canal, stretching over a length of 749 miles and costing together more than 3,000,000*l*., have not only returned nothing for the money laid out upon them, but have not, up to this year, paid their working expenses. The aggregate amount of interest which has been paid by Government on account of the capital sunk on these two undertakings, has been 1,400,000*l*., making the total sum lost 4,400,000*l*. The greatest number of acres irrigated by the Orissa Canal in any one year up to the close of 1876-77 has been 94,777, by the Madras Company's Canal, 94,945. This unfortunate result is due, in some degree, to the refusal of the ryots in the vicinity of these canals to avail themselves of the water offered to them. The cause of their reluctance is imperfectly ascertained, but it probably arises from the fact that in ordinary years they enjoy sufficient rainfall to conduct their traditional methods of cultivation.

13. From the experience that has already been gained, and from the calculations furnished to you by your engineers, it is probable that the localities suited for profitable irrigation are very limited in area, and that the list of canals which the Government can undertake without loss cannot be largely extended. Great caution, therefore, in authorizing the commencement of new works will be necessary, and it will be prudent to scrutinize rigorously the grounds on which, in any instance, hopes of a remunerative yield are founded. In view, however, of the frequent famines of recent years, it must be admitted that the value of an irrigation project is not absolutely negated by the proof that it will not yield full interest on its cost. The case is conceivable that a canal which paid little or no interest in ordinary years, might in a famine year protect so large a population as to repay to Government the cost of its construction by savings in relief expenditure. The essential matter is to ascertain how far irrigation works are practicable, which shall be capable of giving protection against famine in a degree at all corresponding to their cost.

14. Very much stress has been laid, from time to time, upon the financial and other advantages to be derived from expenditure on these works, and during the past autumn the construction of them in the Madras Presidency upon a vast scale has been strenuously urged. The fact that demands of this kind have recently been made by persons of authority would of itself suffice to make a searching investigation of the question highly expedient. If there is room by such undertakings materially to relieve the Madras people from so much suffering, and the Indian Treasury from an intolerable burden, the construction of the works ought to be commenced with the least possible delay. If, on the other hand, this resource is not, to any great extent, available, and any such undertaking, on the contemplated scale, would only impose fresh burdens on the taxpayers without effecting any notable diminution of the evil, it is of high importance that the evidence of that fact should be set forth with sufficient fulness and cogency to dissipate all illusion upon the subject. In the reports which your Excellency has forwarded me from time to time, I find much to lead me to believe that the very cause which produced the famine in many cases has made irrigation works wholly or partially ineffective. The same want of rain, which parched the fields, emptied the tanks and lessened the volume of the rivers. The absence of glaciers in the hills of Southern India would naturally render the irrigation canals far more liable to be affected by want of rain, than similar works in the valleys of the Ganges and the Indus. Sir R. Temple, in his Minute of the 15th of April, gives a description of the effect of the drought upon these channels even before the south-west monsoon had failed, which seems to indicate that want of water will probably be a fatal obstacle to any large extension of irrigation.

15. The drought in Madras, he says, "caused the Kistna and its affluents to roll down in such a diminished volume that the canal from the Toongabhadra near Kurnool, and the great irrigation works of the Masulipatam Delta, were stinted in their supply. It made the freshes and floods of the Penair descend in such shrunken proportions that the reservoir and channels of Nellore were nearly deprived of water. It stopped the supply of the Cauvery-pauk Lake near Arcot, and rendered the dam across the Palar inoperative. It rested for some time on the districts of South Arcot, Tanjor and Trichinopoly, and threatened them with evil; they were, however, saved, South Arcot mainly by some later rains, and Tanjor and Trichinopoly partly by the same rains, but chiefly by the canals. Though it failed to dry up the harvest of the rich tracts of Malabar and Travancore, or to prevent the Cauvery from filling the canals of the Tanjore delta, yet it rendered them powerless to send the succour that might otherwise have been expected."

Of the whole cultivated area in the famine districts "a small part (technically termed 'wet') is watered from artificial tanks, which often rise to the proportions of lakes; the remainder (technically called 'dry') is watered in some parts from wells, but for the most part from rainfall. The proportion of wet lands varies greatly in the several districts, being largest in Chingleput, where it exceeds one-half of the whole cultivation, and smallest in Bellary, where it is only one-twentieth. The failure was worst in the 'wet' lands. The tanks, having their catchment areas in undulating plains or low hills on which but little rain descended, were left almost dry. What are usually splendid sheets of water became scorched dusty plains, appearing as huge black patches, with cracked and fissured soil. The sluices, the distributing channels, and all the apparatus of irrigation lay useless."

16. It will be one of the most important tasks of the Commission to ascertain how far this failure extended; what was the condition, for the purposes of irrigation, during this drought, of the canals, the tanks, and the wells in the famine districts; to what extent they performed the function of protecting the population against famine; and to estimate, as far as possible, the amount of saving thus effected in the cost of Government relief. They should also report upon the measures which may, in their judgment, be practicable for extending a similar protection to portions of the population of Madras or Bombay who do not now enjoy it, either by the improvement of existing works, or the construction of new works. In particular, it would be desirable that they should ascertain the feasibility, both in respect to physical and to financial conditions, of Sir R. Temple's suggestion that tanks should be made capable of containing, and retaining, a two years' supply of water.

17. The opinion has been expressed that the practical effect of the tenure which is most largely prevalent in the Madras Presidency is to disincline the tenant from expending his labour or his money on the excavation of wells. Any general inquiry into the merits or demerits of the ryotwari system would in itself be too onerous an extension of the labours of the Commission, and would be, to a great extent, superfluous, as the controversy which was conducted for so long a time upon that subject has furnished as ample materials for the formation of a judgment on the general question as are likely to be obtained. But it would be expedient to collect opinions upon the single point, whether there is, owing to the prevalent tenure, any such uncertainty in the mind of a ryot as to his immediate prospects, as to discourage him from digging or deepening wells where otherwise it would be his interest to do so.

18. There are grounds for believing that, in many cases, minor irrigation works depending upon the flow of small streams have been allowed to become ineffective, owing to the continued neglect of the inhabitants to keep the channels open. To a similar but more prolonged neglect is probably due the fact, often adverted to, that tanks provided in many parts of Southern India in the times of former rulers have been suffered to fall into decay. It will be a matter worthy of consideration, whether a legal power of imposing upon the inhabitants that duty should not be vested in the executive government.

19. It appears from the report of Mr. Boswell, the Collector of Ahmednagar in the year 1875, that three irrigation works, on which the Government had spent the sum of 62,729*l.*, in that district, had been practically useless, because the ryots had been too poor, too inextricably involved in debt, and apparently too hopeless of realizing any independent profit from irrigation, to be willing to prepare their land for the distribution of the water. It would be important to know whether, in any of the famine districts of Madras, the efficacy of the irrigation works which have been constructed by the Government has been materially hindered by any similar obstacle.

20. The value of railways as an assurance to the population against the worst sufferings of famine has been singularly illustrated during the past year. Without their aid, it would have been wholly impossible to convey sufficient grain to the inland districts. Their resources, however, were strained to the utmost, and at one time a serious apprehension was entertained that they would be overtaken. How far it will be possible, with a due regard for financial considerations, to bring a wider range of country within their immediate reach, is a question which will doubtless occupy your earnest attention at an early period. Much information bearing upon this question, and calculated to assist you in forming a decision upon it, will be collected in the course of the proposed inquiry. It will be of especial interest to estimate the enhancement of price due, in the more remote localities, to the necessity of long carriage by road, and the extent to which, if they had been more accessible by railway, the natural competition of trade would have diminished both the expense falling upon the Government, and the sufferings to which all classes were exposed from the dearness of provisions before the time had arrived when they were compelled to become applicants for Government relief.

21. I have indicated the principal matters in respect to which the proposed Commission may gather facts and make recommendations which will assist the Government in devising measures to protect the people from the calamities following upon excessive drought. But nothing that I have written must be held to preclude them from pursuing any inquiries which, in their judgment, are calculated to attain this object.

NOTIFICATION.

No. 1140, dated Calcutta, the 8th February 1878.

With the sanction of Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council, and under the instructions contained in paragraph 6 of his despatch No. 2, dated 10th January, His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General in Council is pleased to appoint Major-General Richard Strachey, R. E., F. R. S., to be President of the Famine Commission, the other members of which will be appointed hereafter.

(No. 51).

Special Famine Report for the Week ending 26th January 1878.

Statement No. 51, regarding Famine Relief Operations in the Province of Mysore, for the Week ending the 26th January 1878.

There is no material change to record. The weather has been favorable; harvesting the remaining standing crops and treading out the grain still give occupation: and there is some improvement in the public health.

2. Imports of grain by rail amounted to 786 tons, or 862 tons less than last week. The Octroi Returns shew 490 tons exported from Bangalore to the interior, or 20 tons more than in the previous week.

3. The number of laborers on Civil Relief Works was 4,664, being an increase of 517. The increase was in the Tunkúr, Hassan, and Chitaldrug Districts, where only Civil Relief Works are still kept open.

4. The Department Public Works employed 37,961 laborers, or 89 less than last week. The following is a list of the more important works:—

No.	District.	Name of Work.	NUMBER EMPLOYED.
			Previous Week.	Present Week.
1	Bangalore	State Railway	14,036	15,061
2	Do.	Bangalore Water Supply	1,000	820
3	Bangalore-Kolar	Bangalore-Bellary and Devanahalli Road	1,653	1,915
4	Bangalore	Mallappa Chetti's Tank	901	804
5	Do.	Bhadram Tank	1,943	2,248
6	Tunkúr	Bangalore-Tunkúr Road	2,364	2,034

11	Chitaldrug	Timmanahalli Tank	645	619
12	Do.	Dodderi Feeder	397	522
TOTAL			34,712	35,730

5. The number in the Relief Camps was 4,119, or 493 fewer than in the preceding week; 785 persons were admitted during the week and 873 were discharged. The following statement gives the daily average number relieved in each district and the cost per head:—

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE, AGRICULTURE, AND COMMERCE.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS
FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 5th FEBRUARY 1878.

GENERAL REMARKS.—No rain fell during the week in Madras, where prospects are unchanged; the price of rice is falling, and of dry grains rising; the number on works is 150,906, and on gratuitous relief 165,072, an increase of 5,213 and a decrease of 15,988 respectively on the figures for last week. In Mysore there has been no rain, and there is no change in prospects; the later sown crops are doing well. The number on relief works during the week ending the 26th ultimo was 42,625, and on gratuitous relief 4,128, an increase of 428 and a decrease of 2,280 compared with the figures of the previous week. In Bombay slight rain is reported from Sind, and a shower from Surat; the rabi is generally in good-condition, except in Satara and Belgaum, where it is described as "middling." In the Central Provinces there has been rain in many districts, which, together with cloudy weather, has injured the rabi crops. No rain is reported from Berar, where the rabi is ready for cutting. In Central India rain is reported only from Satara; prospects are fair. In Rajputana there have been showers in Tonk, Ajmere and Ulwur; the crops generally promise well. In Bengal light rain is reported from all the districts of the Burdwan and Chota Nagpore Divisions, in most of the Central districts, and in Cuttack, Balasore, Maldah (heavy), Sarun and Gya; it is much wanted in Pooree; the rabi crops are generally good. In Assam there has been no rain: in the valley districts there are now no crops on the ground; in Sylhet the rabi is in good condition. In Burma there has been no rain; the harvest is over in most districts, and the outturn has been generally excellent. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh rain appears to have fallen in Jhānsi, Bareilly, and Partabgarh, and it is cloudy in several other districts: fine weather is now wanted to ripen the rabi. In the Punjab no rain has fallen; prospects are good throughout the Province, but in the tracts bordering on Kashmir there is some distress from high prices.

Madras—
Ganjam (Jan. 31st)	Nil	Rice 10·21, raggi 15·38, cholum 13·22, cumboo 14·92; average number daily fed at Berhampur, Aska, and Purushattapore 214.
Vizagapatam (Feb. 4th)	Nil	Rice 10·0, cholum 15·8, raggi 15·7, cumboo 16·8; pasture and drinking water diminishing.
Godavery (" ")	Nil	Rice 8·67, cholum 17·79, raggi 18·8, cumboo 18·25; crops generally good, though slightly suffering from blight in some places; harvest of cholum and cumboo almost completed; outturn $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$; ancient planked up, water 2 inches above stone crest.
Kistna (Jan. 31st)	Nil	Rice 7·43, cholum 13·41, raggi 14·75, cumboo 13·82; on works 1,605; sick in relief hospitals 48; village relief 339; some crops still suffering from insects: varagu harvested, outturn $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$; castor, chillies and gram being harvested.
Nellore (Feb. 2nd)	Nil	Rice 7·71, cholum 10·79, raggi 12·93, cumboo 11·22; on civil works nil ; on D. P. W. works 11,340; canal 15,953; camps about 2,729; village relief 930; crops fair, but insects and blight doing damage.
Cuddapah (" 1st)	...	Rice 7·93, cholum 14·05, raggi 14·10, cumboo 14·71; on works 3,206; children 296; camps 2,156; village relief 5,297; raggi and paddy harvested in parts, outturn $\frac{1}{2}$.
Bellary (" 2nd)	Nil	Rice 8·44, cholum 12·25, raggi 10·68, cumboo 11·30; on works 3,151; camps 1,180; village relief 4,084; sowing of second-crop paddy still in progress in some places; standing crops, pulses, horse-gram, Bengal gram, oil-seeds, korra and cotton generally promising, while cholum crop in some places has been damaged by insects; pulses, oil-seeds, horse-gram and korra being harvested in some places, but the outturn is less than was expected; future prospects good.
Kurnool (" ")	Nil	Rice 9·29, cholum 14·50, raggi 15·62, cumboo 12·67; on works 755; children 46; in camps 255; village relief 11,680; paddy being harvested, also cholum in some places.
North Arcot (" 1st)	Nil	Rice 9·0, cholum 10·1, raggi 10·5, cumboo 10·7, wheat 7·9; on works 37,576; children 3,164; camps and houses 11,521; village relief 14,274; crops affected with blight and insects in some places; harvest of paddy and raggi , outturn poor.
South Arcot	Nil	Rice 10·66, cholum 15·60, raggi 14·0, cumboo 15·0; on works, Revenue Dept., 1,091; professional 1,164; camps 2,436; villages 12,217; crops generally good, but want of rain is felt in Trinomalai and Trichalore taluks; cholum , raggi , varagu , ground-nut and paddy harvested, outturn tolerable.

Tanjore (Feb. 2nd)	Nil	Rice 10·0, cholum 14·29, raggi 17·12, cumboo 15·14; rivers low; crops—wet thriving, dry in good condition; harvest, wet, samba , dry, varagu , outturn $\frac{1}{2}$ to full.
Trichinopoly (" ")	Nil	Rice 9·45, cholum 28·0 (available in Musiri taluk only), raggi 16·72, cumboo 18·65; on works 2,345; children 278; in camps 202; village relief 2,280; standing crops good; damages by locusts slight; paddy, cholum , cumboo , raggi and varagu harvested in parts, outturn from 6 to 12 anna crop.
Madura (" ")	Nil	Rice 10·82, raggi 18·26, cumboo 22·66; on works 4,106; children 5·78; in camps 1,903; village relief 3,988; paddy being harvested in all the taluks, yield between $\frac{1}{2}$ and $\frac{3}{4}$, also some punjak harvest here and there.
Tinnevelly (" ")	Nil	Rice 10·80, raggi 22·95, cumboo 28·35; camps and houses 10; village relief 90; standing crops in the northern distressed taluks much injured by an extraordinary attack of locusts, and in a few villages of Ambasamudram and Tenkasi damaged by flies; harvest of wet and dry crops in parts, outturn poor.
Coimbatore (" ")	Nil	Rice 9·52, cholum 13·32, raggi 14·80, cumboo 21·22; on works 30,446; in camps and houses 7,314; children 862; village relief 5,792; standing crops reported to be destroyed by insects in parts of seven taluks; harvest of paddy, cholum , cumboo in parts; outturn of paddy $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$; dry grains very poor.
Nilgiris (" ")	Nil	Rice 8·08, cholum 10·72, raggi 11·67, cumboo 13·86.
Salem (" 4th)	Nil	Rice 8·05, raggi 11·08, cumboo 12·66, cholum 9·48; on works 30,440; in camps 6,250; village relief 15,630; harvest of paddy and raggi , outturn $\frac{1}{2}$.
South Canara (" 2nd)	Nil	Rice 12·56, raggi 13·07; second rice crop harvested in parts, outturn good.
Malabar (" ")	Nil	Rice 10·72, raggi 13·17; rain not needed; harvesting of second-crop almost over, outturn above average.

Baroda
Bengal— Chittagong ...	Nil	Weather fine, hazy, getting warm; state and prospects of the crops are good; rice is getting dear; prices are generally from 10 to 13 seers per rupee, and in the south of the district from 16 to 18 seers; some dearth is anticipated.
Noakholly ...	Nil	Weather seasonable; the cold-weather crops are progressing favourably; public health is good.
Chittagong Hill Tracts...	Nil	Weather seasonable; the hillmen have begun to cut jungle for joam-ing ; mustard is being gathered; a poor outturn is anticipated.
Hill Tipperah ...	Nil	Weather rather warm for the season; no change in the state and prospects of the crops since last report.
Backergunge ...	Nil	All is well; in Dakhin Shabazpore the price of rice has suddenly risen to Rs. 2-12 to Rs. 3; large quantities are being exported to Calcutta and other districts; general health is good.
Furreedpore ...	0'03	Weather cloudy on the 1st and 2nd instant; kalai and moong have been reaped; the state of the rabi crops are fair.
Dacca ...	Nil	Weather warmer than it should be, and cloudy; state and prospects of the crops are good.
Mymensingh ...	Nil	Weather fine and warmer; state and prospects of the crops are satisfactory.
Tipperah ...	Nil	Weather fine; the cold-weather crops promise well, but mustard, of which about one half has been reaped, has been injured by insects in many places.
24-Pergunnahs ...	0'1	The first part of the week was warm, but latterly the weather was cold and cloudy; state and prospects of the crops are good; cholera and fever are abating.
Jessore ...	0'12	Weather fine; Friday (February 1st) was cloudy, and in the afternoon a drizzling rain fell; the winter crops are reported good throughout the district, except in Bagirhat; a little more rain would do good.
Nudda ...	0'09	The weather has been unseasonably hot, but rain has somewhat cooled the air; the crops have in most parts been stunted through drought, but on the whole the outturn is not likely to be bad; rice is very dear.
Moorshedabad ...	0'2	Weather cloudy during the week, fine and seasonable on the 2nd instant; the prospects of the rabi crops are generally favourable; cholera is still prevalent in Burwa, Bharatpore, Rampore Haut and Raghunáthganj.
Pubna ...	0'04	Weather cool and occasionally cloudy; the harvesting of haldi and sugarcane is still going on; the prospects of amun dhan appear to be good; fever has not as yet disappeared from the Pubna town.
Rajshahye	In the beginning of the week the weather was warm, after which there was a very slight fall of rain in almost all parts of the district; during the latter part it has been cold; the cutting of the winter rice is nearly finished; the prospects of the rabi crops are good; a few cases of cholera have been reported from Singra and Lalpore.
Bogra ...	0'16	Weather cloudy during the first part of the week, but now clear and seasonable; there was a small fall of rain; nearly the whole of the amun paddy and mustard have been gathered; the cutting of sugarcane has commenced; there is still some cholera in Adamdighi and Dhoopchanchia.
Dinagepore ...	Nil	The rain has been general; the land is being broken up for the bhadoi crops, and the fall of rain is very seasonable for them; it has injured the mangoes.
Rungpore ...	Slight rain in parts of the District.	The cold weather crops are doing well; ploughing for aus sowings has commenced.
Cooch Behar ...	0'09	Weather warmer than last week; the sky was cloudy for two or three days, but is now clear again; there was a slight shower of rain in some places on the 27th and in others on the 28th January; prospects of the tobacco and other cold-weather crops on the ground are fairly good, they would have been better if a little more rain had fallen; in some places within the jurisdiction of the Mekhaliganj Sub-division the mustard-seed crop is reported to have been injured by small insects; new rice is selling in the Cooch Behar Bazar at Rs. 3-3 per maund; this is a very high price for the season of the year, especially as the reaping of kaimanti dhan was finished only a few days ago; fever has almost disappeared, and there has been a change for the better in the state of public health.
Jalpáiguri ...	Nil	Weather seasonable; prospects of winter crops are good; land is being prepared for bhadoi rice.

Presidency or Province and District.	Rainfall for week preceding.	State of agricultural prospects.
Bengal—continued.

Hooghly ...	0.19	Weather cloudy, with drizzling rain on the 30th January and 1st February; warm in the first part of the week, but cool since the 30th January; pulses and winter crops are doing well; public health is normal; cattle disease has broken out in the Dhaneakhal station.
Burdwan ...	0.14	The prospects of the winter crops look favourable; the late rain has done good to cotton plants; cholera has not abated in the Culna, Bood-Bood, and Jehanabad sub-divisions.
Baukora ...	0.95	In the beginning of the week the weather grew warmer; in the last half it was cloudy and rainy; the crops are advancing well, the rain having revived them considerably.
Bearbhoom ...	0.29	Weather reasonable; state and prospects of the crops are good.
Sonthal Pergunnah ...	Slight showers in places.	(Clouds and drizzle and promise of rain off and on for the last fortnight, with showers in odd places; the rabi crops are good in most places, and are best in Godda and Rajmehal; with bad cultivation there is a great deal of very good mustard, and some flax and gram; in Godda wheat and barley are doing fairly; the rice crop was excellent everywhere.
Bhagalpur ...	General rain on the morning of the 28th ultimo.	Since the rain fell the weather has been cloudy, it has done much good; the prospects of the rabi crops are very favourable; exportation of food-grains continues, and prices are still rising; general health is good.
Monghyr ...	Nil	Weather cloudy, with east wind; state and prospects of the crops are good.
Purneah ...	Nil	Weather cold and cloudy; there has been heavy rain in some parts of the district, which will benefit the wheat; mustard is being reaped; the crop is fair.
Maldah ...	1.42	Heavy rain on the night of the 27th January; otherwise weather fair; state and prospects of the crops are satisfactory; fever is reported to be decidedly less.
Durbhunga ...	Nil	The rabi crops promise well all over the district, save in portions of the Tajpore sub-division, where they have suffered both from drought and from frost.
Mounseerpore ...	Nil	Weather mild and clear; the rabi crops have been greatly benefited by the late rain, and there is now every prospect of a good harvest.
Saran ...	0.62 93 at Gopalganj.	Weather cloudy during the first part of the week, latterly seasonably cool; west wind is prevailing; prospects of the crops continue fair; peas and gram are ripening; mustard is in seed; poppy is in flower; the Sub-divisional officer of Sewan has reported that the rabi will be somewhat less than an average crop.
Chumparun ...	Nil	Weather becoming warmer in the day time; the late rain has been of much benefit to the rabi crops, which now promise very well; importations of rice continue from Tirhoot; prices are easy.
Patna ...	Nil	Weather seasonably cold; prospects of the rabi crops continue good, but considerable damage has been done by caterpillars; health is good.
Gya ...	0.02	Weather cloudy at times; maximum thermometer in the shade 77°; insects are doing damage to some of the rabi crops in the Sudder and Jehanabad Sub-divisions, otherwise prospects are good, and are reported as unusually good in Nowada.
Shahabad ...	Nil	Weather cloudy and occasionally clear; the standing crops are looking healthier than before; more rain, however, will prove injurious to them; peas and other early sown crops are being reaped; peas and gram have been damaged by frost in certain parts of the Bhubooah sub-division.
Hazáribágh ...	0.17	Weather colder again; cloudy; the rain and damp weather have done some good to the rabi crops.
Lohardugga ...	0.48	There has been rain in three of the police station circles in the headquarters division, but none in Palamow; the prospects of the rabi crops are still as good as usual; public health is good.
Maubhoom ...	0.37	For the most part of the week the weather has been cloudy, and towards the end rain has fallen over a large part of the district; it may do good to the crops, but prices are high; common rice is selling at 16 seers for the rupee; cholera is still reported from Rámpur.
Singbhoom ...	0.60	Weather seasonable; nothing to report about the crops; the district is healthy.
Balasore ...	0.24	Weather fine at present, but threatens rain; the winter crops are good; in the north of the district fever still prevails; a few cases of cholera are reported.
Cuttack ...	0.14	Storm and rain on the 1st instant, otherwise weather fair, and no rain; the reaping of all the crops has nearly been finished; dalua rice is growing well, and will be benefited by the rain; public health is on the whole good.

Presidency or Province and District.	Rainfall for week preceding.	State of agricultural prospects.
Pooree ...	Nil	Weather warm for the season; sarad rice is being harvested; the crop is deficient; dalu rice is progressing well in low lands, but on uplands want of water is felt; moong , kalai , and tobacco promise well; the mango crop does not seem to be a good one; the mandia crop in the salt tracts is suffering severely for want of water; common rice is selling at 15½ to 21 seers per rupee; some rice was exported by sea last week. General Remarks. —Rain has fallen in all the districts of the Burdwan and Chota Nagpore Divisions, in most of the central districts, and in Cuttack, Balasore, Maldah, Sarun and Gya; it is much wanted in Pooree for the dalu rice and mandia crops; the rabi crops are generally good, but in parts of the Patna division they are reported to have been damaged by frost and insects; in the hill tracts of Chittagong and in Tipperah mustard has been injured by insects; the spring rice is being planted, and will be benefited by the rain, which will also facilitate the preparation of lands for the sowings of the early rice; exportation continues, and the price of rice is said to have generally risen.

No. 684.—Ordered that this Resolution be published in the Gazette of India for general information:—

READ again—

Financial Resolution by the Government of India, No. 124, dated 12th May 1876, regarding a revised scale of pay for officers of the Assay Department.

Read the under-mentioned correspondence with the Secretary of State for India, regarding the mode of selecting officers for employment in the Assay Department:—

To Secretary of State, No. 168, dated 25th May 1876.

From Secretary of State, No. 312, dated 10th August 1876.

To Secretary of State, No. 346, dated 26th September 1876.

From Secretary of State, No. 40, dated 6th February 1877, No. 102, dated 22nd March 1877, and No. 293, dated 13th September 1877.

RESOLUTION.—With the approval of the Secretary of State for India, the Governor General in Council is pleased to determine that the selection of officers for employment in the Assay Department shall be made in the following manner:—

I.—As declared in Resolution, No. 124, dated 12th May 1876, Commissioned or Covenanted officers only shall, as a general rule, be appointed substantively to the Assay Department.

II.—No officer shall be appointed substantively to the Assay Department without having passed an examination in practical and inorganic Chemistry at the Royal College of Chemistry and without a certificate from the Royal School of Mines of qualification in Metallurgy, specially with reference to the precious metals and their alloys, and of his ability to assay the precious metals and their alloys.

III.—Whenever a want of candidates eligible for admission to the Assay Department is foreseen, the Government will permit a selected officer to attend at the laboratory of the Assay Master at Bombay or Calcutta for a period not exceeding six months, in order to prepare himself for a prescribed examination. During this period of probation, the full salary of his office will be granted to the officer, on condition that he passes the examination at the end of his probation. An officer who has passed the prescribed examination, may be employed in the Assay Department, temporarily, for a period not exceeding twelve months, without having passed the examination and without the certificates of qualification described in Clause II. Save with the special sanction of the Secretary of State for India, no officer may be retained in the Department for a period exceeding twelve months without passing the said examination and obtaining the said certificate.

SEPARATE REVENUE—OPIUM.

The 2nd February 1878.

No. 6 of 1878.—The following Notice to Mariners is published for general information:—

NOTICE TO MARINERS.

INDIA—WEST COAST.

Intended Alteration of light at Malwan.

The Collector of Salt Revenue, Bombay, has given notice that on the 1st March 1878, the light at present exhibited from a post close to the white stone cross on the sandy beach at the port of Malwan will be discontinued.

In lieu thereof, a green light, at an elevation of 20 feet above the level of high-water, will be exhibited from the beach, 230 yards to the northward of the present position.

Also, that a red light will be exhibited from a boat moored to the south-east of the rock at the entrance, which is at present marked by a beacon.

DIRECTIONS.—A vessel running into the port should keep the green light just to the right, or open south, of the red light, passing close to southward of the red light, thereby avoiding the rock awash, the Malwan and Johnston Castle rocks, and should anchor with Vingoria rock light in line with the small fort bearing about S. $\frac{1}{4}$ W.

CROWN OF INDIA.

NOTIFICATION.

Fort William, the 15th February 1878.

No. 1. C. I.—The following Supplement to the London Gazette of Friday, the 4th of January 1878, is republished for general information :—

India Office, January 1, 1878.

The Queen has been graciously pleased, by an instrument under Her Royal Sign Manual, of which the following is a copy, to institute and create an Order of Distinction, to be styled and designated "The Imperial Order of the Crown of India," and to make certain Rules and Regulations as therein set forth.

VICTORIA, R. & I.

VICTORIA, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, Empress of India.

To all to whom these presents shall come Greeting :—Whereas We have resolved to commemorate the assumption of Our Imperial title of Empress of India by the institution of an Order of Distinction to be enjoyed by the Princesses of Our Royal House and the Wives or other female relatives of Indian Princes and others to be by Us selected, upon whom We shall from time to time think fit to confer the same, agreeably to the rules and regulations hereinafter declared : Now, know ye, that for the purpose of carrying this, Our resolution, into effect, We have instituted, constituted, and created and by these presents for Us, Our heirs, and successors do institute, constitute, and create an Order of Distinction to be known and have for ever hereafter the name, style, and designation of "The Imperial Order of the Crown of India," and We are graciously pleased to make, ordain, and establish the following Rules and Ordinances for the government of the same, and which shall from henceforth be inviolably observed and kept :

Firstly. That the Order or Distinction shall be styled and designated "The Imperial Order of the Crown of India," and that the first day of January in every year shall henceforth be taken and deemed to be the anniversary of the institution of the said Order.

Secondly. That We, Our heirs and successors, Kings and Queens Regnant of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Emperors and Empresses of India, shall be Sovereigns of this Order.

Thirdly. That it shall be competent for the Sovereign of this Order to confer the decoration thereof upon such Princesses of Our Royal and Imperial House, being of more than eighteen years of age, as We, Our heirs and successors, shall think fit.

Fourthly. That it shall be competent for the Sovereign of this Order to confer the decoration thereof upon the Wives or other female relatives of such Princes in Our Indian Empire, and upon such other Indian Ladies as We, Our heirs and successors, shall from time to time think fit.

Fifthly. That it shall be competent for the Sovereign of this Order to confer the decoration thereof upon the wives or other female relatives of any of the persons who have held, now hold, or may hereafter hold the high offices of Viceroy and Governor-General of India, Governors of Madras or Bombay, or of Principal Secretary of State for India.

Sixthly. [Description and Representation of Insignia.]

Seventhly. That the said Order may be conferred by personal investiture, with the Insignia, upon such Princesses, and other members, as We, Our heirs and successors, may be pleased to admit thereto ; but it shall be lawful for Us, Our heirs and successors, to direct the transmission of the decoration of the Order to any member with a notification of her appointment under the Sign Manual of the Sovereign.

Eighthly. That the names of those upon whom We, Our heirs and successors may be pleased to confer this Order shall be entered upon a Register to be kept under the direction of Our Principal Secretary of State for India, in which the names of the Royal Princesses and other members admitted into the Order shall be enrolled, with the dates of their respective admissions, and a duplicate thereof shall also be kept in the Foreign Department of Our Viceroy and Governor-General of India.

Lastly. We reserve to Ourselves, Our heirs and successors full power of annulling, altering, abrogating, augmenting, interpreting, or dispensing with these regulations, or any portion thereof, by a notification under the Sign Manual of the Sovereign of the Order.

Given at Our Court at Osborne, under Our Sign Manual, this thirty-first day of December, in the forty-first year of Our Reign, and in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven.

By Her Majesty's Command.

THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

PUBLISHED UNDER AUTHORITY.

The "Indian Law Reports," published under the authority of the Governor General in Council, will appear in monthly parts, published as soon as possible after the first of each month at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, and will comprise four series,—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court. The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court will be reported in the Series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court will be reported in the Calcutta Series. The Parts of each Series can be had separately, or all four Parts can be had stitched into one wrapper at the option of subscribers and purchasers. It will be observed from the following statement of the terms of subscription and sale, that a considerable reduction is allowed to persons taking the complete set :

Terms of subscription, payable annually in advance.

PART IV.

Acts of the Governor General's Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First Publication.]

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 9th February 1878, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT NO. II OF 1878.

An Act for the licensing of trades and dealings in the Panjáb, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

WHEREAS, in order to provide means for defraying the public expenditure from time to time incurred and to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine in British India, it is necessary to effect a permanent increase of the revenue; and it is therefore expedient that persons carrying on trades and dealings in the territories and provinces respectively administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb, the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, should take out licenses and pay for the same; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Northern India License Act, 1878."

It extends to the territories under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb, the Local extent.

Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, respectively; but nothing herein contained applies to persons earning their livelihood solely by agriculture.

This Act shall come into force in each of the said territories on such date as the Governor General in Council by notification in the Gazette of India directs in this behalf.

Commencement.

2. When this Act comes into force in the territories under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, Act No. VIII of 1877 (for the licensing of certain trades and dealings in the North-Western Provinces) shall be repealed.

3. In this Act "Collector" means the chief officer in charge of the revenue-administration of a district.

4. Every person who, on or after the first day of April 1878, falls under any of the heads specified in the schedule hereto annexed, and carries on (whether on behalf of himself or any other person) his trade or dealing in any district situate in the said territories, shall take out a license under this Act in such district, and shall pay for the same the annual fee mentioned in such schedule as payable by persons of the class and grade to which he belongs.

5. Such license shall be granted by the Collector of such district, and shall be signed by him, or by such officer as he may appoint in this behalf.

Particulars to be specified in the license.

6. Every such license shall specify—

- (a) the date of the grant thereof;
 - (b) the name, father's name, caste and trade or dealing of the licensee;
 - (c) the class and grade to which he belongs;
 - (d) the fee paid for the license;
 - (e) the term for which the license shall remain in force, and
 - (f) the place or places within such district where the licensee intends to carry on his trade or dealing during such term;
- and shall be received in evidence as prima facie proof of all matters contained therein.

7. Every such license shall have effect in such district only and shall continue in force from the day of the date thereof till the first day of January next after the date of the grant thereof.

8. Every person to whom any such license has been granted, and who desires to continue to carry on his trade or dealing in such district after the expiration of such license, shall take out a fresh license for that purpose for the following year, to expire on the day appointed in the last preceding section, and shall renew the same so long as he desires to continue to carry on such trade or dealing in such district.

9. As soon as may be after the first day of April 1878 and the first day of January in every subsequent year, the Collector shall prepare a list of the persons to be licensed under this Act in his district. Such list shall state—

- (a) the trade or dealing of each of the persons therein named;
- (b) the class and grade under which he is charged; and
- (c) the fee to be paid for his license.

Such list shall be in the language of the district, shall be filed in the office of the Collector, and shall be open to public inspection at all reasonable times without any payment.

10. The Collector shall, from time to time, determine under which of the classes and grades mentioned in the said schedule every person to whom a license may be granted by him as aforesaid shall be charged, and shall amend the said list accordingly.

The list or such part or parts thereof as the Collector thinks fit shall be published in the principal mohallas or ganjes of all towns, and in the chaurpal, or other public place, in all villages concerned, together with a notification that if any person falling under any of the heads specified in the said schedule, whether he is mentioned in such list or not, continues his trade or dealing in the said district, payment of the fee specified in the list as payable by him, or, when he is not mentioned in such list, of the fee mentioned in the said schedule as payable by persons of the class and grade to which he belongs, must be made by him in the year 1878 within thirty days of such publication, and in each succeeding year before the first day of February.

11. The Collector may, by a notice in writing, require the occupier of any house to forward to him a statement in writing signed by such occupier, of the names of all persons residing in such house at the date of the notice and of their respective callings.

12. Any person mentioned in the list referred to in sections nine and ten and objecting to the class or grade under which he is charged may, within thirty days after such publication, or within such further time as the Collector may in each case think fit, apply by petition to the Collector in order to establish his right to have his name transferred to another class or grade, or altogether removed from the list.

13. The Collector shall fix a day for the hearing of the petition, and on the day so fixed, or on such subsequent day as he may from time to time direct, shall hear the same and pass such order thereon as he thinks fit:

Provided that if, in his judgment, the petitioner is able to shew that the fee which has been charged exceeds two per cent. upon his annual nett earnings, such excess shall, for the purpose of section twelve, be deemed a valid objection.

14. The Collector may, for the purposes of any proceeding under section thirteen, exercise any of the powers conferred by the Code of Civil Procedure on a Civil Court for the trial of suits:

Provided that the Collector shall not, in the course of any such proceeding, call for any evidence except at the instance of the petitioner, or in order to ascertain the correctness of facts alleged by him.

15. Subject to the control of the Local Government, the Commissioner of Revenue of the Division may, in his discretion, on the application of any person deeming himself aggrieved by an order passed by the Collector under section thirteen, call for the record of the case, and pass such order thereon as he thinks fit, and such order shall be final.

16. The Collector may in his discretion remit the whole or any part of the fee payable under this Act by any person who has carried on his trade or dealing for a portion of the year only.

17. A person or firm coming under more than one of the designations in the said schedule shall be chargeable only under one of the said designations at the discretion of the Collector; and in the case of a firm, payment by any one of the partners shall, for the purposes of this Act, be considered payment by the firm.

18. If, after expiry of the period mentioned in the notification published under section ten, for payment of the fee specified or referred to therein, any person (whether he is or is not mentioned in the said list) carries on his trade or dealing without having taken out a license as required by this Act, he shall be liable, by order of the Collector, to pay a fine not exceeding three times the amount payable by him in respect of such license, exclusive of the amount so payable; and on receipt of such payment the Collector shall grant him a license.

19. All sums due under section eighteen and all fees payable under this Act or the said Act No. VIII of 1877 shall be recoverable as if they were arrears of land-revenue.

But no fees or other sums due under this Act or the said Act No. VIII of 1877 shall be recoverable by any process whatsoever after the expiry of three months from the last day of the year in respect of which they are payable.

20. Every person holding a license under this Act shall produce and show such license when required so to do by an officer generally or specially empowered in writing by the Collector to make such requisition.

License to be produced on demand.

But no person shall be proceeded against for neglect or refusal to produce such license except at the instance of the Collector.

Prosecution to be at instance of Collector.

21. Courts of Wards and Receivers and managers appointed by any Court in British India, shall be chargeable under this Act in respect of any trade or dealing of which the income is officially in their possession or under their control.

Receivers and managers chargeable.

22. When any trustee, guardian, curator, committee or agent is charged under this Act in such capacity, or when any Court of Wards or Receiver or manager appointed by any Court so charged may, from time to time, out of the money coming to his or its possession as such trustee, guardian, curator, committee or agent, or as such Court of Wards, Receiver or manager, retain so much as is sufficient to pay the fee charged.

Every such person or Court is hereby indemnified for every retention and payment made in pursuance of this Act.

23. The nett amount of all fees and penalties paid or recovered under this Act, after deducting the expenses of collection, or such portion of such nett amount as the Governor General in Council from time to time directs, shall be applied, in such manner as the Governor General in Council thinks fit, for the purpose of increasing the revenues available for defraying expenditure incurred or to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine in the territories administered by the Local Government, or, if the Governor General in Council so directs, in any other part of British India.

The residue (if any) of such nett amount shall be carried to the credit of the Local Government.

24. All or any of the powers and duties conferred and imposed by this Act on a Collector may, subject to the control and orders of the Collector of the District, be exercised and performed by an Assistant Collector or such other officer as the Local Government from time to time appoints in this behalf.

Powers of Collector under Act may be exercised by other officers.

25. Every person shall be legally bound to furnish information to any officer exercising any of the powers of a Collector under this Act when required by him to do so.

Obligation to furnish information to Collector.

26. The Local Government may, from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council,—

(a) exempt any portion of the territories administered by such Government, or any persons or class of persons in such territories, from the operation of this Act, and cancel such exemption;

(b) exempt from the operation of this Act any persons whose respective nett annual earnings are less than such sum as the Local Government may, from time to time, fix in this behalf, and cancel such exemption;

(c) make rules consistent with this Act, (1) for regulating the time and manner of collecting the fees charged under this Act, (2) for providing in any case or class of cases for serving notices on persons charged under this Act, (3) for determining the mode in which persons belonging to any class shall be distributed into grades, and (4) generally for the guidance of officers in matters connected with the enforcement of this Act.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 9th February 1878, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. III OF 1878.

An Act to amend the law relating to the levy of rates on Land in the North-Western Provinces.

WHEREAS, in order to defray the expenditure incurred and to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine, it is necessary to make a permanent increase in the annual revenues, and it is accordingly expedient to provide, in the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, for the levy on land of rates in addition to those now applied to local purposes; and whereas it is therefore expedient to repeal the North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1871, and Act No. VII of 1877, and to re-enact them with the amendments hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows :

I.—Preliminary.

1. This Act may be called "The North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1878."

It extends only to the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces;

and it shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, directs.

2. On and from such date, the North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, of 1871 and VII of 1877. 1871, and Act No. VII of 1877 (to amend the law relating to assignments from the General Provincial Fund established under the North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1871), shall be repealed. But all rates imposed, rules prescribed, allotments made, committees appointed, powers conferred and notifications published under the former Act, shall be deemed to have been respectively imposed, prescribed, made, appointed, conferred and published hereunder.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act—

"Commissioner" means the chief officer in charge of the revenue-administration of a Division;

"Collector" means the chief officer in charge of the revenue-administration of a district;

"Land" means land used for agricultural purposes, or waste-land which is culturable;

"Tenant" means any person using or occupying land, and liable to pay or deliver rent therefor;

"Landlord" means the person responsible for the payment of the Government land-revenue, if any, assessed on an estate, and includes a muftidár, nazránádár or other person holding land, whereof the revenue has, either wholly or in part, been released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned;

"Estate" means all or any part of a village separately assessed to the land-revenue, or separately exempt from the payment thereof;

"Year" means the year commencing on the first day of April.

II.—Rates on Land in Districts of which the Settlement is liable to Revision.

4. Every estate situate in any district in which the term of the settlement of the land-revenue made under Regulation IX of 1833 has expired, shall be liable to the payment of such rate, not exceeding five per cent. on its annual value, as the Lieutenant-Governor from time to time imposes.

Such rate shall be paid by the landlord independently of, and in addition to, any land-revenue assessed on the estate:

Provided that, in estates in which, before the passing of this Act, provisional engagements have been taken from the landlord for the payment of the land-revenue and cesses in one consolidated sum, and in which it appears to the Lieutenant-Governor inexpedient to cancel such engagements, one-eleventh part of such sum shall be deducted on account of such cesses, and shall be treated in all respects as if it were a portion of a rate levied under the former part of this section.

Every estate situate in a district of which the land-revenue is liable to periodical revision, shall be liable, in addition to any rates levied under the foregoing portion of this section, to the payment of such further rate, not exceeding one per cent. on its annual value, as the Lieutenant-Governor from time to time imposes.

Such further rate shall be paid by the landlord independently of, and in addition to, any land-revenue assessed on the estate.

"Annual value" means as follows :—

(1). In cases in which the settlement of the land-revenue is liable to periodical revision, it means double the amount of the land-revenue for the time being assessed on an estate;

(2). In cases in which such settlement is not liable to such revision, or in which the land-revenue has been, wholly or in part, released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned, it means double the amount which, if the settlement were liable to such revision, would be assessable as land-revenue on the estate.

III.—Rates on Land in Estates of which the Land-revenue is not liable to periodical Revision.

5. Every estate situated in a district of which the land-revenue is not liable to periodical revision, shall be liable to the payment of such rate as the Lieutenant-Governor from time to time imposes, not exceeding two annas for each acre under cultivation, or which has been cultivated within the three years next before the assessment of the rate.

The Lieutenant-Governor may from time to Further rate. time impose upon any such estate, in addition to any rate imposed under the first clause of this section, a further rate of such amount, not exceeding half an anna for each acre as aforesaid, as he thinks fit.

6. The rate or further rate shall be paid by the landlord independently of, and in addition to, any land-revenue assessed on the estate, and in addition to the cess levied now on account of roads.

7. The Lieutenant-Governor shall from time to time, as occasion requires, make rules for ascertaining the area of the land assessable under section five.

8. The landlord may recover, from every tenant of land on which such rate or further rate has been assessed, and for the payment of which the landlord is liable, an amount equal to one-half of the rate or further rate assessed on the land held by such tenant.

9. The Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time make rules consistent with this Act for determining the cases in which a landlord shall be entitled to recover, from tenants holding at fixed or beneficial rates of rent, the whole or any portion of the rate or further rate assessed on the land held by such tenants.

IV.—Manner in which the Rates are to be expended.

10. The amount standing at the credit of the fund constituted under section nine of the said North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1871, at the time this Act comes into force, and the proceeds of all rates imposed under this Act, shall be carried to the credit of a general provincial fund.

11.(a). From such fund the Lieutenant-Governor shall in each year appropriate, in such manner as the Governor General in Council may direct, such amount, not exceeding the proceeds of the further rates assessed in such year under sections four and five, as the Governor General in Council may direct, for the purpose of increasing the revenues available for defraying expenditure incurred or to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine in the said territories, or, if the Governor General in Council so directs, in any other part of British India.

(b). The Lieutenant-Governor may, from time to time, assign from such fund such amount as he thinks fit, to be applied in payment of charges incurred or to be incurred on account of such canals and railways as he, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may declare to be works of general provincial utility :

Provided that the amounts so assigned in any year shall not exceed one-tenth of the proceeds of the rates assessed in such year under the first clause of section four and the first clause of section five.

(1.) The construction, repair and maintenance of roads and other means of communication ;

(2.) The maintenance of the Rural Police and District-post ;

(3.) The construction and repair of school-houses, the maintenance and inspection of schools, the training of teachers and the establishment of scholarships ;

(4.) The construction and repair of hospitals, dispensaries, lunatic asylums, markets, wells and tanks ; the payment of all charges connected with the purposes for which such buildings or works have been constructed, and any other local works likely to promote the public health, comfort or convenience :

Provided that the amounts so allotted in any year for any district shall not be less than nine-tenths of the proceeds of the rates assessed under the first clause of section four and the first clause of section five in such district in such year.

12. In the case of works which benefit more districts than one, the Local Government may determine what proportion of the expense of the work shall be borne by each of the districts benefited thereby, and such proportion shall be payable out of the allotments made as aforesaid to such districts respectively.

13. Any portion of such allotment remaining unexpended at the end of the year in which the allotment was made may, at the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor, be reallocated for expenditure in the same district, or may be applied for the benefit of the North-Western Provinces, in such manner as the Lieutenant-Governor from time to time directs.

14. Accounts of the receipts in respect of all rates levied under this Act, and of the receipts and expenditure of such allotment, shall be kept in each district. Such accounts shall, at all reasonable times, be open to the inspection of the local Committee hereinafter mentioned. An abstract of such accounts shall be prepared annually in English and in the vernacular language of the district, and shall be open, at all reasonable times, to public inspection at suitable places within the district without the payment of any fee.

An abstract of such accounts shall also be published annually in the local Gazette.

15. The Local Government shall appoint, in each district, a Committee, consisting of not less than six persons, for the purpose of determining how the allotment mentioned in section eleven shall be applied, and in the supervision and control of such allotment :

Provided that not less than one-half of the members of such Committee shall be persons not in the service of Government, and owning or occupying land in the district, or residing therein.

The Lieutenant-Governor shall, from time to time, prescribe the manner in which the members of such Committee shall be appointed or removed, and shall define the functions and authority of such Committee.

F.—Miscellaneous.

16. Suits for the recovery from co-sharers,

Suits under Act cognizable by Collector.

tenants or others, of any sum on account of any rate imposed under this Act, and all suits on account of illegal exaction of such rate, or for the settlement of accounts, shall be cognizable by the Collector as if such suits had been included among the suits mentioned in section twenty-three of Act No. X of 1859 and in section one of Act No. XIV of 1863 ;

and appeals from decisions in such suits shall be cognizable in accordance with the provisions of Act No. X of 1859 and Act No. XIV of 1863.

17. In matters connected with the assessment and collection of any sum leviable under this Act, an appeal shall lie to the Commissioner from the order of the Collector, provided that such appeal be presented within thirty days from the date of the order.

The Commissioner's decision on such appeal shall be final ; but all such decisions may be reviewed by the Board of Revenue.

18. The Lieutenant-Governor may invest any Power to invest subordinate officers with powers of Collector.

officer subordinate to a Collector with all or any of the powers of a Collector for the purposes of this Act.

The orders passed by any officer so invested shall be subject to revision by the Collector of the district.

19. All sums due on account of any rate imposed under this Act shall be Recovery of rates.

recoverable as if they were arrears of land-revenue due on the land on account of which the rate is payable.

Supplementary powers of Local Government.

20. The Lieutenant-Governor may, by notification from time to time,

(a) prescribe by what instalments and at what times such rate shall be payable, and by whom it shall be assessed, collected and paid ;

(b) make rules consistent with this Act for the guidance of officers in matters connected with its enforcement ;

(c) exempt any portion of the territories under his government from the operation of this Act, or exempt any estate from liability to pay the whole or any part of any rate under this Act and cancel such exemptions ;

(d) direct fresh measurements and vary the assessment accordingly.

Every notification under this section shall be published in the local Gazette.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 9th February 1878, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. IV OF 1878.

An Act to amend the law relating to the levy of rates on land in Oudh.

WHEREAS, in order to defray the expenditure incurred and to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine, it is necessary to make a permanent increase to the annual revenues ; and it is accordingly expedient to provide, in the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, for the levy on land of rates in addition to those now applied to local purposes ;

and whereas it is also expedient to empower the said Chief Commissioner to provide for the payment of certain charges incurred or to be incurred on account of canals and railways ;

and whereas it is therefore expedient to repeal the Oudh Local Rates Act, and to re enact it with the amendments hereinafter appearing ;

It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. This Act may be called " The Oudh Local Rates Act, 1878 : "

Short title.

It extends only to the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of Oudh ;

Local extent.

And it shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council by notification in the Gazette of India directs.

Commencement.

2. On and from such date, Act No. XVII of 1871 (to provide for the levy of rates on land in Oudh) shall be repealed. But all rates imposed, committees appointed and notifications published under the said Act, shall be deemed to have been respectively imposed, appointed and published under this Act.

And all assignments made under section ten of the said Act shall be deemed to be allotments made under this Act.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act—

" Land " means land assessed to the land-revenue, and includes land whereof the land-revenue has been wholly or in part released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned ;

" Landholder " means the person in receipt of the rent of any land, and responsible for the payment of the land-revenue, if any, assessed on the estate. It also includes a muafidar or other person holding land, the land-revenue of which has been wholly or in part released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned ;

" Estate " means all or any part of a village separately assessed to the land-revenue, or separately exempted from payment thereof ; and

" Annual value "

" Annual value " means—

- (2) Where such settlement is not liable to periodical revision, or where the land-revenue or a portion thereof has been released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned—double the amount which, if the settlement were liable to periodical revision, would, but for such non-liability, release, composition, redemption or assignment, have been assessed as land-revenue on the estate:

“Year” means the year commencing on the first day of April.

4. The Chief Commissioner may impose on every estate a rate not exceeding two and a quarter per cent. on its annual value. Such rate shall be payable annually by the landholder, independently of, and in addition to, any land-revenue for the time being assessed on the estate and any local cesses now leviable therefrom.

5. All sums due on account of any rate imposed under this Act, shall be recoverable as if they were arrears of land-revenue due in respect of the land on account of which the rate is payable.

6. Every landholder may recover from his co-sharers or pattidars, if any, a share of any such rate bearing the same proportion to the whole rate that the annual value of the share of such co-sharer or pattidar, recorded at the time of the settlement, bears to the annual value of the whole estate.

7. Whenever any such rate is charged on a landholder on account of land in the use or occupation of an under-proprietor or permanent lessee, or of a tenant with right of occupancy, whose rent has been fixed or recorded by a competent Court, such landholder may realise from such under-proprietor, lessee or tenant a share of the rate bearing the same proportion to the whole rate that the share of such under-proprietor, lessee or tenant in the annual value of the land on which the rate is charged bears to half the annual value of such land.

8. Suits for the recovery from co-sharers, under-proprietors, permanent lessees or tenants as aforesaid, of any sum on account of any such rate, and all suits on account of illegal exaction of such rate, or for the settlement of accounts, shall be cognizable by the Courts of Revenue in Oudh;

and the provisions of the Oudh Rent Act (No. XIX of 1868), chapters VII, VIII and IX, as to similar classes of suits, shall apply to the suits mentioned in the former part of this section.

9. An appeal shall lie to the Commissioner from the order of any person authorized, under the power hereinafter conferred, to make assessments, in any matter connected with the assessment of any sum leviable under this Act: provided that such appeal be presented within thirty days from the date of the order.

The decision of the Commissioner on such appeal shall be final; but all such decisions may be reviewed by the Chief Commissioner.

10. The amount standing at the credit of the fund constituted under section nine of the said Act No. XVII of 1871 at the time this Act comes into force and the proceeds of all rates imposed under this Act shall be carried to the credit of a general provincial fund.

11. (a). From such fund the Chief Commissioner shall in each year appropriate, in such manner as the Governor General in Council from time to time directs, such amount, not exceeding four-ninths of the proceeds of the rate assessed in such year under this Act, as the Governor General in Council may direct, for the purpose of increasing the revenues available for defraying expenditure incurred or to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine in the said territories, or, if the Governor General in Council so directs, in any other part of British India.

(b). The Chief Commissioner may, from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, assign from such fund such amount as he thinks fit, to be applied in payment of charges incurred or to be incurred on account of such canals and railways as he may declare to be works of general provincial utility:

Provided that the amounts so assigned in any year shall not exceed one-eighteenth of the proceeds of the rates assessed in such year.

(2.) The construction and repair of school-houses, the maintenance and inspection of schools, the training of teachers, and the establishment of scholarships;

(3.) The construction and repair of hospitals, dispensaries, lunatic asylums, markets, wells and tanks; the payment of all charges connected with the purposes for which such buildings or works have been constructed, and any other local works and undertakings of public utility likely to promote the public health, comfort or convenience:

Provided that the amounts so allotted in any year for any district shall not be less than one-half of the proceeds of the rate assessed in such district in such year.

12. Any portion of such allotment remaining unexpended at the end of the year in which the allotment was made may, at the discretion of the Chief Commissioner, be re-allotted for expenditure in the same district, or may be applied for the benefit of the Province of Oudh in such manner as the Chief Commissioner from time to time directs.

13. Accounts of the receipts in respect of all rates levied under this Act, and of the receipts and expenditure of the allotment made under section eleven, shall be kept in each district.

Such accounts shall, at all reasonable times, be open to the inspection of the local Committee hereinafter mentioned.

An abstract of such accounts shall be prepared annually in English and in the vernacular language of the district, and shall be open, at all reasonable times, to public inspection at suitable places within the district without the payment of any fee.

An abstract of such accounts shall also be published annually in the local Gazette.

14. The Chief Commissioner shall appoint, in each district, a Committee, consisting of not less than six persons, for the purpose of assisting in determining how the amount allotted under section eleven shall be applied, and in the supervision and control of the expenditure of such amount:

Provided that not less than one-half of the members of such Committee shall be persons not in the service of Government, and owning or occupying land in the district, or residing therein.

The Chief Commissioner may, from time to time, prescribe the manner in which the members of such Committee shall be appointed or removed, and shall define the functions and authority of such Committee.

15. The Chief Commissioner may, by notification,

Power to make supplementary rules.

- (a) prescribe by what instalments and at what times any rate imposed under this Act shall be payable, and by whom it shall be assessed, collected and paid;
- (b) make rules consistent with this Act for the guidance of officers in matters connected with its enforcement;
- (c) exempt any portion of the territories under his administration from the operation of this Act and cancel such exemption.

Every notification under this section shall be published in the local Gazette.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 9th February 1878, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—

ACT No. V OF 1878.

An Act to amend the law relating to the levy of rates on land in the Panjáb.

WHEREAS, in order to defray the expenditure

Preamble.

incurred and to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine, it is necessary to make a permanent increase to the annual revenues, and it is accordingly expedient to provide, in the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb, for the levy on land of rates in addition to those now applied to local purposes; and whereas it is therefore expedient to repeal the Panjáb Local Rates Act, 1871, and to re-enact with the amendments hereinafter appearing; is hereby enacted as follows:—

- 1. This Act may be called "The Panjáb Local Rates Act, 1878."

Short title.

It extends only to the territories for the time being administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb;

Local extent.

And it shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council by notification in the Gazette of India directs.

Commencement.

- 2. From such date the Panjáb Local Rates Act, 1871, shall be repealed.

Repeal of Act XX of 1871.

But all rates imposed, sums credited to the Local Government, committees appointed and notifications published under the said Act, shall be deemed to have been respectively imposed, credited, appointed and published under this Act;

And all assignments made under the said Act shall be deemed to be allotments made under this Act.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act—

'Land' means land assessed to the land-revenue, and includes land whereof the land-revenue has been, wholly or in part, released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned;

'Land.'

'Landholder' means any person responsible for the payment of the land-revenue, if any, assessed on land. It also includes a person holding land, the land-revenue of which has been, wholly or in part, released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned;

'Landholder.'

'Annual value.'

'Annual value' means—

(1) double the land-revenue for the time being assessed on any land, whether such assessment be leviable or not;

(2) and, where the land-revenue has been permanently assessed, or has been, wholly or in part, compounded for or redeemed—double the amount which, but for such permanent assessment, composition or redemption, would have been leviable;

'Year.'

'Year' means the year commencing on the first day of April.

- 4. All land shall be liable to the payment of such rate as the Lieutenant-Governor from time to time directs, not exceeding eight pies for every rupee of its annual value.

Such rate shall be paid by the land-holder independently of, and in addition to, any land-revenue assessed on land for the land-revenue of which he is responsible, and any local cesses now leviable therefrom:

Provided that wherever the proprietors of any land pay the land-revenue in kind to any assignee of revenue or any village headman, such assignee of revenue or village headman shall be responsible for the payment of the said rate, instead of the proprietors, and no demand shall be made by any such assignee or village headman on any such proprietor in respect of the payment of any such rate.

- 5. Whenever a rate is charged on a landholder

Power to recover a share of rate from tenant.

as the excess of the annual value over the rent paid by such tenant bears to half the annual value.

6. The proceeds of all rates imposed under this Act shall be carried to the credit of the Local Government.

7. From the sums so credited, the Lieutenant-Governor shall in each year appropriate such amount, not exceeding one-fourth of the total proceeds of the rates assessed in such year, as the Governor General in Council may direct, for the purpose of increasing the revenues available for defraying the expenditure incurred or to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine in the said territories; or, if the Governor General in Council so directs, in any other part of British India.

Subject to such appropriation, the Lieutenant-Governor shall from time to time allot from the said sums such amount as he thinks fit, to be applied in each district for expenditure on all or any of the following purposes:—

(2.) The construction and repair of school-houses, the maintenance and inspection of schools, the training of teachers, and the establishment of scholarships;

(3.) The construction and repair of hospitals, dispensaries, lunatic asylums, wells and tanks, the payment of all charges connected with the purposes for which such buildings or works have been constructed, the planting and preservation of trees, and any other local works likely to promote the public health, comfort or convenience;

Provided that the amounts so allotted in any year for any district shall not in the aggregate be less than three-fourths of the proceeds of the rate assessed in such district in such year.

8. In the case of works which benefit more districts than one, the Lieutenant-Governor may determine what proportion of the expenses of the work shall be borne by each of the districts benefited thereby, and such proportion shall be payable out of the allotments made as aforesaid to such districts respectively.

9. Any portion of such allotment remaining unexpended at the end of the year in which the allotment was made may, at the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor, be re-allotted for expenditure in the same district, or may be applied for the benefit of the Panjāb, to such one or more of the purposes mentioned in the second clause of section seven as the Lieutenant-Governor from time to time directs.

10. Accounts of the receipts in respect of all rates levied under this Act and of the allotments made under section seven shall be kept in each district.

Such accounts shall, at all reasonable times, be open to the inspection of the local committee hereinafter mentioned.

An abstract of such accounts shall be prepared annually in English and in the vernacular language of the district, and shall be open, at all reasonable times, to public inspection at suitable places within the district without the payment of any fee.

An abstract of such accounts shall also be published annually in the local Gazette.

11. The Lieutenant-Governor shall appoint, in each district, a committee, consisting of not less than six persons, for the purpose of determining how the amount allotted under section seven shall be applied, and of supervising and controlling such amount:

Provided that not less than one-third of the members of such committee shall be persons not in the service of Government, and owning or occupying land in the district, or residing therein:

The Lieutenant-Governor shall from time to time prescribe the manner in which the members of such committee shall be appointed or removed, and shall define the functions and authority of such committee.

12. Suits for the recovery from co-sharers, tenants or others, of any sum on account of any rate imposed under this Act, and all suits on account of illegal exaction of such rate, or for the settlement of accounts, shall be cognizable by the Courts which, for the time being, have cognizance of suits for rent due on land.

13. In matters connected with the assessment and collection of any sum leviable under this Act, an appeal shall lie from the order of any person authorized under this Act to make assessments, to such person as the Lieutenant-Governor appoints:

Provided that such appeal shall be presented within thirty days from the date of such order.

The order of such person on such appeal shall be final.

14. All sums due on account of any rate imposed under this Act shall be recoverable as if they were arrears of land-revenue due on the land on account of which the rate is payable.

15. The Lieutenant-Governor may by notification from time to time—

(a) prescribe by what instalments and at what times such rate shall be payable, and by whom it shall be assessed, collected and paid;

(b) appoint the person or class of persons to whom the appeals referred to in section thirteen shall lie;

(c) make rules consistent with this Act for the guidance of officers in matters connected with its enforcement;

(d) exempt wholly or in part any portions of the territories under his government from the operation of this Act, or exempt any land from liability to pay the whole or any part of any rate under this Act, and cancel such exemption;

(e) direct fresh measurements and vary the assessment accordingly.

Every notification under this section shall be published in the local Gazette.

Secy. to the Govt. of India.

(First Publication.)

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 13th February 1878, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. VI OF 1878.

An Act to amend the law relating to Treasure Trove.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to treasure-trove; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Preamble.

Preliminary.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Treasure Trove Act, 1878 :"

Short title.

It extends to the whole of British India;

Extent.

And it shall come into force at once.

Commencement.

2. The enactments specified in the schedule hereto annexed shall be repealed to the extent mentioned in the third column of the same schedule.

Repeal of enactments.

3. In this Act—

"treasure" means anything of any value hidden in the soil, or in anything affixed thereto;

"Treasure."

"Collector" means (1) any revenue officer in independent charge of a district, and (2) any officer appointed by the Local Government to perform the functions of a Collector under this Act.

"Collector."

When any person is entitled, under any reservation in an instrument of transfer of any land or thing affixed thereto, to treasure in such land or thing, he shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be the owner of such land or thing.

Owner.

Procedure on finding Treasure.

4. Whenever any treasure exceeding in amount or value ten rupees is found, the finder shall, as soon as practicable, give to the Collector notice in writing—

Notice by finder of treasure.

(a) of the nature and amount or approximate value of such treasure;

(b) of the place in which it was found;

(c) of the date of the finding;

and either deposit the treasure in the nearest Government Treasury, or give the Collector such security as the Collector thinks fit, to produce the treasure at such time and place as he may from time to time require.

5. On receiving a notice under section four, the Notification requiring claimants to appear.

Collector shall, after making such enquiry (if any) as he thinks fit, take the following steps (namely) :—

(a) he shall publish a notification in such manner as the Local Government from time to time prescribes in this behalf, to the effect that, on a certain date (mentioning it), certain treasure (mentioning its nature, amount and approximate value) was found in a certain place (mentioning it); and requiring all persons claiming the treasure, or any part thereof, to appear personally or by agent before the Collector on a day and at a place therein mentioned, such day not being earlier than four months, or later than six months, after the date of the publication of such notification;

(b) when the place in which the treasure appears to the Collector to have been found was at the date of the finding in the possession of some person other than the finder, the Collector shall also serve on such person a special notice in writing to the same effect.

6. Any person having any right to such treasure or any part thereof, as owner of the place in which it was found or otherwise, and not appearing as required by the notification issued under section five, shall forfeit such right.

7. On the day notified under section five, the Collector shall cause the treasure to be produced before him, and shall enquire into and determine by the Collector.

(a) the person by whom, the place in which, and the circumstances under which, such treasure was found; and

(b) as far as is possible the person by whom, and the circumstances under which, such treasure was hidden.

8. If, upon an enquiry made under section seven, the Collector sees reason to believe that the treasure was hidden within one hundred years before the date of the finding, by a person appearing as required by the said notification and claiming such treasure, or by some other person under whom such person claims, the Collector shall make an order adjourning the hearing of the case for such period as he deems sufficient, to allow of a suit being instituted in the Civil Court by the claimant, to establish his right.

9. If upon such enquiry the Collector sees no reason to believe that the treasure was so hidden; or if, where a period is fixed under section eight, no suit is instituted as aforesaid within such period to the knowledge of the Collector; or if such suit is instituted within such period, and the plaintiff's claim is finally rejected;

the Collector may declare the treasure to be ownerless.

Any person aggrieved by a declaration made under this section may appeal against the same within two months from the date thereof to the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority.

Subject to such appeal, every such declaration shall be final and conclusive.

10. When a declaration has been made in respect of any treasure under section nine, such treasure shall, in accordance with the provisions hereinafter contained, either be delivered to the finder thereof, or be divided between him and the owner of the place in which it has been found in manner hereinafter provided.

11. When a declaration has been made in respect of any treasure as aforesaid, and no person other than the finder of such treasure has appeared as required by the notification published under section five and claimed a share of the treasure as owner of the place in which it has been found, the Collector shall deliver such treasure to the finder thereof.

12. When a declaration has been made as afore-

When only one such person claims and his claim is not disputed, treasure to be divided, said in respect of any treasure, and only one person other than the finder of such treasure has so appeared and claimed, and the claim of such person is not disputed by the finder, the Collector shall proceed to divide the treasure between the finder and the person so claiming according to the following rule (namely) :—

If the finder and the person so claiming have not entered into any agreement then in force as to the disposal of the treasure, three-fourths of the treasure shall be allotted to such finder and the residue to such person. If such finder and such person have entered into any such agreement, the treasure shall be disposed of in accordance therewith :

Provided that the Collector may in any case, if he thinks fit, instead of dividing any treasure as directed by this section,

(a) allot to either party the whole or more than his share of such treasure, on such party paying to the Collector for the other party such sum of money as the Collector may fix as the equivalent of the share of such other party, or of the excess so allotted, as the case may be ; or

(b) sell such treasure or any portion thereof by public auction and divide the sale-proceeds between the parties according to the rule hereinbefore prescribed :

Provided also, that when the Collector has by his declaration under section nine rejected any claim made under this Act by any person other than the said finder or person claiming as owner of the place in which the treasure was found, such division shall not be made until after the expiration of two months without an appeal having been presented under section nine by the person whose claim has been so rejected, or, when an appeal has been so presented, after such appeal has been dismissed.

When the Collector has made a division under this section, he shall deliver to the parties the portions of such treasure, or the money in lieu thereof, to which they are respectively entitled under such division.

13. When a declaration has been made as afore-

In case of dispute as to ownership of place, proceedings to be stayed. said in respect of any treasure, and two or more persons have appeared, as aforesaid and each of them claimed as owner of the place where such treasure was found, or the right of any person who has so appeared and claimed is disputed by the finder of such treasure, the Collector shall retain such treasure and shall make an order staying his proceedings with a view to the matter being enquired into and determined by a Civil Court.

14. Any person who has so appeared and claimed

Settlement of such dispute. may, within one month from the date of such order, institute a suit in the Civil Court to obtain a decree declaring his right ; and in every such suit the finder of the treasure and all persons disputing such claim before the Collector shall be made defendants.

15. If any such suit is instituted and the plaintiff's claim is finally established therein, the Collector shall, subject to the provisions of section twelve, divide the treasure between him and the finder.

and division thereupon.

If no such suit is instituted as aforesaid, or if the claims of the plaintiffs in all such suits are finally rejected, the Collector shall deliver the treasure to the finder.

16. The Collector may, at any time after mak-

Power to acquire the treasure on behalf of Government. ing a declaration under section nine, and before delivering or dividing the treasure as hereinbefore provided, declare by writing under his hand his intention to acquire on behalf of the Government the treasure, or any specified portion thereof, by payment to the persons entitled thereto of a sum equal to the value of the materials of such treasure or portion, together with one-fifth of such value, and may place such sum in deposit in his treasury to the credit of such persons ; and thereupon such treasure or portion shall be deemed to be the property of Government, and the money so deposited shall be dealt with, as far as may be, as if it were such treasure or portion.

17. No decision passed or act done by the Col-

Decision of Collector final, and no suit to lie against him for acts done bona fide. lector under this Act shall be called in question by any Civil Court, and no suit or other proceeding shall lie against him for anything done in good faith in exercise of the powers hereby conferred.

18. A Collector making any enquiry under this Collector to exercise powers of Civil Court. Act may exercise any power conferred by the Code of Civil Procedure on a Civil Court for the trial of suits.

19. The Local Government may, from time to Power to make rules. time, make rules consistent with this Act, to regulate proceedings hereunder.

Such rules shall, on being published in the local Gazette, have the force of law.

Penalties.

20. If the finder of any treasure fails to give

Penalty on finder failing to give notice, &c. the notice, or does not either make the deposit or give the security, required by section four, or alters or attempts to alter such treasure so as to conceal its identity, the share of such treasure, or the money in lieu thereof to which he would otherwise be entitled, shall vest in Her Majesty, and he shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

20. If the owner of the place in which any Penalty on owner abetting offence under section 19. treasure is found abets, with-in the meaning of the Indian Penal Code, any offence under section nineteen, the share of such treasure, or the money in lieu thereof to which he would otherwise be entitled, shall vest in Her Majesty, and he shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be punished with imprisonment which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

(Third Publication.)

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 31st January 1878, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 2 of 1878.

A Bill to assimilate certain powers of the Local Governments of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

WHEREAS the Lieutenant-Governorship of the North-Western Provinces and the Chief Commissionership of Oudh are now united under the administration of a single officer; and whereas it is expedient that, so long as such union continues, the powers of the Local Government of Oudh under the enactments hereinafter mentioned should resemble the powers of the Local Government of the North-Western Provinces under the same or like enactments; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. In the Oudh Rent Act, 1868, sections 29, 85, 87 and 91, the following words shall be omitted (namely): "with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council," "subject to any orders that may from time to time be issued by the Governor General in Council," "subject to any orders in this behalf that may from time to time be made by the Governor General of India in Council," and "with the sanction of the Governor General of India in Council."

2. For the first sentence of section 6 of the Prisons Act, 1870, the following shall be substituted (namely):—"An Inspector General of Prisons shall be appointed in the North-Western Provinces, the Panjāb and Oudh by the Local Government, and in the Central Provinces and British Burma by the Governor General in Council."

3. In the Oudh Land-Revenue Act, 1876, section 4, the following words shall be omitted in both the places in which they occur (namely):—"subject to such rules as the Governor General in Council may from time to time prescribe in this behalf;" and in sections 7 and 9 of the same Act the following words shall be omitted (namely): "subject to such rules as the Governor General in Council from time to time prescribes in this behalf;" and in sections 14, 19, 20, 51, 183, 212 and 220 of the same Act, the following words shall be omitted (namely):—"with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council."

To section 43 of the same Act the following words shall be added (namely):—"provided that in the case of settlements of individual mahāls or parts of mahāls, undertaken at other times than at the general settlement and sanctioned by the Chief Commissioner, such confirmation shall not be necessary."

4. In the first clause of the Oudh Laws Act, 1875, section 39, the following words shall be omitted (namely): "with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council."

5. For the purpose of the Prisoners Act, 1871, sections 30 and 31, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh shall be deemed to be subject to the same Local Government.

6. This Act shall come into force on the passing thereof, and shall continue in force until the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, otherwise direct.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Oudh having been placed under the control of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, it has become desirable, for administrative purposes, to assimilate certain powers of the Chief Commissioner in Oudh under the Rent Act, the Revenue Act and the Laws Act to the powers that, as Lieutenant-Governor, he exercises in the North-Western Provinces under Acts dealing with like subjects. This Bill has been framed to effect this assimilation, and no change whatever is contemplated in the distinctive features of the Oudh administration, and still less in any of the rights or privileges of any class or classes of persons in Oudh, which have been guaranteed by the Government of India either in Acts of the legislature or by established practice.

For the purpose of removing prisoners from one jail to another or to a lunatic asylum, it is convenient that, under present circumstances, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh should be treated as forming one Local Government. The Bill contains a provision to this effect.

The proposed law is intended to continue in force only so long as the union of the two Provinces under the same Head continues.

CALCUTTA;
The 16th January 1878. }

D. FITZPATRICK,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

The following Preliminary Report of a Select Committee, together with the Bill as settled by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 9th February 1878:—

We, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to define and amend the law relating to the Transfer of Property was referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin.

2. In revising this important measure we have been guided by the three principles which the Government of India desires to regulate its policy of codification, namely, first, that as little change as possible should be made in the substance of the existing law, whether established by the Legislature or declared by judicial decisions; secondly, that no additions should be made to that law, which are not either necessary or clearly expedient; and, thirdly, that interference with contracts fairly made and usages long established is, prima facie, undesirable. We have also borne in mind the great deference due to the late Indian Law Commission, by which the bulk of the Bill was framed. With these preliminary remarks we proceed to describe and justify the alterations, omissions and additions which we have made.

CHAPTER I.—Preliminary.

3. We have here followed the Contract Act, section 1, by inserting a clause to save all enactments not expressly repealed, such, for instance, as the Acts limiting powers of guardians and managers to make sales and leases, and the provisions of the Panjáb Tenancy Act, section 32, which have been held to restrict to occupancy-tenants the right to sublet. We have also saved all incidents of contracts not inconsistent with the provisions of the Bill. Besides the Malabar mortgagee's option, which the Bill as introduced expressly preserved, there must be many other incidents of Native contracts with which it is desirable not to interfere. We have also saved the right to anything affixed to the soil by tenants under leases granted before the proposed Act comes into force.

CHAPTER II.—Assurances of Immovable Property.

4. We have struck out the section relating to easements, as it will more fitly come into the Bill relating to those rights, which is now in preparation.

5. Section 6 of the Bill as introduced would have often rendered persons liable to an obligation, or at least to be sued on an obligation, the existence of which was unknown to them. We think that this is obviously inexpedient, and have therefore made the section an embodiment of the well-known rule, that a contract between the respective owners of two neighbouring parcels of land, that one of them shall do or refrain from doing something on his parcel for the benefit of the other parcel, may be enforced in equity against all persons claiming the former parcel under him with notice of the contract.

6. We think that section 7 of the Bill, as introduced, should be omitted, as it would allow incidents of a novel kind to be devised and attached to property at the fancy or caprice of any owner. It would, moreover, allow the grantee's enjoyment of the property to be destroyed or materially lessened by the exercise of the right reserved.

7. We have also struck out section 9 of the Bill as introduced. The rules of construction therein referred to, besides being inapplicable in some respects to instruments executed inter vivos, are contained in the testamentary portion of the Succession Act, which does not apply to Muhammadans anywhere, and applies to Hindús only in the Presidency-towns and the Lower Provinces.

8. We have provided (section 7) rules as to the right of innocent grantees for valuable consideration without notice, of persons like the managers of the property of a minor or an undivided family, childless Hindú widows in possession of their deceased husband's property, and benámidárs and other ostensible owners, who have only a restricted power of alienation. Our rules on this head are in accordance with decisions of the Privy Council and the Calcutta High Court.

9. We have redrawn section 13 of the Bill as introduced, so as to save the rights of the creditors of the person paying the consideration for a benámi transaction, and as the section will apply to benámi leases as well as to benámi sales, we have transferred it to chapter II.

CHAPTER III.—Sales.

10. We have declared (section 10) the respective liabilities of an intending seller and an intending buyer to make disclosures of defects and advantages.

11. We have introduced into section 11 clauses as to the seller's duty to produce title-deeds for examination, to answer questions respecting the property and to discharge incumbrances; as to the buyer's right to abandon the contract when the seller materially alters the property; and as to the custody and production of title-deeds after completion. We have also declared when the property vests in the purchaser, and explained when the purchase is completed.

12. Clause (a) of section 11 of the Bill as introduced, would have rendered a vendor liable for damage sustained by the purchaser owing to the loss of his bargain, and it would have made a vendor, like a mortgagor, warrant his title as against all the world. We think that in this respect his liability should be restricted, as it is in England, to acts done by himself or those through whom he claims. Section 11, clause (j), has been framed accordingly.

13. Clauses (e) and (f) of the same section, as introduced, are corollaries from the doctrine of equitable ownership and appear to us to be inconsistent with section 12, which declares that a mere contract for sale shall not transfer the property. Why, for instance, should the buyer be made liable to bear loss arising from destruction of property which is not his own? We have therefore omitted these clauses. Under any circumstances they would have been of little use in a country where, as a rule, the making of the contract is immediately followed by the completion of the purchase.

14. We have provided (section 12) for cases where, before completion, the buyer becomes insolvent. This provision is modelled on the present English law, 32 & 33 Vic., c. 71, ss. 23, 24. We have also provided for the following matters:—

- (a) the liability to the seller of the buyer of a leasehold (section 13) ;
- (b) the liability to the seller of the buyer of an equity of redemption (section 14) ;
- (c) money received under a fire-policy by the seller for damage done after the date of the contract (section 15) ;
- (d) joint-purchases (section 17) ;
- (e) the rights arising where two estates are subject to a common charge and one of the estates is sold (section 18) ;
- (f) the exemption of bond fide buyers of trust-property from seeing to the application of the purchase-money (section 19) ;
- (g) the rights of the seller where there is default on the part of the buyer and the rights of the buyer where there is default on the part of the seller (section 20).

CHAPTER IV.—Exchanges.

15. In this chapter, which corresponds with chapter V of the Bill as introduced, we have made no substantial change except the insertion of a section (22), providing (in accordance with the Code Civil, Art. 1704) that if one of the parties prove that the other was not owner of the thing given or agreed to be given to the former in exchange, the former cannot be compelled to deliver that which he has promised in counter-exchange; but when he has received the thing given to him in exchange, he may be compelled to return it.

16. We have also provided, in accordance with the same Code, Art. 1705, that the party deprived of the thing he has received in exchange by reason of invalidity of title caused by anything done by the other party or any person through whom the latter claims, may at his option sue for compensation or sue for the thing given by him.

CHAPTER V.—Mortgages and Charges.

17. We have made it clear that the mortgages here dealt with are only mortgages of immoveable property and sub-mortgages. Mortgages of policies, ships, machinery, furniture, cattle and other moveable property require to be separately treated.

18. We have inserted a section (26) requiring that every mortgage shall be created by an assurance signed by the mortgagor and attested by at least two witnesses. As mortgages by verbal agreement are now rarely if ever made, this will not substantially alter the present practice, and will obviously tend to prevent fraud and litigation.

19. The Bill as introduced permits the mortgagor to deposit the amount due only in the District Court. This might lead to much inconvenience, and we have modified section 28, clause (b), so as to allow the mortgagor to deposit in any Court in which he could have instituted a suit for redemption.

20. We have, in accordance with the present law, precluded (section 28) a person interested in part only of the mortgaged property from redeeming his own part only, and a person interested in part only of the mortgage-money from foreclosing his own part only.

21. We have given (section 29) the mortgagee the rights which he has under the covenants for title contained in an English mortgage-deed. When the mortgagee has a right to sue for the mortgage-money, these covenants are of no practical use during the continuance of the mortgage; but they become valuable after a foreclosure or sale.

22. We have declared (section 30) that, where the property is a lease for years and the mortgagee, while in possession, obtains a renewal, the mortgagor upon redemption shall have the benefit of the new lease.

23. We have imposed (section 32) on a mortgagor making a subsequent mortgage the duty of disclosing to the subsequent mortgagee the previous mortgages, and of giving notice to the prior mortgagees of the subsequent mortgage.

24. Although from the theoretical point of view there is much to be said in favour of discarding the distinctions between the various kinds of mortgages used in India, we think that the amount of simplicity gained would not justify the amount of disturbance created, and that, in practice, confusion and hardship would be caused if simple mortgages and mortgages by conditional sale were allowed (as they would be by the Bill as introduced) to take possession, or if simple and usufructuary mortgages were allowed to foreclose. Moreover, any such extension of the power to foreclose would enable large classes of speculators and money-lenders to defeat the intentions with which the Legislature framed the new Code of Civil Procedure, sections 320—322, by obtaining simple mortgages and then instituting foreclosure-suits. We have therefore introduced (section 34) a clause the effect of which will be to maintain the law as it stands in this respect.

25. We have also (section 34) prohibited mortgagees from interfering with the right of the public to the continued use of undertakings, such as canals and railways, in the maintenance of which the public are interested. The remedy of such mortgagees will be to obtain a receiver of the profits of the undertaking.

26. We have provided (section 36) for the case where the parties to a mortgage have omitted to stipulate expressly for interest.

27. We are of opinion that, in the absence of an express contract to the contrary, no mortgagee should be entitled as such to take possession, and we have inserted (section 37) a clause to this effect. We have, however, allowed the mortgagee to sue for a receiver after the expiration of one year from the time when the principal has become payable, or after interest has been in arrear for six months; and we have empowered the Court, in any suit for foreclosure or sale, to appoint a receiver pending the proceedings in the suit.

28. We think that the mortgagee should be allowed to sue for the mortgage-money in our cases only, namely, (1) where the mortgagor binds himself expressly to pay the loan, (2) where the mortgagor remains in possession and allows the property to be sold for arrears of revenue, (3) where the property is destroyed by diluvion, fire or other superior force, and (4) in the case of an usufructuary mortgage, where the mortgagor is unable to give or secure possession. We have inserted a section (38) to this effect.

29. We have considered the question as to whether we should validate powers of sale in mortgages of property situate in the Mufassal, and we have come to the same conclusion as the Sadr Dīwānī Adālat came to in 1842, namely, that it would not be safe to entrust Indian money-lenders with powers so liable to abuse. We have therefore framed the section (39) corresponding with section 24 of the Bill as introduced, so as to invalidate such powers except where the lender is the Government, or the property is situate in the Presidency Towns or Rangoon.

30. We have limited (section 40) the right of a mortgagee in possession to insure to cases in which the property is insurable at ordinary rates. In the case of an inflammable property, the mortgagee might, under the Bill as introduced, impose an unfair burden on the mortgagor.

31. We have provided (section 41) for accessions to the mortgaged property.

32. We have framed the section (43) corresponding with section 17 of the Bill as introduced, so as to exempt mortgagees who, under a contract in writing, take the profits of the mortgaged property in lieu of interest, from keeping accounts of their receipts.

33. Where a mortgagor in possession fails to pay arrears of revenue and the estate is consequently sold, our Courts have ruled that the mortgagee has a charge on the surplus of the sale-proceeds after payment thereof of such arrears. We have in section 45 adopted this ruling.

34. The Bill as introduced had nothing to shew that Lord Denman's doctrine in Pickard v. Sears applies to mortgages. We have therefore inserted the following :—

“46. Where, through the fraud or gross neglect of a prior mortgagee, another person has been induced to advance money on the security of the mortgaged property, the prior mortgagee shall be postponed to the subsequent mortgagee.”

35. The Bill should, we think, embody the equitable principles that a creditor who can satisfy his debt out of several funds shall so exercise his right as not to take from another creditor the fund which forms his only security, and that a fund which is equally liable with another to pay a debt shall not escape because the creditor has been paid out of that other fund alone. We have therefore inserted sections (50, 51) as to what English lawyers call marshalling securities and contribution.

36. Though the matter is one rather of procedure than of substantive law, we have inserted a rule (section 52) as to the proper parties to suits for redemption, foreclosure or sale, which will save the right of subsequent incumbrancers to redeem, and, if a decree for sale is made, conclude them.

37. We have provided (sections 54 and 60) that in suits for foreclosure and redemption, upon good cause shewn, the time fixed by the Court for payment may be enlarged. We believe that this power (which is constantly exercised by Courts of equity) will be in accordance with the feelings of the people of many parts of India where, until recently, the power to redeem was held to last for ever, and even the long term of sixty years fixed by the Limitation Act is sometimes regarded as an unfair innovation.

38. We have designedly withheld power to open foreclosures.

39. We have enumerated the persons entitled to redeem as follows :—

“58. Besides the mortgagor, any of the following persons may institute a suit for redemption of the mortgaged property :—

(a) any person (other than the mortgagee) having any interest in or charge upon the property :

(b) any person having any interest in or charge upon the right to redeem the property :

(c) any surety for the payment of the mortgage-debt or any part thereof :

(d) the guardian of the property of a minor mortgagor :

(e) the committee or other legal curator of a lunatic or idiot mortgagor :

(f) the judgment-creditor of the mortgagor, when he has obtained execution :

(g) a creditor of the mortgagor who has in a suit for the administration of his estate obtained a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property.

Explanation.—An easement is not an interest within the meaning of clause (a).”

40. When property is mortgaged for successive debts to successive mortgagees, we have expressly authorised (section 62) any mesne mortgagee to institute a suit to redeem the prior mortgagees and to foreclose those that are posterior to himself. We have given in the third schedule a form of the decree passed in such a suit.

41. We think that as a person having a charge has a mere right of realization, he should not be allowed to foreclose, and should be only entitled, under the proposed Act, to institute a suit for the sale of the property charged. We have framed section 68 accordingly. We have introduced a section (69) providing for the merger of charges. But the section in its present form is not to be understood as representing our final opinion on the subject.

CHAPTER VI.—Leases.

42. We have prefixed to this chapter a section (70) declaring the respective duties of proposing lessors and lessees to make disclosures of defects and advantages.

43. As the law stands, both in England and, as a general rule, in India, there is no implied warranty on the letting of land or an unfurnished house that it is fit for cultivation or occupation; there is no implied obligation on the landlord to repair the premises, and, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, the tenant is bound to keep and leave them in good repair; and the landlord does not warrant his title, but merely covenants that the tenant paying his rent and performing his covenants may peaceably enjoy the property during the term without interruption by the landlord or any one claiming through him. We think that the Bill should, in these respects, accord with the law as above stated, and we have therefore struck out, in section 44, of the Bill as introduced the latter half of clause (b) and the whole of clause (f), and substituted for clauses (c) and (d) a clause providing for quiet enjoyment by the lessee. But there is no doubt that, in certain parts of India and with regard to certain classes of houses, usages have become established with regard to repairs, with which it is undesirable to interfere. We have, therefore, made our provisions as to liability to repair subject to local usage.

44. Where part of the property leased is destroyed by superior force, we think that the lease should become void as to that part, that any rent or fine payable under the lease should proportionately abate, and that a proportionate part of any fine paid by the lessee should be returned. If the lessor reinstate the part destroyed, he and the lessee can come to a new agreement. We have altered clause (f) in accordance with these views.

45. We think that no lessee should, without the lessor's consent, erect any permanent structure on the property, except for agricultural purposes, and we have made provision to that effect in section 71, clause (m). Under the Bill as introduced the tenant might have erected unsightly buildings on his holding and thereby seriously injured the landlord's contiguous property.

46. We have struck out the words authorising a lessee to remove fixtures after the termination of his lease. They might have prevented the lessor from letting the property to another at the end of the term.

47. We have declared (section 71, clause r) that the power of transfer conferred on a lessee shall not be deemed to authorise an occupancy-ryot to assign his interest. This is the law in Bengal, in the absence of a special custom: the saving clause in section 2 will leave unaffected the right of occupancy-tenants in the Panjáb.

48. We have provided (section 73) for the insolvency of the lessee, and enabled the receiver of his property, with the leave of the Court, to disclaim the property leased. This provision, like the similar clause in chapter III, is founded on 32 & 33 Vic., c. 71, sections 23, 24.

49. We have declared (section 74), in accordance with the present law, that a tenancy begins on entry, and that a lessee before entry cannot sue for trespass.

50. We have stated (section 76) the various ways in which a lease may be determined: we have explained (section 77) the law as to the waiver of forfeiture or a notice to quit; and we have provided by the same section for relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent. Power to grant such relief has long been exercised by Courts of equity on payment of arrears and the landlord's costs, and a like power was, by 23 & 24 Vic., c. 126, conferred on the Common-law Courts. Act X of 1859, section 78, and Bengal Act VIII of 1869, section 52, provide for stay of execution of a decree for ejectment on payment into Court within fifteen days from its date, and we propose to leave this procedure untouched.

51. Strong representations have been made to us that, in the case of European and East Indian married women, restraints on anticipation should continue to be allowed. We have therefore added a proviso to section 82 (corresponding with section 52 of the Bill as introduced) which will have the desired effect.

52. We think that section 83 in its present state requires further consideration. But in deference to the Indian Law Commissioners we have let the section stand as they framed it.

53. We think sections 85 and 86 (corresponding with sections 55 and 56 of the Bill as introduced) should not apply to Natives; and we have made a provision to this effect.

CHAPTER VIII.—Discretion of the Courts to deal with settled Land.

54. We think that the delicate jurisdiction which this chapter proposes to confer should be exerciseable only by the High Courts. We have altered the wording of section 88 accordingly.

55. We have recast section 90 (=section 68 of the Bill as introduced) so as to restrict the privilege of appearing, &c., to persons interested in the land and to persons permitted by the Court to appear.

CHAPTER IX.—Gifts for Religious and Charitable Purposes.

56. We have exempted Natives from the operation of this chapter, which would have interfered with their religious usages: we have confined it expressly to immoveable property; and we have provided that notice of the assurances contemplated shall be given to the Local Government.

CHAPTER X.—Owners of Limited Interests.

57. It is said that Hindú law allows the person increasing by his own exertions the value of an estate a larger share in the increase than he possesses in the corpus. We have therefore saved (section 99) in such cases any benefit to which the person making the increase is entitled under his personal law.

58. We have in the section (100) relating to the discovery of the deaths of tenants for life, taken care that the Court shall not be authorised to compel the appearance in public of pardah-women.

CHAPTER XI.—Powers.

59. We have here added rules declaratory of the present law, as to the following matters:—

- (a) the revocation of appointments (section 107):
- (b) the delegation of powers (section 108):
- (c) the application of the doctrine of election to appointments (section 120):
- (d) gifts by implication to the objects of powers (section 125):
- (e) the priority of interests created under powers (section 127):
- (f) the extinguishment of powers (section 128).

CHAPTER XII.—Property held by several Persons.

60. We have, at the request of our honourable colleague Mahārājā Jotindra Mohan Tagore, declared (section 130) that nothing in the clause authorising the Court in a suit for partition, to direct a sale and distribute the proceeds, shall apply to the property of an undivided family. But we have reason to believe that, in the Hindū community of Calcutta much difference of opinion exists as to the expediency of making such declaration, and we invite the especial attention of the Local Governments to this matter.

61. We have provided (section 134) that the buyer or mortgagee of a share of undivided immoveable property takes subject to the right of the co-owners to enforce a partition, and that, when such partition is effected, his right extends only to the share allotted to his transferor.

CHAPTER XIII.—Assignments of Things in Action.

62. When the debtor receives notice of the assignment, we have provided (section 137) that he shall give effect thereto unless he resides, or the property is situate, in a foreign country, and the title of the person in whose favour the assignment is made is not complete according to the law of such country.

The First Schedule.

63. We have added to the enactments proposed for repeal, 4 Wm. & Mary, c. 16, as to clandestine mortgages, a matter provided for by section 32 of the amended Bill, Act XXXI of 1854, section 17, which is embodied in section 19 of the amended Bill, and Act I of 1877, section 13, which is inconsistent with section 12 of the same Bill. We have also, by repealing the words 'in writing' in the Specific Relief Act, sections 35 and 36, rendered those sections applicable to oral contracts.

The Second Schedule.

64. We have added forms of an exchange and an English mortgage, and for the form of lease contained in the Bill as introduced, we have substituted forms of a lease of a dwelling-house and a farm.

65. We have now enumerated the changes which we have made in the substance of the Bill. We have also made some in its wording and arrangement.

66. We recommend that the Bill as now amended be republished with this report in the Gazette of India and sent to the several Local Governments for consideration and for republication in the local Gazettes. In order to give ample time for the further discussion of so important a measure, we think that no steps should be taken to pass it into law until the Council re-assembles next November.

67. We desire, in conclusion, to express our obligations to the gentlemen who have favoured us with criticisms on the Bill. We are especially indebted to the Honourable Raymond West, a Judge of the High Court of Bombay; Mr. Grant, Officiating Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces; Pandit Lakshmi Nārāyana of Lucknow; Mr. J. W. Smyth, a Judge of the Panjab Chief Court, Muttusāmi Ayyar, c. i. e., Acting Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Madras, and Srīnivāsa Rao, a Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Madras; and Mr. Stokes desires to acknowledge some valuable remarks privately communicated to him by Sir R. Garth.

No. II.

A Bill to define and amend the law relating to the Transfer of Property, and for other purposes.

WHEREAS it is expedient to define and amend the law relating to the transfer of property, to owners of limited interests, and to powers, property held by several persons and apportionment; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called "The Transfer of Property Act, 1878:"

Short title.

Extent.

It extends to the whole of British India;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force on the first day of January 1879.

2. On and from that day the enactments specified in the first schedule hereto annexed shall be repealed to the extent mentioned in the third column thereof. But nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect—

(a) the provisions of any enactment not hereby repealed of certain expressly repealed: Acts, incidents, rights, liabilities, &c.

(b) any incidents of any contract which are not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act:

(c) any right or liability acquired or incurred before this Act comes into force, or any remedy in respect of any such right or liability:

(d) the right to anything affixed to the soil by the tenant under any lease granted before this Act comes into force:

(e) any right of pre-emption acquired after this Act comes into force:

(f) any sale in execution of a decree or order for arrears of rent or revenue:

And nothing contained in sections 85 and 86 and Chapter IX shall apply to Hindús, Muhamma-dans or Buddhists.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

Interpretation-clause.

"assurance" means any non-testamentary instrument which purports or operates to create, transfer, or otherwise dispose of, whether in present or in future, any right, title or interest, whether vested or contingent, to or in immoveable property:

the person so creating, transferring or otherwise disposing, is called a grant-

"grantor"

"grantee."

"grant."

operation effected by an assurance is called a grant:

"registered" means registered in British India under the law for the time being in force regulating the registration of documents:

"affixed to the soil" means—

(a) imbedded in the soil, as in the case of walls:

(b) permanently resting upon it, as in the case of buildings; or

(c) attached to what is so imbedded or so rests, as by means of nails, bolts, screws, cement, solder or other permanent fastening.

All words occurring in this Act and defined in the Indian Contract Act, 1872, shall have the meaning attributed to them respectively by that Act.

CHAPTER II.

OF ASSURANCES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

4. Every person competent to contract may make an assurance of immoveable property: but subject to the law for the time being in force as to the circumstances and extent in and to which he may dispose of such property.

Persons competent to make assurances.

5. An assurance may be made in the form in the second schedule hereto annexed, or in any other form which expresses an intention thereby, and without any further act on the part of the grantor, to create, transfer or otherwise dispose of any right, title or interest to or in immoveable property.

Form of assurance

6. Unless a contrary intention appears by the assurance, it shall be deemed to pass to the grantee all the interest which the grantor is capable of passing in the object of the grant, and to comprise—

(a) standing trees and all other products of the soil;

(b) things affixed to the soil, and, in the case of machinery so affixed, the moveable parts thereof;

(c) in the case of a house, the locks, keys, bars, doors and windows.

7. The owner of immoveable property cannot give to another a title there-to higher or more free from Title which grantor of immoveable property can give.

and when he has only a restricted power of alienating the property, he cannot give to another a title thereto valid as against third parties, except upon an alienation within the restriction:

Provided that where a grantor makes a grant as Protection to innocent grantees for value. (a) the manager of the property of a minor or an undivided family, (b) a childless Hindú widow in possession of her deceased husband's property, or (c) a benámídar or other ostensible owner, the grantee's title shall not be impeached if the grant has been made for a consideration and the grantee has acted in good faith and used due care and diligence to ascertain that the grantor had power to make the grant.

8. A contract in writing between the respective owners of two neighbouring parcels of land, that one of them shall do or refrain from doing something on his parcel for the benefit of the other parcel, is binding on all persons claiming the former parcel under him with actual knowledge of the contract, and may be enforced by the owner of the latter parcel or his legal representative.

A contract in writing between the owner of certain land and any other person, that the former shall do or refrain from doing something on the land for the benefit of the public, is binding on all persons claiming the land under the former with actual knowledge of the contract, and may be enforced by the latter, or his legal representative, or by the Secretary of State for India in Council.

9. Where a grant of immoveable property for a consideration is made to one person, and the consideration is paid by another, no trust shall result in favour of the person by whom such payment is made; but the property shall vest in the grantee, subject only to the provisions next following.

Every such grant shall be presumed to be fraudulent as against the creditors, at that time, of the person paying the consideration; and where a fraudulent intent is not disproved, a trust shall result in favour of such creditors to the extent necessary to satisfy their just demands.

CHAPTER III.

OF SALES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

10. A person proposing to sell immoveable property need not disclose defects therein which the buyer might with ordinary care discover: but the proposing seller must not conceal, or attempt to conceal, such defects, and he must disclose to the buyer all other defects therein of which the former is, and the latter is not, aware.

Where the proposing buyer stands, or has stood, as regards the property, in a fiduciary relation to the seller, he must disclose to the seller any fact which increases the value of the property itself, and of which the former has, during the existence of such relation, become aware. Save as aforesaid, a person proposing to buy immoveable property need not disclose any fact unknown to the seller which increases the value of the property itself: but the proposing buyer must disclose any such fact which increases the value of the seller's interest therein, and of which the former is, and the latter is not, aware.

Illustrations.

(a.) A proposes to sell a field to his neighbour B. A need not disclose the existence of an open foot-path over the field.

(b.) A proposes to sell a mine to B, who has the opportunity of examining it. A need not disclose the fact that he has himself worked the mine, but has abandoned the working as unprofitable.

(c.) A proposes to buy B's field. There is not, and never has been, any fiduciary relation between A and B. A need not disclose the fact that there are minerals under the field, though he knows that B is ignorant of it.

(d.) A proposes to buy from B his interest in certain property to which B is entitled on C's death. C, to the knowledge of A, but not of B, is actually dead or is about to die. A is bound to disclose this fact to B.

11. Unless a contrary intention appears from the contract or assurance, the Rights and liabilities of buyer and seller. buyer and the seller of immoveable property respectively have the rights, and are subject to the liabilities, mentioned in the ten rules next following, or such of them as are applicable to the property sold:

(a.) The seller must produce to the buyer, for examination, all documents of title relating to the property which are in his possession or power, and must inform the buyer of all facts not apparent thereon which affect the seller's power to fulfil his contract, and must answer to the best of his information all relevant questions put to him by the buyer in respect to the property or the title thereto.

(b.) When the buyer has been let into possession of the property before payment of the whole of the purchase-money, the seller has a charge upon the property for the amount of the purchase-money, or any part thereof, remaining unpaid, and for interest on such amount or part; but as soon as the assurance, if any, is registered, such charge shall cease except as against the buyer.

(c.) Unless the buyer has improperly declined to complete the purchase, he has, against the seller, a charge on the property, to the extent of the seller's interest therein, for the amount of any purchase-money properly paid by the buyer in anticipation of the completion of the purchase, and for interest on the amount of such payment; and, when the buyer properly declines to complete the purchase, also for the deposit (if any, and for his costs (if any) of a suit by himself or the seller to compel specific performance of the contract or to obtain a decree for its rescission.

(d.) If the seller alter the property in any particular which does not admit of compensation or reinstatement, the buyer may decline to complete the purchase.

(e.) When the buyer has been let into beneficial possession of the property before completion of the purchase, and the purchase is not completed owing to defects in the seller's title, the buyer is not liable to pay for his use of the property.

(f.) The seller must discharge all incumbrances on the property existing at the date of the contract. The buyer may retain out of the unpaid purchase-money the amount of such incumbrances and shall pay the amount so retained to the parties entitled thereto.

(g.) On payment or tender of the amount due in respect of the purchase-money, the seller is bound to execute a proper assurance of the property when the buyer tenders it to him for execution at a proper time and place.

(h.) On completion of the purchase, the property vests in the buyer, and the buyer is entitled to all documents of title relating to the property which are in the seller's possession or power :

Provided that (1) where the seller retains any part of the property comprised in such documents, he is entitled to retain them all, and (2) where the whole of such property is sold to different buyers, the buyer of the lot of greatest value is entitled to such documents. But in case (1) the seller, and in case (2) the buyer, of the lot of greatest value, is bound, upon every reasonable request by the buyer, or by any of the other buyers, as the case may be, or by any person claiming under him, and at the cost of the person making the request, to produce the said documents and furnish such true copies thereof as he may require; and, in the meantime, the seller or the buyer, as the case may be, of the portion of greatest value, must keep the said documents safe, uncanceled and undamaged, unless prevented from so doing by fire or other inevitable accident.

(i). In the absence of fraud, concealment and misrepresentation, the seller is not answerable for any defect in the property sold.

(j). Unless the sale is made by a person in a fiduciary character, the seller shall be deemed to contract with the buyer, first, that notwithstanding anything done by the seller or any person through whom he claims, the seller has power to grant the property to the buyer, free from incumbrances; secondly, that the seller and all persons claiming any interest in the same through or for him, or any person through whom he claims, will on demand execute and deliver to the buyer at his expense any further assurance of the same that may reasonably be required; and, where the property is leasehold, thirdly, that the lease is valid and subsisting and that the rent reserved hereby, the conditions contained therein and the covenants binding on the lessee have been paid, performed and observed down to the completion of the purchase.

When the sale is made by a person in a fiduciary character, the seller shall be deemed to contract with the buyer that the seller has done no act whereby the property is incumbered or whereby he hindered from granting it.

EXPLANATION.—A purchase is completed within the meaning of this chapter when possession of the property is delivered to the buyer. When the transfer is made by assurance, such delivery takes place when the assurance is executed by the seller and (if its registration is required by law) registered. When the transfer is not made by assurance, such delivery takes place, in the case of an incorporeal right, when the parties consent to the delivery, and, in the case of other immovable property, when the buyer becomes capable of exercising physical control over it and determines to exercise such control in his own behalf, or on behalf of the person whom he represents.

3. A contract for, or relating to, the sale of immovable property, shall not have the effect of creating any interest in, or charge upon, such property; but the only right of any person under the contract shall be to apply for specific performance, or for compensation, or for damages, according to the rules laid down in the Contract Act, 1872, the Specific Relief Act, 1877, and section twenty.

If, before completion of the purchase, the buyer is declared insolvent, the receiver of his property appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure, section 551, may, if the contract is unprofitable, by writing under his hand disclaim the same, and thereupon the contract shall be deemed to be determined from the date of the declaration: provided that the receiver shall not disclaim such contract in cases where an application in writing has been made to him by any person having any interest in the property, requiring him to decide whether he will disclaim or not, and the receiver has, for a period of not less than twenty-eight days after the receipt of such application or such further term as may be allowed by the Court, declined or neglected to give notice whether he disclaims the contract or not.

Any person injured by the operation of this section shall be deemed a creditor of the insolvent to the extent of such injury and may prove the same as a debt under the insolvency.

14. As between the seller and buyer of leasehold property, the buyer is, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, bound to pay the rent reserved by the lease and accruing due after completion of the purchase, to perform the contracts by the lessee, and to indemnify the seller and his legal representative against all claims for non-payment of such rent or breach or non-observance of such covenants.

15. As between the seller and buyer of a right to redeem mortgaged property, the buyer is, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, bound (a) to pay to the mortgagee or his legal representative the principal sum which, on completion of the purchase, is owing on the security of the mortgage, and all interest for the time being due for the same, when payment thereof, respectively, is lawfully demanded, and (b) to indemnify the seller and his legal representative against the payment thereof, and against all claims for non-payment thereof, respectively.

16. If at the date of the contract the property is insured against loss or damage by fire, the buyer, in case of such loss or damage, may, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, require any money which the seller may actually receive under the policy, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be applied in reinstating the property.

17. When two or more persons purchase any immovable property, with separate funds belonging to them respectively, they shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, be interested in such property in proportion to the shares of the purchase-money which they respectively advanced.

18. When two properties are subject to a common charge, and one of the properties is sold, the buyer is, as against the seller and his legal representative, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, entitled to have the charge satisfied out of the other property, so far as such property will extend.

19. When any property is sold, the proceeds of which are subject to any trust, the bona fide buyer of the property is not bound to see to the application of the purchase-money to the purposes of the trust.

20. When the buyer fails to perform any duty imposed on him, as such, by this Act or any other law for the time being in force, the seller may, notwithstanding anything contained in the Indian Contract Act, 1872, section 56, sue the buyer for compensation for such non-performance.

Remedies of buyer and seller.

When the seller fails to perform any duty imposed upon him, as such, by this Act or any other law for the time being in force, the buyer may either sue under the Specific Relief Act, 1877, to have the contract rescinded, or may affirm it and sue for compensation for its non-performance. In the latter case, the buyer may recover his expenses reasonably incurred, after the contract was entered into, in relation to the attempted purchase; and in each case he may recover his deposit (if any) with interest thereon.

CHAPTER IV. OF EXCHANGES.

21. When two persons contract to mutually give one thing for another, neither thing or both things being money only, the contract is called a contract of exchange.

22. If one of the parties prove that the other was not owner of the thing given or agreed to be given to the former in exchange, the former cannot be compelled to deliver that which he has promised in counter-exchange; but when he has received the thing given to him in exchange, he may be compelled to return it.

The party deprived of the thing he has received in exchange by reason of anything done by the other party or any person through whom the latter claims, may, at his option, sue for compensation or sue for the thing given by him.

When thing exchanged does not belong to party giving it.

23. Save as otherwise provided in this chapter, each party has the rights and is subject to the liabilities of a seller as to that which he gives, and has the rights and is subject to the liabilities of a buyer as to that which he takes.

Rights and liabilities of parties.

24. On an exchange of money, each party there- by warrants the genuineness of the money given by him.

Exchange of money.

CHAPTER V.

OF MORTGAGES AND CHARGES.

25. When, for the purpose of securing money advanced or to be advanced by way of loan or an existing or future debt, one person transfers to another a right over specific immoveable property, the transfer is called a mortgage, the transferor is called a mortgagor, the transferee a mortgagee, the money of which payment is secured is called the mortgage-money, and the assurance by which the transfer is effected is called a mortgage-deed.

For the purposes of this chapter, any person entitled as heir, legatee, assignee, lessee or otherwise than as a mortgagee to the interest of the transferor in the property subject to the mortgage, or any part of such interest, is a mortgagor; and any person entitled as heir, legatee, assignee or otherwise to the interest of the transferee under the mortgage, or any part thereof, is a mortgagee.

Where the mortgagor transfers the property to the mortgagee conditionally upon the non-payment of the mortgage-money at a certain date, the transaction is called an English mortgage.

Where the mortgagor delivers possession of the property to the mortgagee, and authorises him to retain such possession and to pay himself from the rents and profits of the property the interest, or the principal and interest, of the mortgage-money, the transaction is called an usufructuary mortgage.

Where the mortgagor binds himself personally to repay the mortgage-money, and pledges the property as collateral security for the repayment, but does not deliver possession of the property, or contract that in default of payment of the principal and interest at a certain date the property shall pass to the mortgagee, the transaction is called a simple mortgage.

Where the mortgagor not so binding himself and not delivering possession of the property, contracts that, on default of payment of the principal and interest at a certain date, the property shall pass to the mortgagee, the transaction is called a mortgage by conditional sale.

26. A mortgage can be effected only by assurance signed by the mortgagor and attested by at least two witnesses.

Mortgage to be by assurance.

27. The deposit of title-deeds with intent to create a mortgage on the property comprised therein, but without actual transfer of such property, shall be deemed to be only evidence of a contract to execute a mortgage of the property.

Rights and Liabilities of Mortgagor.

28. A mortgagor has the following rights as against the mortgagee:—

Right of mortgagor to redeem, tender or deposit.

(a) at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable, or has been paid, and before an order absolute has been made foreclosing his right to redeem the mortgaged property or the property is duly sold in pursuance of a decree or under a power conferred by the mortgage-deed, he may, on payment or tender of the mortgage-money remaining due, require the mortgagee to re-grant the property to him, or to execute an acknowledgment in writing that any right in derogation of his ownership or other interest granted to the mortgagee has been extinguished.

(b) at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable and before such suit is barred, he may, tender to the mortgagee at a proper time and place, or deposit in any Court in which he might have instituted a suit for redemption of the mortgaged property, to the account of the mortgagee, the whole amount for the time being due on the mortgage.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise a person interested in part only of the mortgaged property to institute a suit for the redemption of his own part only, except where there is but one mortgagee and the mortgagor's interest in part of the property becomes vested in such mortgagee.

29. In the absence of a contract to the contrary, the mortgagor shall be deemed to contract with the mortgagee, first, that the mortgagor has power to grant the property to the mortgagee, free from incumbrances; secondly, that the mortgagor and every person claiming any interest in the same will on demand (at the cost until foreclosure or sale of the mortgagor and afterwards of the person requiring the same) execute every such assurance of the same that may reasonably be required; and, where the property is leasehold, thirdly, that the lease is valid and subsisting, that the rent reserved thereby, the conditions contained therein, and the contracts binding on the lessee have been paid, performed and observed down to the execution of the mortgage-deed; and that the mortgagor will, so long as the security exists, pay the rent reserved by the lease, perform the conditions contained therein and observe the contracts binding on the lessee and indemnify the mortgagee against all claims sustained by reason of the non-payment of the said rent or the non-performance or non-observance of the said conditions and contracts.

30. Where the mortgaged property is a lease for a term of years, and the mortgagee, while in possession of the property, obtains a renewal of the lease, the mortgagor, upon redemption, shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, have the benefit of the new lease.

31. A mortgagor in possession of the mortgaged property must not commit waste thereon, if the security is insufficient or will be rendered insufficient by such waste.

Explanation.—A security is insufficient within the meaning of this section unless the value of the mortgaged property exceeds by one-third, or, if consisting of buildings, exceeds by one-half, the mortgage-money.

32. A mortgagor proposing to make a second or other subsequent mortgage of the mortgaged property shall before effecting the mortgage, give the second or other subsequent mortgagee notice in writing under his hand of the prior mortgage or mortgages, and a mortgagor making a second or other subsequent mortgage of the mortgaged property shall, as soon as may be, give the prior mortgagee or mortgagees like notice of such mortgage.

A mortgagor failing to give any notice required by this section, in addition to any other liability resulting from such failure, shall, when the accounts are taken in pursuance of a decree made under this chapter, be debited with the loss, if any, occasioned by such failure.

33. If the owner of two or more properties creates separate mortgages on them by separate assurances, each mortgage may be dealt with irrespectively of the other, though the mortgages are created in favour of the same mortgagee.

Illustration.

A, the owner of farms Z and Y, mortgages Z to B for Rs. 1,000. A afterwards mortgages Y to B for Rs. 1,000, making no stipulation as to any additional charge on Z. A may institute a suit for the redemption of the mortgage on Z alone.

Rights and Liabilities of the Mortgagee.

34. In the absence of a contract to the contrary, the mortgagee may, at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable to him, and before a decree has been made for the redemption of the mortgaged property, or the mortgage-money has been paid, institute against the mortgagor (1) a suit for a foreclosure of his right to redeem the property with or without possession thereof, or (2) a suit for a sale of the property, or (3) a suit for such foreclosure or sale.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed—

(a) to authorize a simple mortgagee to institute a suit for a foreclosure, or an usufructuary mortgagee to institute a suit for a foreclosure or sale, or a conditional mortgagee to institute a suit for a sale;

(b) to authorize the mortgagee of a railway, canal or other work in the maintenance of which the general public are interested to institute a suit for a foreclosure or sale; or

(c) to authorize a person interested in part only of the mortgage-money to institute a suit relating only to a corresponding part of the mortgaged property: but he may institute any of the suits mentioned in that clause, which, under this Act, he is authorized to institute, relating to the whole of the mortgaged property, making the other mortgagees, if they cannot or will not join as plaintiffs, defendants.

35. Where the mortgagor deposits money in court under section twenty-eight, the Court shall forthwith cause written notice of the deposit to be served on the mortgagee, and the mortgagee may, on depositing the mortgage-deed in the same court and on filing a written statement (verified in manner prescribed by law for the verification of plaints) of the amount due to him under the mortgage, apply for and receive in payment of such amount the money so deposited.

36. When the mortgagor and mortgagee have contracted as to the payment of interest on the principal money for the time being due to the mortgagee under the mortgage, interest shall be payable in accordance with such contract: Provided that, where the mortgagor has tendered or deposited in court under section twenty-eight the whole amount due to the mortgagee, such interest shall cease from the date of the tender or from the earliest time when the mortgagee could take such amount out of court, as the case may be.

Where no such contract has been entered into, the mortgagee is entitled to interest on such principal money at the rate of six per cent. per annum.

37. In the absence of an express contract to the contrary, no mortgagee shall be entitled as such to take possession of the mortgaged property; but at any time after the expiry tion of one year from the time when the principal money has become payable according to the terms of the mortgage-deed, or after any interest thereon has been in arrear for six months, he may institute a suit for the appointment of a receiver of the rents and profits of the whole or any part of the same.

In any suit for a foreclosure or sale, the Court may, if it think fit, appoint such a receiver pending the proceedings in the suit.

38. No mortgage shall be deemed to imply

Right to sue for mortgage-money.

a debt for the recovery of which a suit will lie against the debtor; but the mortgagee may sue the mortgagor for the mortgage-money—

(a) where the mortgagor expressly binds himself to repay the same:

(b) where the mortgagor remains in possession of the property and fails to pay arrears of revenue due in respect thereof, and the property is consequently sold:

(c) where the property is destroyed by diluvion, fire or other superior force:

(d) in the case of an usufructuary mortgage, where the mortgagor fails to deliver to the mortgagee possession of the property or to secure the possession thereof to him without disturbance the mortgagor or any other person.

39. A power conferred by the mortgage-deed on the mortgagee to or concur in selling the mortgaged property, or any part thereof, is invalid, except where the mortgagee is the Secretary of State for India in Council, or the mortgaged property is situate within the town of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay or Rangoon.

Act No. XXVIII of 1866, section 6, is repealed so far as it is inconsistent with this section.

40. If, at the date of the mortgage, the mortgaged property is insured against loss or damage by fire, the mortgagee, in case of such loss or damage, may, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, require any money which the mortgagor may actually receive under the policy, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be laid out in reinstating the property.

41. If, after the date of the mortgage, any accession is made to the mortgaged property, the mortgagee, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, shall, for the purposes of the security, be entitled to such accession.

Illustrations.

(a) A mortgages to B a certain field bordering on a river. The field is increased by alluvion. For the purposes of his security, B is entitled to the increase.

(b) A mortgages a certain plot of building land to B and afterwards erects a house on the plot. For the purposes of his security, B is entitled to the house as well as the plot.

42. When, during the continuance of the mortgage, the mortgagee takes possession of the mortgaged property, he has the following rights and liabilities:—

(a) he shall manage the property as a person of ordinary prudence would manage it if it were his own;

(b) he shall use his best endeavours to collect all rents and other profits arising out of the property;

(c) he shall, in the absence of an express contract to the contrary, out of the income of the property pay the Government revenue and all other charges of a public nature accruing due in respect thereof during such possession;

(d) he may spend such money as is necessary (1) for the due management of the property and the collection of the rents and other profits arising out of the same, (2) for its preservation from destruction, deterioration, forfeiture or sale, (3) for supporting the mortgagor's title to the property, (4) for making his own title thereto good against the mortgagor, and (5), when the mortgaged property is a renewable leasehold, for the renewal of the lease; and may, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, add such money to the principal money secured, at the same rate of interest;

(e) he may eject the tenants (if any) in occupation of the property under leases made without the mortgagee's consent after the completion of the mortgage;

(f) where the property is by its nature insurable at ordinary rates, he may insure and keep insured against loss or damage by fire the whole or any part of such property, and add the premiums paid for any such insurance to the principal money secured, at the same rate of interest; and, in case of such loss or damage, shall apply any money which he may actually receive under the policy, or so much thereof as may be necessary, in reinstating the property;

(g) he shall, in the absence of an express contract to the contrary, keep accurate accounts of all sums received and spent by him as mortgagee and, at any time during the continuance of the mortgage, give the mortgagor, at his request and cost, true copies of such accounts and of the vouchers by which they are supported;

(h) his receipts from the mortgaged property, after deducting the expenses mentioned in clauses (c), (d) and (f), shall be debited against him in reduction of the amount (if any) from time to time due to him on account of interest on the principal sum secured by the mortgage, and, so far as such receipts exceed any interest due, in reduction of such principal sum.

43. Nothing in section forty-two, clauses (g) and (h), applies to cases where there is an express contract in writing between the mortgagee and the mortgagor that such receipts, after deducting the said expenses, shall, so long as the mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged property, be taken in lieu of interest on the principal sum secured by the mortgage.

44. A mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged property must not commit waste by mortgagee. waste thereon.

45. When a mortgagor in possession of the mortgaged property fails to pay arrears of revenue due in respect thereof, and the property is consequently sold, the mortgagee has a charge on the surplus, if any, of the proceeds, after payment thereof of the said arrears.

Priority.

46. Where, through the fraud or gross neglect Postponement of prior of a prior mortgagee, mortgagee, another person has been induced to advance money on the security of the mortgaged property, the prior mortgagee shall be postponed to the subsequent mortgagee.

47. If a mortgage made to secure the balance of a running account expresses the maximum to be secured thereby, a subsequent mortgage on the same property shall, if made with actual knowledge of the prior mortgage, or if the instrument effecting the prior mortgage is registered, be postponed to the prior mortgage in respect of all advances or debits not exceeding the maximum, though made or allowed with notice of the subsequent mortgage.

Illustration.

A mortgages Sultānpur to his bankers, B & Co., to secure the balance of his account with them to the extent of Rs. 10,000. A then mortgages Sultānpur to C, to secure Rs. 10,000; and C gives notice thereof to B & Co. At the date of the second mortgage, the balance due to B & Co. does not exceed Rs. 5,000. B & Co. subsequently advance to A sums making the balance of the account against him exceed the sum of Rs. 10,000. B & Co. are entitled, to the extent of Rs. 10,000, to priority over C.

48. No mortgagee paying off a prior mortgage, whether with or without notice of an intermediate mortgage, shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his original security. And, except in the case provided for by section forty-seven, no mortgagee making a subsequent advance to the mortgagor, whether with or without notice of an intermediate mortgage, shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his security for such subsequent advance.

49. Any second or other subsequent mortgagee may, at any time before a sale of the mortgaged property has taken place under this chapter, tender to the next prior mortgagee the amount due to him on account of his mortgage. Such mortgagee is bound to accept such tender and to give a receipt for the sum due, and on such receipt being registered, the person making the tender shall acquire, in respect of the property, all the rights and powers of the mortgagee to whom he has made such tender.

50. If the owner of two properties mortgages them both to one person and then mortgages one of the properties to another person without actual knowledge of the former mortgage, the second mortgagee is entitled to have the debt of the first mortgagee satisfied out of the property not mortgaged to the second mortgagee, so far as such property will extend; but not so as to prejudice the rights of the first mortgagee or of any other person having an incumbrance on either property.

51. Where several properties, whether of one or several owners, are mortgaged to secure one debt, the several properties shall contribute rateably to the debt secured by the mortgage, after deducting from the value of each property the amount of any other incumbrance to which it is subject.

Contribution to mortgage-debt.

Where of two properties belonging to the same owner, one is mortgaged to secure one debt, and then both are mortgaged to secure another debt, and the former debt is paid out of the former property, each property shall contribute rateably to the latter debt, after deducting the amount of the former debt from the value of the property out of which it has been paid.

Nothing in this section applies to a property liable under section fifty to the claim of the second mortgagee.

Suits for Redemption, Foreclosure or Sale.

52. Subject to the provisions of the Code of Parties to suits for redemption, foreclosure and sale.

Civil Procedure, section 437, all persons having an interest either in the right of redemption or in the security ought to be joined as parties to any suit under section twenty-eight or thirty-four, and the first or any subsequent mortgagee who institutes a suit for foreclosure or sale ought to make every mortgagee and other incumbrancer whose security is subsequent to his own, a party to the suit.

Foreclosure and Sale.

sale, if the plaintiff succeed, the Court shall pass a decree, ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the plaintiff for principal and interest on the mortgage and for his costs of the suit, on the day next hereinafter referred to, or declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree, and ordering that, upon the defendant paying to the plaintiff or into court the amount so due, on a day within six months from the date of declaring in court the amount so due, to be fixed by the court, the plaintiff shall deliver up to the defendant, or to such person as he appoints, all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall transfer the mortgaged property to the defendant free from all incumbrances created by the plaintiff or any person claiming under him, or, where the plaintiff claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims; and shall, if necessary, put the defendant into possession of the mortgaged property; but that, if such payment is not made on or before such day, the defendant shall be absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem such property.

54. If payment is so made of such amount and of Procedure in case of payment of amount due and subsequent costs.

such subsequent costs as are mentioned in section sixty-four, the defendant shall (if necessary) be put into possession of the mortgaged property.

If such payment is not so made, the plaintiff may apply to the Court for an order absolute for the foreclosure of the said mortgage, and the Court shall then pass an order absolute that the defendant to be foreclosed of all right to redeem the mortgaged property, and may, if necessary, deliver possession of the property to the plaintiff; and thereupon the defendant's right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished.

Provided that the Court may, upon good cause shewn, from time to time postpone the day appointed for such payment.

In the Code of Civil Procedure, Schedule IV, No. 129, for the words "Final Decree", the words "Order absolute" shall be substituted.

55. In a suit for a sale under this chapter, if the plaintiff succeed, the Court by the mortgagee under this chapter, if the plaintiff succeed the Court may at his instance pass a decree ordering as provided in the first and second paragraphs of section fifty-four, and also ordering that in default of the defendant making payment as therein mentioned the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and that the proceeds of the sale (after defraying thereout the expenses of the sale) be paid into court and applied in payment of what is so found due to the plaintiff and that the balance, if any, be paid to the defendant or other persons entitled to receive the same.

Power to decree sale at instance of mortgagee. When the mortgagee sues only for a foreclosure, if the Court considers that he will not be damaged by such sale and if the defendant furnishes such security, if any, as the Court thinks sufficient for the payment of the balance due for the time being by him on the mortgage, the Court may, at the instance of the defendant, pass a like decree.

Any decree under this section may also direct the defendant to pay any balance remaining due to the plaintiff upon the mortgage after the proceeds of sale have been dealt with as above provided.

56. If in any case under section fifty-five the defendant makes payment as mentioned in section fifty-four, he shall (if necessary) be put in possession of the mortgaged property; but if such payment is not so made, the plaintiff or the defendant, as the case may be, may apply to the Court for an order absolute for sale of the mortgaged property, and the Court shall then pass an order that such property, or a sufficient part thereof, be sold, and that the proceeds of the sale be dealt with as is mentioned in section fifty-five; and thereupon the defendant's right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished.

57. When the nett proceeds of any such sale are insufficient to pay the amount due for the time being on the mortgage, the balance, if payable according to the contract between the parties by the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold, may be recovered either (if the Court thinks fit) in the same suit in the same manner as under a decree for money, or by any other legal process open to the mortgagee.

Redemption.

58. Besides the mortgagor, any of the following persons may institute a suit for redemption of the mortgaged property:—

- (a) any person (other than the mortgagee) having any interest in or charge upon the property;
- (b) any person having any interest in or charge upon the right to redeem the property;
- (c) any surety for the payment of the mortgage-debt or any part thereof;
- (d) the guardian of the property of a minor mortgagor;

(e) the committee or other legal curator of a lunatic or idiot mortgagor;

(f) the judgment-creditor of the mortgagor, when he has obtained execution.

(g) a creditor of the mortgagor who has in a suit for the administration of his estate obtained a decree for sale of the mortgaged property.

Explanation.—An easement is not an interest within the meaning of clause (a).

59. In a suit for redemption, if the plaintiff succeed, the Court shall pass a decree ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the defendant for principal and interest on the mortgage, and for his costs of the suit, on the day next hereinafter referred to, or declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree; and ordering that upon the plaintiff paying to the defendant or into court the amount so due on a day within six months from the date of declaring in court the amount so due, to be fixed by the Court, the defendant shall deliver up to the plaintiff, or to such person as he appoints, all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall (if such property has been transferred to the defendant) re-transfer it to the plaintiff free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the defendant or any person claiming under him, or, when the defendant claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims, and shall, if necessary, put the plaintiff into possession of the mortgaged property; but that if such payment is not made on or before such day, the plaintiff shall be absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem such property.

60 If payment is made of such amount and of such subsequent costs as are mentioned in section sixty-four the plaintiff shall, if necessary, be put into possession of the mortgaged property.

If such payment is not so made, the defendant may apply to the Court for an order absolute for the foreclosure of the said mortgage, and the Court shall then pass an order absolute ordering the plaintiff to be foreclosed of all right to redeem the mortgaged property, and may, if necessary, deliver possession of the property to the defendant; and thereupon the plaintiff's right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished:

Provided that the Court may upon good cause shewn, from time to time, postpone the day appointed for such payment.

Redemption and Foreclosure.

61. When property is mortgaged for successive debts to successive mortgagees, any mesne mortgagee may institute a suit to redeem the interests of the prior mortgagees and to foreclose the rights of those that are posterior to himself and of the mortgagor.

The decree in such suit may be in the form set forth in the third schedule hereto annexed, with such variation as the circumstances of each case require.

62. If the mortgagee fail to perform any of the duties imposed upon him by section forty-two, he may, when accounts are taken in pursuance of a decree made under this chapter, be debited with the loss, if any, occasioned by such failure.

Costs.

63. The mortgagee is ordinarily entitled to receive or add to his debt his costs properly incurred of any suit under this chapter. But such costs, or any part thereof, may be disallowed if the mortgagor has paid or tendered to the mortgagee, or has deposited in court, the whole amount due to him under the mortgage, and if the mortgagee has unreasonably refused to accept such tender or to take such money out of court in discharge of his claim, or if he has prevented a mortgagor willing and able to make such payment, tender or deposit from making it by refusing or neglecting to give him proper information as to the state of the accounts required to be kept under section forty-two.

64. In finally adjusting the amount to be paid to a mortgagee in case of a redemption or a sale by the Court under this chapter, the Court shall, unless the conduct of the mortgagee has been such as to disentitle him to costs, add to the principal debt such costs of suit as have been properly incurred by him since the decree for foreclosure, redemption or sale up to the time of actual payment.

Sale of Property subject to prior mortgage.

65. If any property the sale of which is directed under this chapter is subject to a prior mortgage, the Court may, with the consent of the prior mortgagee, order that the property be sold free from the same, giving to such prior mortgagee the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold.

Application of proceeds.

66. Such proceeds shall be brought into Court and applied as follows :—

first, in payment of all expenses incident to the sale or properly incurred in any attempted sale :

secondly, if the property has been sold free from any prior mortgage, in payment of whatever is due on account of such mortgage ;

thirdly, in payment of all interest due on account of the mortgage in consequence whereof the sale was directed, and of the costs of the suit in which the decree directing the sale was made ;

fourthly, in payment of all principal moneys due on account of that mortgage ; and fifthly, the residue (if any) shall be paid to the person proving himself to be interested in the property sold, or if there be more such persons than one, then to such persons according to their respective interests therein or upon their joint receipt.

67. If property subject to a mortgage, or the right to receive mortgage-money, be transferred to a third person, the transferee has all the rights and powers of his transferor, under the mortgage, and is subject to the liabilities existing between his transferor and the mortgagor or mortgagee, as the case may be.

Where such a transfer is made for the purpose of securing money advanced or to be advanced by way of loan or an existing or future debt, the original mortgage-debt, if recovered by either the transferor or the transferee, is applicable, first, in payment of the costs of such recovery, secondly, in or towards satisfaction of the amount for the time being secured by the transfer ; and the residue, if any, belongs to the transferor.

Charges.

68. If by any assurance other than a mortgage-deed, or by any will, or under the provisions of this or any other Act, or by operation of law, certain immoveable property of one person is made security for the payment of certain money to another, the latter person is said to have a charge on the property, and all the provisions hereinbefore applied to a mortgagor shall apply to the owner of such property, and all the provisions hereinbefore applied to a mortgagee instituting a suit for the sale of the mortgaged property shall apply to the person having such charge.

69. Where a person is or becomes absolutely entitled to immoveable property, of a charge or other incumbrance on which he is also the owner, the charge or incumbrance shall be extinguished, unless by an instrument in writing registered he expressly declares that it shall be kept on foot.

CHAPTER VI.

OF LEASES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

70. A person proposing to let immoveable proerty need not disclose defects therein which the lessee might with ordinary care discover ; but the proposing lessor must not conceal, or attempt to conceal, such defects, and he must disclose to the lessee all other defects therein of which the former is, and the latter is not, aware.

When the proposing lessee stands, or has stood, as regards the property, in a fiduciary relation to the lessor, he must disclose to the lessor any fact which increases the value of the property itself, and of which the former has, during the existence of such relation, become aware. Save as aforesaid, a person proposing to take a lease of immoveable property need not disclose any fact unknown to the lessor which increases such value.

71. In the absence of a contract in writing or

Rights and liabilities of lessor and lessee.

local usage to the contrary, the lessor and the lessee, as against one another, respectively, possess the rights and are subject to the liabilities mentioned in the eighteen rules next following, or such of them as are applicable to the property leased :—

(a.) The lessor is bound to put the lessee in possession of the property leased :

(b.) The lessor shall be deemed to contract with the lessee that the latter paying the rent reserved by the lease and performing the contracts by the lessee may hold the property leased during the time limited by the lease without interruption by the lessor or his assigns, or any person lawfully claiming through him or them :

(c.) In the absence of fraud, concealment or misrepresentation, the lessor is not answerable for any defect in the property leased which the lessor could not with ordinary care have discovered :

(d.) During the continuance of the lease, the lessee is entitled to the enjoyment of all easements appendant to the property leased at the time when the lease was made until such easements are extinguished :

(e.) The lessee is bound to keep, and on the termination of the lease to restore, the property leased in as good condition as it was in at the time when he was put in possession, subject only to reasonable wear and tear:

(f.) If by fire, tempest or flood, or violence of an army or of a mob, or other superior force, any part of the property leased be wholly destroyed or rendered substantially unfit for the purposes for which it was let, the lease shall be void as to that part, and any rent or fine payable under the lease shall proportionately abate, and a proportionate part of any fine paid by the lessee shall be returned by the lessor:

If the injury be occasioned by the wrongful act or default of either party, such party shall not be entitled to avail himself of the benefit of this provision:

(g.) In case the lease is rescinded for the default of the lessee, he is bound to pay the rent up to the time of such rescission, and also to make compensation for any other loss resulting from his default; but in estimating such compensation, the Court shall take into account the fine (if any) paid under the lease:

(h.) If the lessor neglects to make, within a reasonable time after notice, repairs which he is bound to make, the lessee may make the same himself, and deduct the expense of such repairs from the rent, or otherwise recover it from the lessor:

(i.) If the lessor neglects to make any payment which he is bound to make, and which, if not made by him, is recoverable from the lessee or against the property leased, the lessee may make such payment himself, and deduct it from his rent, or otherwise recover it from the lessor:

(j.) Every lessee who becomes aware of any proceeding to recover the property leased to him or any part thereof is bound to give notice thereof to the lessor with reasonable diligence; and, in default of so doing, he is liable to make compensation to the lessor for any loss or expenses occasioned by such omission:

(k.) The lessee is bound to give notice to the lessor, within a reasonable time, of any encroachment made upon, or any interference with the lessor's rights concerning, the property leased, which may come to his knowledge; and, in default of so doing, he is liable to make compensation to the lessor for any loss or expenses occasioned by such omission:

(l.) The lessee may use the soil and its products for all purposes of enjoyment as a reasonable owner would use them; but he may not fell timber, pull down or damage houses, open mines, or commit any other waste:

(m.) No lessee of immovable property shall, without the lessor's consent, erect any permanent structure thereon, except for agricultural purposes; and no such lessee who erects thereon any building, engine or machinery for agricultural purposes shall remove the same without first giving to the lessor or his agent one month's previous notice in writing of his intention so to do, and thereupon the lessor or his agent may elect to purchase the thing so proposed to be removed, and the lessee's right to remove the same shall thereby cease, and the same shall belong to the lessor, and the value thereof shall in case of dispute be ascertained and determined by two referees, one to be chosen by each party, or by an umpire to be named by such referees, and shall be paid or allowed in account by the lessor:

(n.) Subject to the provisions of clause (m), the lessee has a right to remove at any time during his possession of the property leased, all things which he has affixed to the soil: but he is liable to make compensation to the lessor for all damage caused to the property by such removal:

(o.) On the determination of the lease, the lessee is bound to put the lessor into possession of the property leased:

(p.) When a lease of uncertain duration determines by any means except the fault of the lessee, he or his legal representative is entitled to all the crops planted or sown by the lessee and growing upon the land for the season current when the lease determines, and to free ingress and egress to reap and carry them:

(q.) If the lessor transfers the property leased, or any part thereof, or any part of his interest therein, the transferee shall possess all the rights, and, if the lessee so elects, be subject to all the liabilities, of the lessor as to the property or part transferred so long as he is the owner of it; but the lessor shall not by reason only of such transfer cease to be subject to any of the liabilities imposed upon him by the lease, unless the lessee elects to treat the transferee as the person liable to him: Provided that, if the lessee pay rent to the lessor without having reason to believe that such transfer has been made, he shall not be liable to pay such rent over again to the transferee:

Where only a part of the property leased is transferred by the lessor, he may determine what proportion of the rent reserved by the lease is payable in respect of the part so transferred:

(r.) The lessee may transfer, absolutely or by way of mortgage, the whole or any part of his interest in the property, and any transferee of such interest or part may again transfer it. The lessee shall not, by reason of such transfer, cease to be subject to any of the liabilities attaching to the lease, unless the lessor elects to treat the transferee as the person subject to such liabilities. Subject as aforesaid, each successive transferee, so long as he is entitled to the property leased, possesses all the rights, and is subject to all the liabilities, of the lessee.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise a tenant having a right of occupancy to assign his interest as such.

72. A tenancy begins when the lessee enters, under the lease, into possession of the property leased, and until he so enters, he cannot sue for compensation for a trespass thereon.

73. When the lessee is declared an insolvent, the receiver of his property appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure, section 351, may, with the leave of the Court, by writing under his hand, disclaim the property leased, and thereupon the lease shall be deemed to be surrendered from the date of the declaration, and the Court may order the property to be delivered up to the lessor or make such other order as to the possession thereof as may be just:

Provided that the receiver shall not disclaim such property in cases where an application in writing has been made to him by any person interested therein, requiring him to decide whether he will disclaim or not, and the receiver has for a period of not less than twenty-eight days after the receipt of such application, or such further time as may be allowed by the Court, declined or neglected to give notice whether he disclaims the property or not.

On the application of any person interested in the property, the Court may direct possession thereof to be delivered to him, or make such other order as to possession thereof as may be just.

Any person injured by the operation of this section shall be deemed to be a creditor of the insolvent to the extent of such injury, and may accordingly prove the same as a debt under the insolvency.

74. In the absence of a contract in writing or local usage to the contrary, a lease of property for purposes of cultivation shall be a lease from year to year terminable by six months' notice expiring with the end of a year of the tenancy; and a lease of property for any other purpose shall be a lease from month to month, terminable by fifteen days' notice expiring with the end of a month of the tenancy.

Every notice under this section must be in writing signed by or on behalf of the party giving it and tendered or delivered to the party who is intended to be bound by it, or affixed on a conspicuous part of the property.

75. Where the time limited by a lease is expressed as commencing from a particular day, in computing that time such day shall be excluded. Where no day of commencement is named, the time so limited begins from the making of the lease.

Where the time so limited is a year or a number of years, in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary, the lease shall last during the whole anniversary of the day from which such time commences.

Where the time so limited is expressed to be determinable before its expiration at the option of the parties or one of them, the lessee, in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary, shall have such option.

76. A lease determined—

- (a) by efflux of the time limited thereby;
- (b) by rescission;
- (c) by surrender in express terms;
- (d) by surrender by operation of law, that is to say, in case the lessee accepts from the lessor a new lease of the property leased, to take effect during the continuance of the existing lease;
- (e) by forfeiture, that is to say, (1) in case the lessee breaks an express condition which provides that, on breach thereof, the lessor may re-enter, or the lease shall become void; or (2) in case the lessee renounces his character as such either by setting up a title in a third person or by claiming title in himself;
- (f) on the expiration of a notice to quit duly given to the lessee.

77. A forfeiture or notice under section seventy-six clause (e) or (f), is waived by receipt of rent which has become due since the breach or the expiration of the notice, or by distress for such rent, or by any other act on the part of the lessor showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting.

Where a lease has determined by forfeiture for non-payment of rent and the lessor sues to eject the lessee, if, at the hearing of the suit, the lessee pays or tenders to the lessor the rent in arrear, together with interest thereon and his full costs of the suit, or gives such security as the Court thinks sufficient for making such payment within fifteen days, the Court may, in lieu of making a decree for ejectment, pass an order relieving the lessee against the forfeiture; and thereupon the lessee shall hold the property leased as if the forfeiture had not occurred.

Nothing in this section applies to suits under Act No. X of 1859, or Bengal Act No. VIII of 1869.

78. If a lessee or sub-lessee of property remains in possession thereof after the determination of the lease, and the lessor or his legal representative accepts rent from the lessee or sub-lessee, or otherwise assents to his continuing in possession, the lease is, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, renewed from year to year or from month to month, according to the purpose for which the property is leased, as specified in section seventy-four.

Illustrations.

(a.) A lets a house to B for five years. B sub-lets the house to C at a monthly rent of Rs. 100. The five years expire, but C continues in possession of the house and pays the rent to A. C's lease is renewed from month to month.

(b.) A lets a farm to B for the life of C. C dies, but B continues in possession with A's assent. B's lease is renewed from year to year.

CHAPTER VII.

OF SETTLEMENTS.

79. "Settlement" means, in this chapter, any disposition in writing of moveable or immoveable property—

- (a) which is not testamentary, and is not founded on any consideration, or
- (b) which is made in consideration of marriage, or
- (c) which is made for the purpose of dividing property of the settlor among his family or those for whom he desires to provide, but does not include a gift made by a Hindû, Muhammadan or Buddhist.

80. A settlement, whether made for a consideration or not, is binding on the settlor and those claiming under him.

81. A settlement made for the purpose of depriving present or future creditors or other persons of their demands against the settlor, is void against all present and future creditors of the settlor and their successors in interest, and against any person upon whom his property devolves in trust for the benefit of his creditors.

Nothing in this section affects the rights of persons who have acquired, in good faith and for consideration, any interest under the settlement.

82. A condition or limitation in a settlement or will, restraining any person from parting with or disposing of his interest, is void:

provided that property may be settled or bequeathed for the benefit of a married woman who is not a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist, so that she shall not have power to deprive herself of the income thereof in anticipation.

83. A condition or limitation contained in a settlement or will, making an interest thereby reserved or given to or in trust for any person to cease on his becoming insolvent, or endeavouring to transfer or dispose of the same, is void.

84. If, by a settlement, property be given to a person then living in general terms, without indicating the time when it is to be paid or delivered, such person has a vested interest therein from the day of the execution of the settlement, and if he dies without having received it, it shall (subject to any legal disposition thereof which he may have made) pass to his legal representative.

85. Where, by the terms of a settlement, property is given to a person not in existence, but he is not entitled to possession of it immediately upon his birth, a right to receive it at the proper time shall, unless a contrary intention appears by the settlement, become vested in such person upon his birth, and shall (subject to any legal disposition thereof which he may have made) pass to his legal representative if he dies before that time, and without having received it. And in such cases it is from his birth said to be vested in interest.

86. The provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, sections 100 to 104, both inclusive, 107 and 108, 111 to 127, both inclusive, and 167, shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to gifts contained in settlements.

87. Whenever a person becomes entitled in possession, by virtue of a settlement, to money or any other property yielding income, he shall be entitled to receive the interest or income thereof from that time.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF THE DISCRETION OF THE COURTS TO DEAL WITH SETTLED LAND.

88. If any person having, under a settlement or will, a limited interest in possession in any land, apply under this section to the High Court within the limits of whose appellate civil jurisdiction such land or any part thereof is situate, the Court may, if it deem it just and expedient to do so,

(a) make such leases of the whole or any part of the land for such terms of years, for such rents, with such powers, and with such conditions, reservations and exceptions as the Court thinks fit,

(b) make such sales of the whole or any part of the land, for such sums, payable either at once or periodically, with such powers, and with such conditions, reservations and exceptions as the Court thinks fit;

(c) appropriate any part of the land for the formation of streets, roads, gardens or other open spaces, tanks, sewers, drains or water-courses, and authorize the erection of buildings and works thereon;

and generally deal with the land in any way the Court may think just and beneficial to the persons interested therein.

89. Every such application shall be in writing, and notice thereof shall be served through the Court on all trustees under the settlement or will, and on any other persons who in the opinion of the Court ought to be so served, and shall be published in such newspapers as the Court may direct.

90. The Court shall permit any person interested in the land, and may in its discretion permit any other person, to appear and be heard in opposition to, or in support of, any such application, on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

91. The Court may order the costs of all or any parties to any such application to be paid out of any principal money receivable on account of any dealing with the land which is the subject of the application, or to be a charge on such land or on any other land belonging to the same owners.

92. Every lease made under section eighty-eight shall take effect in possession; and on every such lease shall be reserved the best rent that can be reasonably obtained, to be made payable half-yearly or oftener without taking any fine or other benefit in the nature of a fine.

93. All or any part of the proceeds of any lease, sale or disposition under section eighty-eight may, if the Court think fit, be paid into court.

94. The Court shall declare what parts of such proceeds so received shall be considered as income, and may direct the same to be paid to the person for the time being entitled in possession to the land dealt with; and the residue of such money shall be applied as the Court shall direct in one or more of the manners following:—

(a) the payment of the amount due in respect of any charge on the land dealt with;

(b) the purchase of other property or the investment in securities for the benefit of the persons interested in the land dealt with;

(c) the payment to any person becoming absolutely entitled to the land dealt with.

EXPLANATION.—In this section the term "securities" means—

(d) promissory notes, debentures, stock and other securities of the Government of India;

(e) bonds, debentures and annuities charged by the Imperial Parliament on the revenues of India;

(f) stock or debentures of, or shares in, Railway or other companies, the interest whereon has been guaranteed by the Government of India; and

(g) debentures or other securities for money issued by or on behalf of any municipal body under the authority of any Act of an Indian legislature.

CHAPTER IX.

OF GIFTS FOR RELIGIOUS AND CHARITABLE PURPOSES.

95. No person having a nephew or niece, or any nearer relative, shall have power to give any immovable property to religious or charitable uses, unless by an assurance executed not less than twelve months before his death, and registered.

96. Subject to the provisions of the last preceding section, immovable property may be assured in perpetuity for the benefit of the public in the advancement of religion, knowledge, commerce, health, safety or any other object beneficial to mankind. Provided that notice of such assurance shall be given, as soon as may be after its execution, to the Local Government and that no such assurance shall take effect until it has been sanctioned by some public authority to be designated by the Local Government by notification in the official Gazette.

The grant or refusal of such sanction may be notified by an entry in the book in which the assurance is registered, and the registering officer shall make such entry on receiving from the public authority aforesaid a written order in this behalf.

If no such order is made within two years next after the time when the property becomes applicable for the benefit of the public, it shall be deemed that sanction has been granted.

If such sanction is refused, the property shall devolve as if no such assurance had been made.

CHAPTER X.

OF CERTAIN RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF OWNERS OF LIMITED INTERESTS.

97. A person having a limited interest in any immovable property is not, as such, entitled to do or omit any act the doing or omitting of which is destructive or permanently injurious to such property.

EXPLANATION.—No act done in the reasonable use and enjoyment of property is destructive or injurious within the meaning of this section, though it may exhaust the substance of the property.

Illustrations.

(a). A is a tenant for life of land on which a dwelling-house stands. He is not entitled, as such, to pull down the house. Nor must he suffer it to fall for want of necessary repairs.

(b). A is tenant for life of land in which coal lies. He is entitled, as such, to work and use the coal.

(c). A is tenant for life of land planted with trees. He is entitled as such to cut the trees at maturity, but is not entitled, as such, to cut them when immature, except for the purpose of thinning out or otherwise benefiting the plantation.

Save as aforesaid, such person or his legal representative has the same right as a lessee to remove, during the continuance of such interest or within a reasonable time afterwards, all things which he has affixed to the soil in which he had such limited interest, and all crops growing upon the land for the season current when such limited interest determines.

98. A person having a limited interest in possession in any immovable property, is bound to discharge all taxes and other public periodical charges to which such property is liable and, to the extent of the rents and profits of the property which without his wilful default he might have received, all periodical payments accruing due on account of any mortgage or charge thereon taking effect during the continuance of his interest in priority to such interest.

99. Every advantage or increase of value, accruing (accidentally or through the exertions of any one having a limited interest) to any immovable property in which successive interests exist, belongs, in the absence of any personal law to the contrary, to all the persons having any interest in the property, in the same shares and manner as they are entitled to the property.

100. Any person claiming any immovable property after the death of any minor, married woman or other person, and having reason to believe that such minor, married woman or other person is dead, and that his or her death is concealed by his or her guardian, husband or any other person, may once a year move the High Court to order the person concealing or suspected to conceal such person to produce him or her at such time and place, and before such persons (if any), as the Court may direct. And the High Court, if it think fit, shall make such order, and in case of disobedience thereto by the person in possession of the property, the person so claiming the same may, by order of the Court, enter thereon and receive the profits thereof as if the person so concealed or suspected to be concealed were dead.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize the High Court to compel the production in court of women who, according to the customs and manners of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear in public.

101. Nothing in this chapter applies to mortgagees or lessees.

CHAPTER XI.

OF POWERS.

102. A person may be authorized to determine, with or without the consent of others, the disposition of property otherwise than by virtue of his ownership. A person so authorized is said to have power to appoint such property.

The person who gives the power is called the donor, the person to whom the power is given is called the donee, and the persons for whose benefit the power is to be exercised are called the objects of the power. A person to whom any property is appointed is called an appointee.

Illustrations.

(a). A grants land to B for B's life, with remainder to such of B's children as B shall appoint. B appoints to C and D, two of his children, in equal shares. A is the donor of the power, B the donee, B's children the objects, and C and D the appointees.

(b). A, the absolute owner of certain land, grants it to B to such uses as C, with the consent of D, shall by assurance appoint. C with D's consent appoints part of the land to E absolutely, and the rest to F for seven years. Here C is the donee and also the object of the power, and E and F are the appointees.

A power authorising the donee to appoint to whomsoever and for whatsoever interest he pleases, is called a general power.

A power restricted in respect either of its objects or the interests that may be conferred under it, is called a special power.

Where the donee has neither a present nor a future interest in the property, the power is called a collateral power.

Rules as to all Powers.

103. Where a power is vested in several donees, all who are living must unite in its execution; but in case any one or more of them die during the continuance of the power, it may be exercised by the survivors or the survivor, unless a contrary intention appears by the instrument creating the power.

104. The donor may direct that the power shall be exercised by will only, or by non-testamentary instrument only.

If he directs that the power shall be exercised by will only, it must be exercised by will duly executed according to the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, or according to such other law as at the time of the execution of the power may be applicable to a will executed by the donee.

If he directs that the power shall be exercised by non-testamentary instrument only, it must be exercised by such an instrument and registered.

If he imposes no such restriction on the exercise of the power, it may be exercised either by such will or by such assurance as lastly hereinbefore mentioned.

105. When the power is not properly exercised, no Court shall in any case compel the person in possession of the property to which the power relates to deliver the property as if the power had been properly exercised, or shall otherwise aid the defective execution, except as provided in the Specific Relief Act, 1877 chapter three.

106. All appointments made in the manner directed by section one hundred and four shall be deemed to be executed and attested in proper form, notwithstanding that some other mode of execution or attestation has been prescribed by the donor.

107. An appointment made by will may be revoked by a subsequent will; but it is not revoked by mere general words of revocation of all former wills, without a new appointment.

An appointment made by a non-testamentary instrument is irrevocable except where power to revoke the appointment is expressly reserved by such instrument.

108. A power exercisable by will only cannot be delegated.

A special power involving the exercise of personal discretion by the donee cannot be delegated.

A power to do an act merely ministerial and involving no personal discretion may be delegated.

Illustrations.

(a). A has power under a settlement to dispose of an estate in such proportions as he thinks fit among the issue of his marriage with B. A by his will purports to delegate this power to B, to exercise as she thinks fit. The attempted delegation is void, and the dispositions, if any, in default of appointment take effect.

(b). A, the donee of a power to appoint to his children, determines to exercise it in favour of the objects equally. With this view he causes an instrument of appointment to be prepared. A may appoint an attorney to execute this instrument.

109. Where a power is to be exercised with the concurrence where consent of several persons, all who are living must concur in the consent, but in case any one or more of them die during the continuance of the power, the consent of the survivors or the survivor is sufficient, unless a contrary intention appears by the instrument creating the power.

Consent to the exercise of a power must be given during the donee's lifetime by a non-testamentary instrument registered.

Consent to the exercise of a power need not be given by the instrument by which the power is exercised, but if it is given by a different instrument, such instrument must be executed at a time not later than the time at which the donee of the power executes the instrument by which he exercises the power.

110. If a person disposes of property in such manner as is authorized by a power vested in him, such disposition shall take effect under the power, notwithstanding that the power is not mentioned or referred to in the instrument of disposition.

Illustration.

Land is settled upon A for life with a special power to charge, by a non-testamentary instrument, portions in favour of his children. Subsequently, a general power to dispose of the land by any instrument is vested in A. He executes an assurance, by which he directs that a sum of money shall be raised out of the land and settled on his son B for life, with remainder to B's wife and children. Such an appointment cannot take effect under the special power, but may be treated as a valid exercise of the general power.

111. The donee of a power need not exercise it entirely and at once by a single instrument, but he may from time to time exercise any unexhausted part thereof at his discretion.

If the donee has purported to exercise his power in such a manner that his appointment is void, the power is, to that extent, unexhausted.

Illustrations.

(a). A has a general power. He may appoint the property at one time to B for his life and at another to C absolutely.

(b). Trustees under a settlement, having power to lend Rs. 10,000 to A, the tenant for life, lend the money accordingly. A repays it. The trustees may again lend Rs. 10,000 to A.

(c). A has power to raise Rs. 10,000 by sale or mortgage of Sultānpur. A exercises the power by mortgaging Sultānpur. He may afterwards exercise the power by selling Sultānpur in order to pay off the mortgage.

112. Where a power given by any instrument is void in its creation, no disposition or gift made by the same instrument shall be deemed void merely because it is intended to take effect after the interests to be appointed under the power or in default of any such appointment.

Illustration.

A marriage-settlement provides that the settled property shall belong to the husband and wife successively for their lives; that after the death of the survivor of them, it shall go to such of the children of the marriage, and in such shares, as the husband and wife shall jointly appoint, the interest of each such child to become vested in him on his attaining the age of twenty-five years; and that in the event of there being no child of the marriage who shall attain that age, or in default of appointment, the property shall belong to the husband or his legal representative.

Here the power to appoint the property is, under section eighty-six, void in its creation; but the ultimate interest given to the husband takes effect.

General Powers.

113. If the donor confers on the donee a general power, the donee shall, so far as regards his power of disposition, his creditors and all persons who contract with him for lawful consideration to obtain any interest in the property comprised in the power, be deemed to be the absolute owner of such property for such interest therein as the donor could dispose of.

This rule is to take effect notwithstanding that the donor has prescribed some particular method for executing the power.

Illustrations.

(a). A, the absolute owner of land, settles it on B for life with remainder to such purposes as B—shall appoint, or shall by deed appoint, or shall by will appoint, or shall by deed or will appoint, and, in case B dies without making any such appointment, on C absolutely.

If B—grants the land by assurance, or bequeathes it, or contracts to sell it, or incurs debt,

the property is liable, in the hands of either B or C, as the case may be, to the claims of B's grantee, legatee, purchaser or creditors, as the case may be.

If B dies having made no disposition of the property, C is entitled to it, subject to any claims which B's creditors may establish against it.

(b). A confers on B a general power, exercisable by a non-testamentary instrument, to appoint certain land. B appoints the land to certain persons in such shares as C shall fix. This appointment is valid.

114. If the donor confers on the donee a general power, and makes no disposition of the property in the event of non-appointment, the donee shall be considered as the absolute owner of the property or such interest therein as the donor could dispose of.

Illustration.

A, the absolute owner of property, settles it on B for life with remainder to such purposes as B shall appoint, and makes no gift over in default of appointment. B dies without making any disposition of the property. The property vests in the representatives of B, and does not revert to A or his representatives.

Special Powers.

115. If the donee has only a special power, he cannot confer any interest in the property comprised therein which could not have been conferred by the donor at the time of the creation of the power.

Illustrations.

(a). A settles a fund upon B for life with remainder to such purposes as B shall appoint. After the settlement is made C is born. B then appoints the fund to C for life with remainder to C's children absolutely. The appointment is valid, though C has no children at the time.

(b). A settles a fund upon B for life with remainder to his children as he shall appoint. At the date of the settlement B has no child, but afterwards has a son C. B then appoints to C for his life, with remainder to his children. Such interest could not have been conferred by A, and B's appointment is void.

116. Where the donee of a special power purports, in exercise of the power, to appoint to objects authorized by the power and also to objects not so authorized, the appointment in favour of the authorized objects shall take effect if their interests are independent of those of the unauthorized objects.

Illustration.

Property is settled on A for life, and after his death on such of his children as he shall appoint, and in default of appointment to all A's children equally. A appoints that the property shall go after his death to his widow for her life, and after her death to two of his sons, C and D, in equal shares. There are five children of A. The appointment in favour of A's widow is invalid, and the rents and profits of the property during her life will go to all the five children in equal shares, but after her death to C and D absolutely.

117. Where the donee of a special power purports, in exercise of the power to confer a larger interest than is authorized thereby, such appointment shall, if the appointee so elect, be void only for the excess, and good for the residue, if they can be separated.

Illustrations.

(a). A has a life-interest in Rāmānagar, with power to grant leases thereof for 30 years. A makes a lease of Rāmānagar for 60 years. Such lease is good for 30 years only.

(b). A having a life-interest in Rāmānagar and Sultānpur, with power to grant leases of Rāmānagar for 21 years, grants a lease comprising both Rāmānagar and Sultānpur for 21 years. After A's death the lessee may, if he thinks fit, elect to retain the lease as a lease of Rāmānagar only, till the end of the 21 years.

(c). A having power to charge Rāmānagar with Rs. 7,000 charges it with Rs. 8,000. The appointment is good for the Rs. 7,000, but not for the residue.

118. Where, by an appointment under a special power, interests authorized and also interests unauthorized are created, and the interests authorized cannot be distinguished from those unauthorized, the whole is void.

Illustrations.

(a). A fund is settled on A during his life, and after his death on his children as he shall appoint. A appoints the annual income for the benefit of his son B and B's wife and children, in such manner as trustees shall think fit. The appointment is wholly void.

(b). Under a similar settlement, A having legitimate children by B, his wife, and others by C and D, his concubines, appoints the property to be divided among his children by B, C and D, the shares of the sons to be double those of the daughters. Here the interests authorized and unauthorized cannot be distinguished, and the appointment is wholly void.

119. When a person exercising a special power annexes to the gift a condition or qualification which is not authorized by the power, the gift is good and the condition or qualification only is void.

Appointment with unauthorized condition.

Illustrations.

(a). A, having a power to appoint a fund among his children, gives a part of it to his son B on condition that B shall settle it on B's children. The condition is void, and the gift is absolute.

(b). A, having a power to appoint a fund to a limited class of objects of whom B is one, appoints it to B, adding a condition that B shall release a debt owing to him by A, and also pay Rs. 1,000 to C. The appointment is good; but the condition is void.

120. Where the donee of a special power purports, in exercise of the power, to appoint to persons not objects of the power, and by the same instrument gives to the persons entitled, in default of appointment, to the property comprised in the power benefits out of other property, the persons so entitled shall elect either to confirm such appointment or to dissent from it, and in the latter case they shall relinquish the benefits so given to them.

The rules contained in the Indian Succession Act, 1865, sections 173 to 177, both inclusive, shall, mutatis mutandis, apply to elections under this section.

121. If a beneficial interest in immoveable property, and also a power to let it, are given to the same person, and he grants his interest in the property, he may enter into a contract not to exercise his power.

Contract not to exercise power of leasing.

122. Save as provided by section one hundred and twenty-one, an agreement or undertaking not to exercise a power which is given for the benefit of persons other than the donee is void.

Invalidity of agreement not to exercise power.

123. Where a power given for the benefit of persons other than the donee is exercised with a view to the benefit, direct or indirect, of the donee, in any mode not intended by the donor, the appointment is void.

Frauds on powers.

Illustrations.

(a). A, having power to appoint a fund in favour of any of her children, appoints the whole fund absolutely to one child, who has previously entered into an agreement with her to give one-half of the fund to A's husband absolutely. The appointment is void.

(b). A, having power to appoint a fund in favour of any of his children, appoints a portion of the fund to his son C, a minor, whom he knows to be suffering from a mortal disease; A being the person entitled to C's property in the event of his death. The appointment is void.

(c). A, having power to grant leases of certain settled land, exercises the power in favour of B in consideration of Rs. 1,000 paid to A by B as a fine or premium. The lease is void, and A holds the Rs. 1,000 in trust for the persons interested under the settlement.

124. If the instrument by which a power of appointment in favour of specified objects is created does not provide for the event of no appointment being made, the property belongs (subject to any appointment that may have been made) in equal shares to the said objects.

Right to property in default of appointment.

Illustration.

A settles property on B for life with remainder to B's children as he shall appoint, and makes no disposition in default of appointment. B has two children, C and D, and appoints Rs. 1,000, part of the property, to C. Then C dies. Then B dies without making any further appointment. After paying Rs. 1,000 to C or his representative, the residue of the property is divisible in equal shares between D and the representative of C.

125. Where there is a power of appointment in favour of a certain class of objects, and there is also a disposition of the property comprised in the power in the event of there being no objects, if the power is not exercised and there are objects, the property belongs to them in equal shares.

Implied gifts to objects.

126. Under a power of appointment in favour of several objects, an appointment of the whole property to one or more of such objects exclusively of the others is valid:

Appointment of whole property to some only of several objects in favour of which power is given.

Provided that, where the assurance creating the power declares the minimum amount or value of the share from which no object of the power is to be excluded, the appointment shall be invalid so far as it excludes any such object from any such share, and no farther.

127. Interests authorized to be created under a power take effect when created as if they had been created by the original instrument conferring the power, unless where a contrary intention is expressed therein.

Priority of interests created under powers.

128. A power given to the owner of a limited interest in the property comprised in the power is extinguished when he becomes the absolute owner of such property.

Extinguishment of powers.

When the exercise of a power given to the owner of a limited interest in property would derogate from a previous grant of such interest by the donee, the power shall be deemed to have been extinguished by such grant.

Illustrations.

(a) Z, tenant for life of certain land with power to charge it with a jointure for his wife, becomes absolute owner of the land. The power is extinguished.

(b) A, tenant for life of certain land with power to grant leases thereof in possession, grants his life-interest in the land to B. The power is extinguished.

CHAPTER XII.

OF PROPERTY HELD BY SEVERAL PERSONS.

129. On the death of one of two or more persons entitled to property in their own right, his share shall become vested in his legal representative, unless the property is held under an instrument which expressly provides that on the death of one, his share shall accrue to the survivor or survivors.

Nothing in this section applies to property belonging to an undivided family.

Illustration.

A and B jointly advance money on mortgage, A contributing one-third. A dies intestate. A's third belongs to his legal representative.

130. When immoveable property is held in session by co-owners, any one of them may institute a suit in the proper Court, and such Court may direct a partition of the property to be made among the co-owners, and for the purposes of partition may, in order to equalise the value of the shares, direct any money to be paid by one to another or to be charged on one share in favour of another.

If it appear to the Court that a sale of the property and a distribution of the proceeds would be more beneficial for the persons interested than a division of the property between them, the Court may, on the application of any such person, direct a sale of the property.

Nothing in the second clause of this section shall be deemed to authorise the Court to direct a sale of the property of an undivided family.

131. On any sale under the last preceding section, the Court may, if it think fit, allow any of the persons interested in the property to bid at the sale, on such terms as to setting-off or accounting for the purchase-money or any part thereof, or as to any other matters, as to the Court seems reasonable.

132. All sums of money paid under the two last preceding sections may, if the Court think fit, be paid into court.

133. Nothing in this chapter shall affect any local law for the time being in force relating to the partition of estates paying revenue to Government.

134. When undivided immoveable property is held in possession by co-owners and one of them transfers his share or any interest therein, by sale, mortgage or otherwise, the transferee takes the share or interest subject to the right of the other co-owners to enforce a partition of the property; and when such partition is effected, the right of the transferee as such, in the absence of a contract to the contrary by the co-owners, extends only to the share allotted to himself or to his transferor.

135. When one co-owner of immoveable property commits, or threatens to commit, waste on the same without the consent of the other joint-owner, that other may institute a suit to recover compensation for the injury caused to him by the waste, or to obtain an injunction to stay the waste, as the case may require.

CHAPTER XIII.

OF ASSIGNMENTS OF THINGS IN ACTION.

136. No assignment of, or charge on, any debt, or any beneficial interest in moveable property, shall have any operation against the debtor or against the person in whom the property is vested, until express notice of the assignment or charge is given to him, unless he is a party to such assignment or charge; and every dealing by such debtor or person, not being a party to, and not having received express notice of, an assignment or charge, with the debt or property shall be valid as against such assignment or charge.

Illustrations.

(a) A owes money to B, who assigns the debt to C. B then demands the debt from A, who, having no notice of the assignment, pays B. The payment is valid, and C cannot sue A for the debt.

(b) A has jewels deposited with B, a jeweller. A mortgages them to C. A then executes an instrument assigning them to D, who takes it to B and gets the jewels from him before he, B, has received any notice of C's mortgage. B is justified in handing the jewels to D, and C has no remedy against D.

137. Every such notice must be in writing signed by the person making the assignment or charge, or by his agent duly authorized in this behalf.

138. On receiving such notice, the debtor or person in whom the property is vested shall give effect to the assignment or charge, unless where the debtor resides, or the property is situate, in a foreign country and the title of the person in whose favour the assignment or charge is made is not complete according to the law of such country.

139. The person to whom a debt or charge is assigned shall take it subject to all the liabilities to which the assignor was subject in respect thereof at the date of the assignment.

Illustration.

(a). A debenture is issued in fraud of a public company to A. A sells and transfers the debenture to B, who has no notice of the fraud. The debenture is invalid in the hands of B.

140. Nothing in this chapter applies to debts secured by negotiable instruments.

CHAPTER XIV.

OF APPORTIONMENT.

141. All rents, annuities, pensions, dividends and other periodical payments shall, upon the determination by death or otherwise, of the interest of the person entitled to receive such payment, be apportioned as if they had been made to accrue due from day to day, but to be payable on the days appointed for the payment thereof.

Nothing in this section shall affect any express provision in any instrument binding on such person

THE THIRD SCHEDULE.

DECREE FOR SUCCESSIVE REDEMPTIONS.

(See section 61.)

[A, third mortgagee ... Plaintiff.
B first mortgagee in possession)
C second mortgagee ... } Defendants.]
D owner of right of redemption)

Account of what is due to the defendant B for principal and interest in respect of the said mortgage of 1837, and for costs properly incurred in respect thereof, and tax him his costs of the suit.

Account of the rents and profits of the mortgaged property received by the said defendant B, or by any other person by his order or for his use, or which without his wilful neglect or default might have been received. Let what shall be owing on such last mentioned account be deducted from what shall be found due to the defendant B for principal, interest and costs as aforesaid.

And upon the defendant C paying to the said B the balance which shall be remaining due to him for such principal, interest and costs after such deduction within six months after such balance has been declared in court,

Let the said B assign the mortgaged property free from incumbrances created by him, or any one claiming under him, or those under whom he claims, and deliver upon oath all documents of title in his possession or power relating thereto to the said C, or as he shall appoint.

But in default of the said C paying to the said B such balance by the time aforesaid, let him stand absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem such property.

And in case of such foreclosure, compute for the said B his subsequent interest on his said mortgage and tax him his subsequent costs of the said suit. And upon the plaintiff A paying to the said B what shall be found due to him for principal, interest and costs as aforesaid after such deduction as aforesaid within three months after such amount has been declared in court,

Let the defendant B assign the mortgaged property free from incumbrances, &c. [as above] and deliver upon oath, &c. [as above] to the said A, or as he shall appoint.

But in default of the said A paying to the said B what shall be found due to him as aforesaid by the time aforesaid, let the said A stand absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem such property.

And in case of such foreclosure, compute the said B subsequent interest on his said mortgage and tax him his subsequent costs of the said suit, and upon the said D paying to the said B the amount found due to him for principal, interest and costs as aforesaid, within three months after such amount has been declared in court, let the said B assign the said mortgaged property free from incumbrances, &c. [as above] and deliver upon oath, &c. [as above] to the said D, or as he shall appoint.

But in default of the said D paying to the said B what shall be found due to him as aforesaid by the time aforesaid, let the said D stand absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem such property.

But in case the said C should redeem the said B as aforesaid by the time aforesaid—

Let an account be taken of what is due to the said C for principal and interest in the mortgage of 1841, and for what the said C shall so pay to the said D for principal, interest and costs as aforesaid, and for interest thereon, and also tax the said C his costs of the said suit,

And upon the said A paying to the said C what shall be found due to him for such principal, interest and costs within three months after such amount has been declared in court, let the said C assign the said property free, &c., [as above] and deliver upon oath, &c. [as above] to the said A, or as he shall appoint.

But in default of the said A paying to the said C what shall be found due to him as aforesaid by the time aforesaid, let the said A stand absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem such property.

And in case of such foreclosure, compute the said C his subsequent interest on his said mortgage and on what he shall have paid to the said B and tax him his subsequent costs of this suit. And upon the said D paying to the said C what shall be found due to him for principal, interest and costs as aforesaid within three months after such amount has been declared in court, let the said C assign, &c. [as above].

But in default of the said D paying to the said C what shall be found due to him as aforesaid by the time aforesaid, let the said D stand absolutely foreclosed, &c. [as above].

But in case the said A shall redeem the said C as aforesaid, let an account be taken of what was due to the said A for principal and interest on the mortgage of 1861 in the plaint mentioned, and for what the said A shall so pay the said C for principal, interest and costs as aforesaid, and for interest thereon, and also tax the said A his costs of the said suit.

And upon the said D paying to the said A what shall be found due to him for such principal, interest and costs as aforesaid, within three months after such amount has been declared in court—

Let the said A assign the said property free, &c. [as above], and deliver upon oath, &c. [as above], to the said D, or as he shall appoint.

But in default of the said D paying to the said A what shall be due to him for such principal, interest and costs by the time aforesaid, the said D is from thenceforth to be absolutely foreclosed, &c. [as above].

WEEKLY CONDITION REPORT OF THE DISTRESSED DISTRICTS OF THE
MYSORE PROVINCES.

PROVINCE OF MYSORE.

(No. 52).

Special Famine Report for the Week ending 2nd February 1878.

Statement No. 52, regarding Famine Relief Operations in the Province of Mysore, for the Week ending the 2nd February 1878.

The weather was somewhat warmer during the week, and reports of the public health were a little better. The completion of the harvest and the cultivation of the Vaisakh crops continue to afford a good deal of occupation for field laborers, and there is as yet no evidence of increasing pressure on the poorer classes, or of any growing necessity for relief other than that now provided by public works. The Famine^a Commissioner has made a short tour in central and east Kolar, and considers the dry crops there have yielded about one-third of the ordinary produce, while he was gratified to find the wet lands, the area of which in those parts is considerable, have been utilized to the fullest extent.

2. Imports of grain by rail amounted to 1,464 tons, or 698 tons more than last week, but less by 164 tons than the previous week. The exports from Bangalore to the interior were 436 tons, or a decrease of 54 tons. Prices are unsteady, but there is no marked change.

3. The number of laborers on Civil relief works in the Tûmkûr, Hassan, and Chitaldrug Districts is returned at 4,025, as compared with 4,604 for the week preceding, but the figures are apparently incorrect for the Tûmkûr District, where the great bulk of these laborers are working.

4. On the other hand, there has been a very general increase on works under the supervision of the Public Works Department, 40,204 persons being employed, or 2,243 more than in the week before. Some gangs in the Tûmkûr District were marched to more important works without any considerable loss, and it is hoped the difficulty of inducing people to resort to large central works will decrease as the season advances. The following is a list of the more important works:—

No.	District.	Name of Work.	Number employed.

12	Chitaldrug	Timmanhalli Tank	619	606
13	Do.	Dodderi Feeder	522	793
TOTAL			36,199	38,046

5. The number in relief camps, of which there are now 25, was 3,775, or a decrease of 353. Two-thirds of these are in the Bangalore and Tûmkûr Districts. The numbers admitted to camps have not been correctly reported : 638 were sent to their homes and 196 drafted to works. Besides these, the following numbers, consisting both of applicants for relief and of beggars and sick persons brought in by the Municipal Police, were dealt with by the despatching officer at Bangalore :—

Sent to the Railway works	1,010
Do. Tank works	15
Do. Special gangs	329
Do. Relief camp	75
Do. Hospital	64
TOTAL				1,493

NORTHERN INDIA LICENSE BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the licensing of trades and dealings in the Panjāb, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh be taken into consideration. He said :—
“ MY LORD,—In asking the Council to take this report into consideration with the object of passing the Bill into law, I shall have little to say regarding the measure itself. The reasons for which new taxation is required, and the principles on which the actual proposals of the Government are based, have been so fully explained already, that it is quite unnecessary that I should enter into them again. That further taxation is unavoidable to enable the Government to meet, as one of the ordinary charges of the State, the obligation of preserving the lives of the people in time of famine is admitted, I think I may say, by all reasonable men. The form which this fresh taxation should take is on the other hand a subject on which it is inevitable that differences of opinion should exist. I have stated on behalf of the Government the reasons which have led us to the conclusion that the trading and agricultural classes are those on which the obligation of contributing for the prevention and relief of famine more especially rests. These are the classes on which as a whole, and on which almost alone, the pressure of actual famine falls. They ought, therefore, to contribute for their own protection. In regard to the commercial and trading classes, there is also this strongest of all justifications for taxing them, that, excepting always that comparatively very small section of them which is composed of Europeans, they now pay almost nothing towards the expenses of the State. There is, moreover, this further reason, that although the trading and agricultural classes are the first to suffer when famine occurs within the limits of their own Provinces, they benefit immensely, taking them as a whole, by the occurrence of famine in other parts of the Empire. The misfortune of their neighbours brings to them wealth and prosperity.

“ On the other hand, the professional classes and those who depend on fixed incomes for their support, although they suffer from the high prices caused by famine, are seldom the recipients of actual relief from the State; under no circumstances do they derive any advantage from famine when it occurs, and they have no power of passing on to others the burdens placed on themselves. The small officials and servants receiving wages are in this country very numerous, and there is certainly no class on which it would be less equitable to impose taxation for such a purpose as this.

"I quite sympathise with the feeling which makes so many people regret and protest against the apparent injustice of exempting from further taxation the happy possessors of large incomes derived from professional or official or other sources. But I will not enter into this question. Its real meaning is in my opinion simply this. Would not an income-tax upon all classes of persons and property have been better than the measures which have been actually proposed by the Government? I leave it to others to answer the question. For my own part, I have already said that I was always a supporter of the income-tax while it lasted, but I do not think that its re-imposition at the present time would be politic or just. Under such circumstances, moreover, as the present, Government has to consider what is practicable, and although I do not mean to say that it was really impracticable to restore the income-tax, I freely confess that I should have been sorry to have had to propose it until the public was convinced that no other means existed of obtaining the additional revenue which was required. I said before, and I now repeat, that, in my opinion, we have to choose between measures such as those which are now before the Council and an income-tax. There is no other alternative that I, at least, can see.

"The objections to a license-tax, like that described in the present Bill, are obvious. The tax necessarily falls comparatively lightly on those who can best afford to pay it. Here, again, I say, if you refuse this condition, you can only remove it by subjecting the commercial classes to an income-tax. The objection that we were proposing to tax the rich too little has been to a certain extent removed by the change which the Select Committee has made in the Bill, and which I hope the Council will accept, by which the maximum fee chargeable will be five hundred instead of two hundred rupees. The change will give us very little more money, and it involves no principle; for whatever sum may be fixed as the maximum fee, must be fixed in a purely arbitrary manner. If, however, raising the amount to Rs. 500 makes the tax seem more equitable, this is itself an advantage. As to the objection which has been raised in some quarters, that this tax will fall mainly on the poor, I content myself with simply denying the fact. It will touch no person whose nett earnings are less than Rs. 100 a year; and if anybody asserts that in the Provinces to which this Bill refers, any man is poor who possesses an income of Rs. 100 a year, he is ignorant of the facts. Such a man is not poor; he is a man far removed above poverty, and well able to pay his contribution towards insuring the country against famine. To say that our new taxation will fall upon the poor is either an error or a calumny.

"As I shall show again presently, exactly the same thing is true regarding the additional rates which we propose to levy on the land. My old friend, Sir George Campbell, told the British public the other day, that his soul was 'filled with anguish' when he thought of the iniquity that we were committing in imposing taxes on the poorest classes for the benefit and at the instigation of the rich. Now, I am not going to make a counter-attack upon Sir George Campbell. If I could ever be inclined to do so, it would not be in this Council-room in Calcutta, in the great Province which owes to him, in my judgment, a lasting debt of gratitude for the admirable, but often far from pleasant, work which he performed as its Governor. But Sir George Campbell, with all his great qualities, has never been distinguished by his reticence.

"I remember on one occasion telling him myself, when he had issued a certain wonderful circular, that if his Secretary had done his duty, the manuscript, instead of being sent off straight to the press, would have been accidentally mislaid for a fortnight. It is a pity that Sir George Campbell's letter to the Times did not suffer a similar fate: he might then have learnt that he had been knocking down the creations of his own fancy, and he might have written, as I hope his sense of justice will make him do now, an eloquent tribute of admiration to our measures.

"We are doing none of those things with which Sir George Campbell has charged us. By the Bills now before the Council, we are imposing no fresh taxation whatever on the poor; and as to the Salt-tax, in regard to which our imaginary proceedings have made Sir George Campbell so especially unhappy, I will say now, what I have said before, that we have taken the greatest steps ever yet taken in India for reducing the pressure of this tax upon the poor, and giving to the mass of the people the largest possible supply of salt at the cheapest possible rate. In Northern and Central India, not only are we imposing no fresh burdens on the poorest classes, but we have already benefited these classes by the removal of taxation on salt to the extent of £200,000.

"There is another fact bearing on the License Bill to which I must call attention. It is, as I have said, proposed that no person shall be liable to the tax whose annual earnings are less than Rs. 100. This does not appear on the face of the Bill, and the reason for this is that as the measure will extend to several Provinces and will have to be applied under conditions which vary considerably in different districts, it is not certain that the same minimum limit of taxable income will everywhere be appropriate. For independently of other considerations, the purchasing power of money varies greatly. Under the existing license-tax in the North-Western Provinces, no one is taxed whose presumed income is less than Rs. 200, and it may be found desirable to make no change in this respect. We desire to leave a wide discretion to the Local Governments, which are in the best position for forming sound opinions on such a subject. While, however, the Government of India allows this discretion to be exercised for the relief of the tax-payers, it gives no such authority to extend the incidence of the tax downwards. Under no circumstances will the tax touch any one whose annual earnings are less than Rs. 100. Nor is this all. It will be observed that the lowest fee payable under the Bill is one rupee. The Bill declares that any person may claim to have the fee charged against him reduced or remitted altogether, if he can show that it falls at a higher rate than two per cent. on his annual earnings. Applying this rate of two per cent. to an income of Rs. 100, the minimum fee would be two rupees and not one rupee. The meaning of this is that the Government desires to leave to the local authorities entrusted with the administration of the tax a discretion to reduce the demand when they are of opinion that it would fall heavily. Thus it will often happen in practice that the poorest class affected by the measure will pay at the rate of one per cent. only instead of two per cent., the rate charged on the higher incomes.

"I need not say anything further about the License Bill. I think it will be convenient if I ask Your Excellency and the Council to allow me to pass now to the other taxation Bills under which additional rates will be imposed on the land in Northern India. Those Bills are so closely connected with the Bill actually before us that they can hardly be considered separately, and I hope that the Council will agree with me in thinking it desirable that the discussion of the whole of our measures should take place while the present Bill is before us. My reason for saying this is that it is, as I have already fully explained, an essential part of the policy of the Government that this new taxation should fall both on the commercial and agricultural classes, and that so far as may be practicable each class shall bear an approximately equal burden. This principle has already been to a great extent carried out already. Additional rates similar in character to those which we are now proposing to levy in Northern India have already been imposed in Bengal, and the Bill taxing the commercial classes of that Province will, I presume, soon become law. We desire to apply the same principle to the other Provinces, the only exception being that, for reasons which have been stated at length to the Council, it is not thought proper to impose at the present time fresh taxation on the agricultural classes in Madras and Bombay.

"When these Bills were introduced I said that the justice of imposing new burdens on the agricultural classes would be more questioned than that of imposing them on the traders, and referred prominently to the objections which had been and would continue to be urged against fresh taxation of this kind, on the ground that it infringed, or would be thought to infringe, the conditions of the settlement of the land-revenue. I declined, and must still decline, to discuss the question of the right of the State to impose such taxes, for as I have already said it is impossible that any Indian question could be named which has been more completely argued out during a long course of years than this, and no question could be named which has been more distinctly closed by positive decisions of Her Majesty's Government. I have now a right to assume (I am now quoting the words of the Secretary of State) that—

“the levying of such rates upon the holders of land, irrespective of the amount of their land-assessment, involves no breach of faith upon the part of the Government, whether as regards holders of permanent or temporary tenures.”

“I feel that I may also, without impropriety, decline to discuss the question whether, apart from the right to impose such taxes, the condition of the classes on whom in Northern India the actual burden will fall is such that they can pay without hardship the amount which it is now proposed to levy. That amount is one per cent. on the rental of the land. I do not, I hope, undervalue the opinions of those officers, some of them men who are entitled to be listened to with high respect, who think it inexpedient to impose any fresh taxation on the land. But this I assert that it is impossible for any one who knows anything of the real condition of the proprietors of land in any part of Northern India, to say that these rates will be more than an insignificant burden. It must be remembered that they, in common with the existing local rates to which they will be an addition, will be payable by the landlord, and will not fall on the poorer classes interested in the land. I do not deny that it will very frequently happen that the landlord will do everything in his power and will often succeed in making his tenants pay the amount charged against him. But the same would be true of every other tax which could be imposed upon him, and this objection has no special force in the present instance. Neither can it be disputed that within the limits authorised by law, and justified by custom, rents will in the long run inevitably be raised by landlords, whether they are taxed or not, as they think consistent with their own interests, so long as the tenants will pay them. Tenants, however, are rapidly learning to protect their own rights, and it is not so easy as it once was to impose upon them demands unauthorised by law.

“Before leaving this part of the subject, I may add that the Government of India has no intention of actually levying these additional rates in the North-Western Provinces until the country has completely recovered from the serious loss which it suffered from the almost total failure of the last summer crops. The Lieutenant-Governor has been informed that no additional demand will be made until the next agricultural year. The Government of the Panjáb has decided that no similar reasons exist for deferring the collection of the new rate in that Province.

“There is one objection to the imposition of new rates on the land which I fully admit is a real one. It is an objection which it has always been clear we should have to meet, and it received the careful consideration of the Government before these measures were proposed. I cannot state that objection more clearly than by quoting the following passage from the letter from the Government of the Panjáb which has been laid before the Council:—

“The Lieutenant-Governor would duly record, with reference to the Bill for enhancement of the local cess, that he believes that, although it will give rise to no active discontent or expression of dissatisfaction, it will still be regarded by the people with some dissatisfaction, as involving a further departure than that taken in the original Local Cess Act from the principle of the fixity of the land-revenue demand. This feeling of dissatisfaction will not be the less strong from the fact that the money raised under the new Act will possibly be spent out of the Panjáb. To a trained intelligence it is easy to distinguish the proposed impost, which is no more than a tax upon rent, from an enhancement of the Government share of the produce of the land. But His Honour doubts whether it is possible to persuade uneducated zamindárs, the more especially that the revenue is no longer taken in kind, but in cash, that the demand is not an increase on the amount of land-revenue which has in each district been fixed for the term of settlement. The Lieutenant-Governor does not however imagine that there will be any difficulty in collecting the enhanced tax, or that after a short time, the irritation caused will not pass away.”

“Although we have not received from the other Provinces objections similar to these which have come to us from the Panjáb, there cannot be the least doubt that they will be felt as much in one Province as in another. They were urged in 1871 in the North-Western Provinces, when new local rates were imposed in the permanently-settled districts; they were urged at the same time in Oudh; they were urged in the Panjáb; they will everywhere be urged now, and they will be urged again hereafter, if it should ever become necessary to place additional taxation on the proprietors of the land. Exactly the same objection was raised to the imposition of the income-tax on profits derived from land. The Government has, for years past, done its best to make people understand the essential difference between the land-revenue and taxes of this kind; and in 1871, when the laws were passed under which the local rates in Northern India are imposed, the Legislature enacted, in the plainest possible language, that these rates 'shall be paid by the landlord independently of, and in addition to, any land-revenue assessed on the estate.'

"In spite, however, of all that has been done, the old ignorance continues. Nor can we expect that it will soon disappear among the people, when we find that economical heresies, such as those to which I have alluded, still form part of the faith of many of our own officers. Objections to taxation of this sort, based on opinions which have their sole origin in the ignorance of the people, cannot be answered, although this does not make them less real. Among all the difficulties and dangers with which we have to contend in India, those to which we are exposed by the ignorance of the people are incomparably the most serious. It is, unhappily, true that our most enlightened and useful measures are, as a general rule, precisely those which are the least popular. If any man supposes that we earn the present gratitude of the people of India by abolishing sati and infanticide, by female education, by constructing railways and canals, by making the towns and country healthy, or even by improving the laws, which add to the security of life and property, that man is greatly mistaken; but this is no reason why we are not to persevere with our work. So I say of these Bills. I do not pretend that the people who have to pay these taxes will like them; but it is, in the opinion of the Government, necessary that they should be imposed, and we trust the Local Governments when they tell us that, while they can suggest no better form of taxation, they are satisfied that the measures now proposed will lead to no serious dissatisfaction which it might be politically unwise to face, and that such dissatisfaction as may arise will soon pass away, as it has passed away in similar cases before.

"In concluding the remarks that I desire to make on the Bills now before the Council, I will only add that the Government of India is fortunately enabled to say that its policy is cordially approved by all the Local Governments which these Bills will affect, not only with regard to the proposals that specially affect the land, but to all the measures by which we hope to provide the necessary insurance against famine; and further, that these Governments confidently look forward to the successful application of these measures in their respective Provinces. I do not doubt that these assurances will be as satisfactory to the public as they have been to the Government of India.

"A desire has been expressed that I would explain more fully than has hitherto been done the manner in which the Government proposes to apply the proceeds of these new taxes. I shall, I feel certain, be very readily able to do this to the satisfaction of the Council, for nothing can be clearer than the principles on which the Government proposes to act.

"I can hardly do better, in the first place, than ask the Council to look at the brief official Statement of Objects and Reasons, which was published with the new Taxation Bills when they were first introduced. That Statement explained, in a few words, the reasons for these measures. It was said that the necessity was imposed upon the Government of India of bringing the public revenues and expenditure into a state of proper equilibrium; that famines could no longer be treated as exceptional calamities, and that the obligations entailed by them must be provided for among the ordinary charges of the State. The periodical occurrence of famine must, therefore, enter into the calculation of the Government in making provision for its ordinary yearly wants, and such a surplus of ordinary income over expenditure must be provided in each year of prosperity, as would make a sensible impression on the debt which it might be necessary to incur in times of famine. To enable the Government, it was said, to meet these obligations, additional taxation was necessary.

"The object, which I thus stated, is a perfectly simple one. These new taxes are required for the sole purpose of giving us, year by year, a sufficient surplus of income over expenditure to meet these famine charges, which had not hitherto been taken into consideration in our yearly accounts. It seems to have been supposed by some that the primary object of the Government of India was to give to the Local Governments the proceeds of these new taxes, and to transfer to them, in some mysterious manner, certain indefinite obligations in relation to the future charge arising from famine. There could be no greater mistake, and I am sure that I have never said anything to justify it. These great calamities can only be met by aid of the resources of the Government of India, and it is these resources that must be strengthened to meet the obligations they impose. Although then, as I shall presently explain, we shall use the Local Governments as our agents in levying these taxes, their proceeds will mainly go into the Imperial Treasury. With their help, we hope to secure that surplus revenue, which will enable us in the future to discharge the heavy obligations which the periodical occurrence of famine entails upon the country, without being driven into the fatal course of constantly increasing the public debt, and the burden it involves.

"As I previously explained, we start with the hypothesis, that in every ten years the Government of India will have to spend £15,000,000 on the relief of famine. The case will be put into its simplest form, if we assume that the whole of the £15,000,000 will have to be spent at once at the end of this period, and the arguments I am about to use will not be in any way invalidated by this assumption, though it be not strictly true. Now, as the very foundation of our policy is the resolution not to permit this expenditure to create a constantly increasing charge for interest, the expedient of simply borrowing when the occasion occurs, and thus increasing the annual charges on account of debt, say, by £600,000 in each period of ten years, must, of course, be set aside; and it follows that we can only obtain the £15,000,000 which we require by saving up an equivalent sum in years of prosperity. If we provide for this purpose a bonâ fide surplus of £1,500,000 a year for ten years, we shall have obtained our £15,000,000.

"As we cannot keep our annual savings locked up in a separate box, it is inevitable that when the actual necessity for spending the £15,000,000 arrives, we shall have to borrow the money, so that what we have practically to do is this—we must reduce our debt by £1,500,000 year by year during the whole period, or by £15,000,000 in the ten years, thereby reducing the yearly charge for interest at the end of that time by £600,000. Then, when the necessity for spending the £15,000,000 arrives, we can borrow that amount and incur a fresh charge for interest of £600,000 a year, and be no worse off than we were ten years before. This process, by which in periods of prosperity the charge for interest on debt is gradually reduced, thus constantly restoring the exhausted power of borrowing without increased taxation, is what the Government virtually proposes to adopt.

"In India, however, the policy has been deliberately and wisely accepted of borrowing every year large sums of money for the construction of the railways and canals which it is absolutely necessary that the country should possess if its material advancement is not to be arrested. Even if the financial consequences of this policy had been less satisfactory than they have been, it might still have been our duty to persevere in it, though it should have called for increased sacrifices from the country in the form of taxation. But experience has shown beyond the shadow of a doubt that, looking at the matter even from a purely financial point of view, we could have done nothing wiser and more profitable than go on investing capital in these undertakings; and that so long as these investments are prudently limited, as they have been up to the present time, so that the growing income derived from the works keeps pace with the charge for interest on the borrowed funds, they may be continued with complete financial safety.

"It was on considerations such as these that Lord Lawrence in 1869, in his Minute on Railway extension, assuming that the revenues could, without objection, bear a yearly charge of about thirteen millions, to meet the interest on Capital-outlay on productive works in course of construction, &c., during the period in which their income is becoming developed, based his proposals for the gradual, but systematic, prosecution of this class of works, and that the Government of India has been since acting with most satisfactory results. The forecasts relating to the extraordinary expenditure on Railways and Irrigation Works that have from time to time been prepared in the Public Works Department have supplied sufficient evidence of the prudence with which this part of our financial policy has been conducted, and it is only necessary to follow the same principles in the future to ensure equally sound results.

"The truth of these remarks can readily be established. In the first place, the nett charge for the interest on the Guaranteed Railway Capital, which was upwards of eighteen millions sterling in 1870-71, was reduced by the growth of the income to less than £300,000 in 1876-77, while in the present financial year, partly no doubt from the increased famine-traffic, the interest will be more than covered. And though next year quite so good a result cannot be anticipated, it is certain that in these six years a nett improvement of more than 1½ millions has been secured for the public revenues by reason of these works. During the same period the total expenditure on State Railways has reached a sum involving a gross charge for interest now amounting to £700,000, against which we already have a nett income of £300,000 yearly, leaving a nett charge of £400,000. The Irrigation Works carried out in the same years have led to an increase of interest-charge of £400,000, set-off by an increased nett income of £200,000, leaving a nett charge of £200,000. On the whole, setting-off the increased charge of £600,000 against the improved income of 1½ million, the general result is an improved financial position of £600,000 a year, notwithstanding the large investments made in the new works, a considerable part of which is necessarily not yet productive, though it is rapidly becoming so.

"The same general result is plainly indicated otherwise by the fact that the total charge for Interest on Debt of all sorts and Guaranteed Railway Capital is in the present year less than the charge in 1870-71 by about two millions, to which sum should be added the nett increase of income due to Public Works, amounting, say, to £500,000, to show the improvement in the general financial position, which, if not directly due to the prosecution of these works, has, at all events, been consistent with a continued average expenditure upon them of hardly less than four millions a year. It must also be remembered that these results have been secured during a period in which very exceptional seasons of scarcity have occurred, involving charges of some sixteen millions sterling.

"We assume, therefore, that the Government will continue to borrow money on these principles for such productive works.

"Now, it would be obviously absurd to pay off every year debt to the amount of £1,500,000, and simultaneously to incur fresh debt to the same extent. What, therefore, we have to do, in the actual circumstances of the case is, by applying to the construction of these works the proceeds of the new taxes, to reduce by £1,500,000 a year the sum which we might otherwise have borrowed. The ultimate financial result of this, as will readily be seen, will be practically the same as that which would have followed if we had devoted every year £1,500,000 to the actual repayment of debt. For returning to our former hypothesis, we shall, at the end of our ten years, thus have prevented borrowing to the extent of £15,000,000, and our annual charge for interest will then be less by £600,000 a year than it would otherwise have been. We could, therefore, if occasion required, borrow £15,000,000 for the relief of famine, and be in no worse a financial position than we were at the beginning of the period of ten years.

"The soundness of this argument depends of course on the assumption that the works which are constructed from our annual contribution of £1,500,000 from the public revenues will be really reproductive, that is, that they will at the end of the ten years produce an income at least equal to the interest which we should have to pay if we had then to replace by borrowing a sum equal to that furnished from the new taxes for their construction. This assumption, however, has no special or peculiar significance in connection with these new arrangements; it is (as I have just explained) the justification of our whole policy of borrowing money for works of public improvement. Whether we construct our railways and canals with borrowed capital, or pay for them out of this famine insurance fund, we equally assume that they will eventually give us a return of more than the ordinary charge for interest on the outlay; and to repeat what I have said before, experience has now been sufficiently prolonged to show conclusively that, notwithstanding all the mistakes that have been made, the gradual growth of the income of the productive public works has been sufficient to protect the Imperial Treasury against any increase to the actual charge for interest on debt. This explanation will show the Council how, either by the direct discharge of debt, or by the investment of money in productive works, if the circumstances of the time should render that course most suitable, charges on the revenue may be extinguished, or new income created, which shall enable the Government to borrow in the future to the full extent to which the proceeds of the new taxes are applied, and that a true famine insurance fund will thus have been created.

"I have hitherto spoken as if the subject concerned the Imperial Government alone; and I have made no reference to the part in the arrangements which will devolve upon the Local Governments. Vitally important as this part will, in my opinion, be, I might indeed almost pass it by on the present occasion, because it is not the subject now before this Council. We are really merely asking this Council to authorise the imposition of new taxes for the purpose of improving the financial position of the Government of India to such an extent that it will be able to undertake, with its ordinary revenues, by help of the arrangements that I have described, the duty of preserving the lives of the people in time of famine. At the same time the Government is most ready to give every explanation in its power to the Council on all parts of its policy, and I will as briefly as possible state the manner in which the action of the Local Governments may be expected to conduce to the great end we have in view.

"I have, on former occasions, stated to the Council, with a persistency which I am afraid has sometimes wearied them, that the keystone of the whole financial policy of the present Government is the enforcement to the utmost of the responsibility of every great Province of the Empire for meeting its own local wants. We have given to the Local Governments largely increased powers; we declare that they alone are competent to deal wisely with the details of administration; that they have advantages which we cannot possess of seeing what their own Provinces require; and that it is only by acting on these principles that we can obtain either good provincial administration, or exercise that intelligent power of control on the part of the Imperial Government which we look upon as essential to the prosperity of the Empire. It is childish to suppose that the Government of India increases its strength by meddling with details about which it knows nothing.

"A great deal has been done, and a great deal remains to be done, in carrying these principles into effect; and the most serious duty now before us is their application to the great problem of preserving the country against famine. I do not now pretend to say how this application of these principles is in detail to be carried out. The whole subject of the measures to be taken for the prevention and relief of famine is so vast that it would be mere foolishness if I were now to attempt to enter upon it. It is, as the Council and the public are aware, about to be referred to a special commission of enquiry, and certainly no greater question had ever to be studied than that on which they will have to deliberate and advise.

"If, therefore, I now am asked to describe how this money, which the Government of India proposes to devote to the relief and prevention of famine, is to be spent, I can give no exact reply. I cannot tell the Council what railways and canals will be constructed; still less can I tell them what systems of relief will be acted upon when millions of starving people have to be fed, or what changes of administration will be necessary to enable the measures of prevention and relief to be carried out under the best possible conditions. All that I can say with certainty is this, that if the great works for increasing the productiveness, and for improving the communications, of the country are to be wisely chosen, and wisely and economically executed, and if the income which they yield is to receive its best development; if again, when famine actually occurs, sound principles of relief are to be applied with real efficiency and wisdom, it will be through the agency of the Local Governments and the local authorities that these results will be obtained; and not by the action of the Central Government. Among all the responsibilities which we desire to impose on the Local Governments, the greatest of all will be that of protecting the people of their own Provinces against famine. The working out in detail of the arrangements by which we hope that this object may eventually be accomplished will be a work of time. We do not disguise from ourselves the fact that many of the efforts which may be made before prolonged experience has been gained may, hereafter, be found to have been erroneous; but this is no reason why we should now hesitate to take the first steps, which seem to us at the present time to be required. We can do little more now than declare the principles which we intend to follow. I have already explained those principles. While we say that every Province must be primarily responsible for supplying the wants which arise within its own limits, we have not been able to devise any plan by which the actual expenditure for the relief of widespread famine could be charged directly to the Local Governments. When a famine occurs, local resources are necessarily for the time swamped and overwhelmed, and the whole resources of the Empire must be employed for the relief of the afflicted territory. On the other hand, to enable the Imperial Treasury to bear such great occasional burdens, all the Provinces must, year by year, contribute what I have called mutual assurance payments, which payments go to form the surplus to be stored up for use in time of need; not, of course, to be stored up idly in the treasury, for that would be a reckless, purposeless waste, but stored up in the shape of unemployed borrowing power, which would otherwise have been consumed. Thus, as I have said before, resources will be created upon which the central authority will draw whenever it is found necessary to discharge the obligations arising from what I have called the dead-weight of famine-expenditure.

"To maintain the principle of provincial responsibility, and to give to the Local Governments a substantial interest in the efficient and economical levying of the new taxes, these taxes will be imposed provincially, and we desire, so far as possible, to distribute the funds which will become available for the construction of railways and canals among the Local Governments with some regard to the amount of the local contributions. Although, as I have already explained, it is necessary that the special resources now created shall be at the complete command of the Government of India, we shall leave to the Local Governments, to be spent by them, a margin from the new taxes, just as we have left them a margin of the revenues from excise and stamps, which have lately been made provincial. The imposition, provincially, of the new taxes will bring home the sense of provincial obligation more fully than would have been the case if the taxes had been treated as imperial; and the propriety will be more readily acknowledged of leaving the Local Governments to construct and maintain and profit by the works to which these new taxes will contribute.

"There is an additional advantage which we hope will result from these new measures. To whatever extent we can supply funds from the produce of the new taxes, we shall be less dependent than heretofore on borrowed money for the means of constructing our reproductive works; and we may hence reasonably hope to be able in future to provide funds for these purposes with more regularity and certainty than has hitherto been possible.

"I see in another direction also promise of further relief to the Central Government, and of great benefit to the Provincial Governments, in respect to the debt to be hereafter incurred for works of local utility. Both in Bengal and in the North-Western Provinces steps, which have been attended with marked success, have already been taken for obtaining subscriptions to loans in the localities interested in works of this character. I hope that it may be found possible to develop and systematise such a means of providing the capital that may properly be borrowed for works of improvement; and that local contributions may be successfully sought under conditions which will interest the classes directly benefited by such works, not only in the provision of the funds required for their construction, but in the proper management of the works when they are completed, and in the development of the revenue which they produce.

“The arrangements which we are now making will be in complete harmony with those which were initiated in March last. The Imperial Treasury will be protected, if not wholly, at least to a very great extent, from past and future charges on account of interest on the capital invested in railways and canals. The provincial revenues will have to supply to the Imperial Treasury, or to hold at its disposal year by year, a sum equal to the interest on the capital expended on all the reproductive works, constructed either with borrowed money or funds supplied from the new taxes; and assuming that the works are judiciously designed, executed and managed, this sum will be provided by the income which they produce. The surplus income yielded by the works will go to increase the provincial revenues. These arrangements will give the best possible security for the judicious selection of the works, their economical construction and management, and for proper attention being paid to the development of the income they should produce. Their failure will entail burdens which the provincial revenues will be required to meet; their success will add to those revenues and to the resources at the command of the Local Governments in the most advantageous manner possible for the country, without more taxation and through the instrumentality of works which constantly add to the wealth of the community at large.

“I think, My Lord, that I have now made it sufficiently clear how we propose to apply the £1,500,000 which we hope to provide as an insurance against famine. We shall apply it virtually to the reduction of debt; and when the calamity of famine actually arrives, we hope, not only to be able to meet it without throwing fresh burdens upon the country, but to find that our means of giving efficient relief have been immensely increased by the useful works which we have carried out in the preceding years of prosperity.”

The Hon'ble MR. THORNTON said: “My Lord,—Having been employed for some twenty years in the Panjáb, and had opportunities, in the course of my service, of becoming more or less acquainted with every district of that Province, I desire to trouble the Council with a few remarks upon the Bills now under consideration, chiefly by way of supplement to the statements contained in the speech of the Hon'ble Mover.

“With regard to the License Bill, I have little to say, except that there has been, on the part of the district officers of the Panjáb, a chorus of consent that, if additional taxation is necessary to provide insurance against famine, no classes can be more justly called on to contribute than the trader and the artizan, for none have benefited more from British Rule, and none have paid so little for the advantages they enjoy. The form of the tax has been generally approved, and if, as we are assured by the Hon'ble Mover will be the case, though it does not so appear on the face of the Bill, the tax is not to affect persons with incomes of less than Rs. 100 per annum, it certainly cannot be regarded as a tax upon the very poor.

“But it is to the Bill for the levy of additional rates on land in the Panjáb that the greatest objection has been raised. It has been urged on the one hand that the land cannot bear the additional burden it is sought to throw upon it; and on the other, that it will be regarded as a mere addition to the land-revenue-demand and in breach of the engagements made at settlement. Now, in regard to the first point, personal observation enables me confidently to endorse the opinion of the Hon'ble Mover, that the land-owners of the Panjáb can well afford the proposed insignificant addition to the local rates; for, in common with most observers, I am satisfied that, owing partly to the moderation of the land-revenue-assessments, partly to the security of title derived from the record-of-rights, partly to the room for extended cultivation, partly to improved communications and other results of British administration, the agriculturist of the Panjáb is, as a rule, eminently prosperous and thriving. But individual opinions upon a point like this are less valuable and less convincing than a few plain facts, and I trust, therefore, it will not be deemed out of place if I take up the time of the Council in citing a few facts in support of my assertions.

"I will begin, then, by endeavouring to give some proof of my assertion regarding the moderation of the land-revenue-assessment in the Panjáb. For this purpose I cannot do better than call the attention of the Council to page 9 of the General Summary prefixed to the Panjáb Administration Report for 1875-76, where will be found a concise history of the land-revenue assessments of the Province from before its annexation to the present time. The substance of the information there given is as follows :

"Under the Sikh Government the principle of land-revenue-administration was a very simple one. The State, as proprietor-in-chief, took from the land all that it could get ; in other words, it absorbed and appropriated the entire rental. It handed over whole tracts of country to the mercy of farmers of the revenue, and the farmer of the revenue often took as much as one-half the gross produce of the land, besides a multitude of cesses under the names of rasûm, nazrânâ, and the like, and exorbitant fines on succession. After the first Sikh war the Panjáb came, not under the dominion, but under the paramount influence, of the British Government, and one of the first points to which the attention of the British advisers of the Sikh Darbâr was turned was the oppressive character of the land-revenue administration. Accordingly, the State-demand was reduced and settlements made of the land-revenue, for terms of years, on the basis of the State taking, not half, as previously, but one-third, of the gross produce. This arrangement was at the time hailed with delight by the agricultural population as a very liberal concession. Then came the second Sikh war, followed by the annexation of the Panjáb ; and very shortly after annexation, measures were taken to introduce what are termed regular settlements into the Panjáb ; these are, as most of the Council are aware, settlements of land-revenue for terms of years, made after careful survey and enquiry into assets. Well, when these regular settlements were first introduced in the Panjáb, the system then in force in the North-Western Provinces was adopted, under which the State's land-revenue-demand was limited to two-thirds of the nett assets or landlord's rental, amounting to about one-fourth of the average gross produce ; that is to say, the British Government commenced its revenue-system by claiming as its share of the rental just half the amount that had been taken by the Sikhs. Since that time a further concession has been made, and the State's demand has been further limited to half the nett assets or rental, and all more recent settlements have been and are being made upon this principle. And it must further be observed that, though the assessments are levied upon the principle of the State, as chief proprietor, taking half the rental, in practice the amount taken is considerably less than half the rental. Measured in kind the State's demand may be said never to exceed one-sixth of the gross produce ; it is frequently not more than one-eighth, one-tenth or one-twelfth ; and in some tracts where the rainfall is scanty, it is not more than one-fifteenth of the average gross produce, the value of which is calculated at its average price for a period of from twenty to thirty years. Let us now see what effect this liberal policy, working in combination with the other causes I have adverted to previously, has had upon the position and prospects of the agriculturists in the Panjáb. One result is that there is a striking difference in the amount of land-revenue-demand in British territory on the one hand, and in the territory of adjoining Native States on the other, a circumstance greatly conducive to a feeling of contentment in the British subject. Another result is that the land-revenue, even after new assessments involving considerable increment of demand, is collected with the greatest ease ; another effect may be seen in the improved clothing and manner of life of the agricultural population ; but perhaps the increasing wealth of the peasantry will be better gauged by the following facts taken from the returns appended to the Administration Reports. In the year 1868-69, the first year for which the statistics of area and cultivation prescribed by the Government of India were prepared, the cultivated area of the Panjáb Province (exclusive of course of Native States) was in round numbers 20,100,000 acres, and the land-revenue-demand 217 lákhs of rupees. This demand fell at an average rate per cultivated acre of one rupee, one anna and three pie, a rate of incidence which experts will admit to be very moderate in comparison with the rate of incidence in other parts of British India, and still more so in comparison with rates prevailing in adjacent Native States.

"In 1872-73 (five years later) the cultivated area had increased from 20,100,000 acres to 22,600,000 acres, and the revenue-demand, though it had been intermediately increased in the ordinary course of settlement, fell at the average rate of only fifteen annas and seven pie per cultivated acre. In other words, extension of cultivation had reduced the revenue-demand per acre by ten per cent. I regret my inability to produce statistics of more recent date, but the reason is that, with a view to save labour and inconvenience to the people, the statistics from which I have quoted are prepared, not annually, but quinquennially. But I have little doubt that the next quinquennial return will show a similar if not a greater extension of cultivation, and I am informed that the Spring crop, now in the ground in the Panjáb, is by far the most extensive ever known.

"Concurrently with this expansion of cultivation and the steady reduction in the originally moderate rate of incidence of land-revenue, there has been a most remarkable increase in the selling price of land. At the time of annexation, such was the crushing character of Sikh taxation, that ordinary agricultural land had scarcely any market-value at all. In the year 1859, when I had the honour to hold the post of Secretary to the Financial Commissioner of the Panjáb, the average selling price of revenue-paying land was, I recollect, a little less than four years' purchase of the assessment; in 1868-69, ten years later, the average selling price of land was eighteen years' purchase of the assessment; in 1873-74, or five years later, it was twenty-eight years, and by the last return, that for 1875-76, it was thirty years' purchase of the assessment.

"Now, as the agricultural interest of the Panjáb is not made up of a limited number of large landed proprietors and a mass of tenantry, but is composed chiefly of a multitude of small land-owners, this enormous rise in the value of land does not mean, as it would mean in the case of England or Bengal, that a few individuals have become millionaires, but that the mass of the agricultural population are, so far as the value of their land is concerned, more than six times as well off as they were twenty years ago.

"With these facts before us, it is impossible to believe that the slight increase now proposed to the local rates will cause any serious inconvenience; for what does the Government ask? Why, it asks a body of land-owners, whose property has more than sextupled in value, to pay a famine-insurance-rate for that property amounting on an average to one farthing per acre per annum!

"But though the general condition of the Panjáb peasantry is such as I have described, I would guard myself against being supposed to assert that such condition is universal. Here and there it may be that, owing to special causes, the state of the agriculturist is not so prosperous; for instance, on the banks of those great irrigation-works, the Western Jumna and Bári Doáb Canals, there are cultivators whose physique and energies have been destroyed, and whose lands have been defertilized, by that fashionable panacea—high level irrigation. In their case, and in the case of other exceptionally circumstanced tracts, some relaxation of the demand may be required; but for such cases ample provision is made in the proposed enactment, for in clause (d) of section 15 it is declared that 'the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb may by notification from time to time * * * exempt wholly or in part any portion of the territories under his government from the operation of this Act, or exempt any land from liability to pay the whole or any part of any rate under this Act, and cancel such exemption;' and it is matter for satisfaction that the working of this provision, as well as of the other provisions, of the enactment, will be in the hands of one who is perhaps better acquainted with the character, feelings and resources of the people of the Panjáb than any other living Englishman.

"But while there can be no doubt that the land-owners of the Panjáb can generally well afford to pay the slightly enhanced local rate it is proposed to levy, it is equally certain that the enhancement will be regarded, like the original rates imposed in 1871, as an addition to the land-revenue demand, and practically, if not literally, an infringement of the engagement made at settlement; and, do what you will, the Panjáb land-owner will continue of that opinion. Explain to him with all the lucidity a trained intellect can command that the land-revenue is the share of the rental taken by the Government as proprietor-in-chief, and that the local rate is a tax on rent taken by the Government as Government, and he will reply—in the present instance it is to be hoped with a smile—that this appears to him to be a ‘distinction without a difference.’ This being the case, it has been suggested in the correspondence which is before the Council and in the public Press, that it would be better, in the event of its being necessary to tax the agricultural population, to dissociate such taxation from the land, and levy it in some other shape, such as a house-rate or an income-tax. Theoretically, there is much to be said in favour of the proposal, but looking at it from a practical point of view, I cannot agree in the suggestion, for the practical inconveniences would, I feel sure, outweigh the theoretical propriety of the arrangement. Assuming, as we must assume, that the Government is not precluded by the land-revenue-engagements from levying an additional rate upon the land, and assuming, as we must assume, the necessity for taxing the agriculturist, I can conceive no other form of taxation less open to objection by the tax-payer than the one which has been adopted, namely, a percentage on land-revenue. Any other of the alternative forms of taxation which have been suggested has the great disadvantage of involving, inter alia, special enquiry and assessment and a special agency for collection; the form of taxation proposed in the Bill has the great advantage of involving nothing of the kind.

“We have now got thus far in the consideration of the Bill; we have attempted to show that the additional tax upon the land is insignificant in amount, that the Panjáb land-owner can afford to pay it, and that the form of taxation proposed is, upon the whole, the best that can be devised in his interests. The fact unfortunately remains, that the tax will cause a certain amount of dissatisfaction and distrust in the minds of the tax-payers. Not indeed that there will be any active discontent, for the land-owner in the Panjáb is far too loyal, far too well disposed, far too well off to think of disobedience; but there will undoubtedly be a feeling of dissatisfaction which it seems desirable, if possible, to mitigate, even if it may not be possible to remove it altogether. What, then, can be done to mitigate this dissatisfaction? Well, as to this, I think, perhaps, we may learn a lesson from the past. In the year 1871, when the local rate was originally imposed, there was considerable dissatisfaction among the land-owners; but this has, we are told, completely died away. And why has it died away? Because it was arranged that the local rates should be made over to district committees on which the land-owners were to be largely represented, and spent before the eyes of the people in the districts for which it was raised: hence in the year following the imposition of the rates, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb was able to report as follows:—

“Any dissatisfaction which may have existed at the time the cess was first levied has now died away, as the people see that the funds are expended for their benefit.”

“Now, I am perfectly aware that this course cannot be exactly followed in the present case. The funds cannot be made over to committees and spent in the districts from which they may be levied; but may not something be done to show the tax-payers and the public generally, clearly and unmistakably, that ‘famine-insurance’ is not a mere pretext for raising money for general purposes, but that the tax is bonâ fide expended on the object for which it is raised? My friend, the Hon’ble Mahārājā Jotíndra Mohan Tagore, has dealt with this subject in a letter addressed by him to the Bengal Government in his capacity of Honorary Secretary to the British Indian Association, a copy of which has been laid before the Council, and his suggestions seem worthy of consideration.”

The Hon’ble MR. COLVIN said:—“My Lord, I wish to make a few remarks upon the subject of the Land Rates Bill.

“Some doubts have been expressed, both in this Council and outside it, as to the propriety of adding any further to the contribution which is already made by the land towards the necessities of the State.

“I think that some of these doubts and objections may arise out of mistaken impressions relating to the history and nature, and the pressure, of our land-revenue upon the people, and that these may be dispelled by a further and fuller knowledge of the facts. The subject of the land-revenue in India is tedious and uninteresting, intricate in some of its details, and, above all, it is strange and unfamiliar. The ideas out of which it has grown, and which it has not yet ceased to represent, are so different from anything which we are accustomed to see in England, that it is not easy to get rid of the distorting medium which our English experience constantly interposes between ourselves and the true facts.

“Erroneous impressions about it, therefore, are not uncommon, and it may not be out of place if I recall what the actual position of the land-owning class is in those Provinces to which the Bills now before the Council are intended to apply. I propose to do this as generally and briefly as it is possible for me to do. I must ask for the forbearance and patience of the Council if, in what I propose doing, I unavoidably go over ground which to many hon’ble Members is only too familiar. But it would be difficult to make the arguments which justify additional taxation of the land easily intelligible to everybody, without first giving some sort of statement of the facts upon which they rest.

“The Land-Revenue in Upper India, as everybody knows, is only a portion of what would be called in Europe the landlord’s rents. The State, or the Sovereign, is the paramount landlord in India, and the share of the rent taken by him in old times, however it may have been restricted in theory, was in practice limited by nothing but the power of the subjects to offer, in some shape or other, an effectual resistance to his demands. It is not an incorrect description, I believe, to say that this was the state of affairs to which the British Government succeeded in all of the Provinces to which the Bills before the Council relate when they passed into its hands. I mean, that the division of rents between the Ruling Power and the land-owning class was subject to no limitation except that of

That those should take who have the power,
And those should keep who can.’

“The precise amount of the share which was left by the proprietor in the early days of our rule cannot now be ascertained. It was supposed to be a certain portion of the total produce; but as nobody could say, either now or then, what the total produce was, this leaves room for indefinite speculation. It is pretty certain though, that in the earliest acquired Provinces, the North-Western Provinces, it was something less than one-fifth of the rents paid by the cultivators. For in 1822, when the first regular settlement was contemplated, and steps were taken towards adjusting the respective shares of the landlord and the State for a longer term of years than heretofore, it was declared that at least twenty per cent. of the entire rental of each estate should be left to its owners. In less than twenty years after 1822, fresh settlements, which lasted for a term of thirty years, were made, and by these the landlord’s share of the rental was increased from one-fifth to one-third of the rental receipts. But the liberality shewn and concessions made by the State did not stop here. When the settlement for thirty years, which has just been referred to, expired, fresh arrangements were entered into, by which no less than half of the rental was given up to the land-owning class, and an equal division was made between them and the State of the profits derived from its ownership. This is still the proportion in which the rents are divided between the two; one-half goes to the proprietor of the estate, and one-half into the public purse. This is an immense advance for what has become the landlord-class, from the poor and insignificant position which they occupied when they first came under the control of the British Government. Looking to the proportionate amount only of the rental which they now enjoy, and comparing it with their former share, we see that they are more than twice as rich as they were. But even this conveys no adequate idea of the great improvement which has taken place in their circumstances. It is not only that they have obtained a larger share of the produce, but that the value of that produce has enormously increased. Contrasting the present prices of agricultural produce with those of (say) sixty or seventy years ago, I doubt if I exaggerate when I say that its money-value has doubled, and it would perhaps be safe to say that the land-owning class as a body, instead of twice, are four or five times, as rich as they were at the beginning of the century. An illustration of the progress made in the Panjáb has been given by the Hon’ble Member who spoke last, and the fact which he has mentioned, that land which used thirty years ago to sell for three or four times its annual value will now fetch twenty times the amount of its revenue and more, is true of many other parts of the Provinces for which the Bills have been framed. Everywhere there has been an extraordinary rise in the value of land. The cost of living, on the other hand, has no doubt increased. So far as this is caused by a rise in prices of the commodities that the agricultural classes have to buy, it is of course a drawback to their prosperity; but in so far as it is due to greater comfort and a higher standard of living (and I believe this to be a more potent cause than the other) no abatement is necessary. Making all necessary drawbacks, the fact of their great advance in wealth and prosperity is too plainly evident to be called in question. It must be borne in mind, too, that whatever the industry and intelligence of the proprietary class may have been, this improvement in their position is, in very great measure, due to the direct action of our Government. It is scarcely too much to say that it has created proprietary rights in the soil. It has secured them by maintaining good order and tranquillity. And it has added indefinitely to their value by furnishing marvellously improved and accelerated means of communication, and by opening markets for the produce of the land, of which the people of two generations back never even dreamed.

"This is the history of the way in which the landed interests of the North-Western Provinces have been dealt with. It can scarcely be said that the conduct of the Government towards them has shown any inclination to oppression and rapacity. The history of the other three Provinces in which it is now proposed to add slightly to the taxation of the landlord-classes, differs in no important respect from that of the North-Western Provinces. They passed into our possession later, when our policy had become more liberal; therefore they never received so small a share as the proprietors of the North-Western Provinces were restricted to in the early days of our rule. In none of them, speaking generally, has the Native proprietor's share been less than one-third of the entire rental since they became British territory. And now, I believe that it nowhere is a smaller proportion than one-half, indeed in many parts the proprietors are actually in the enjoyment of more than a half.

"So far I have spoken of what is generally meant by the word Land-Revenue when it is used in this country, that is, the Government-share of the rental in each estate.

"I come now to those Rates which are levied from land, in addition to the Land-Revenue. These Rates are taxation in a direct shape.

"They are not claimed as part of the great customary rent-charge which the State receives from the land and which constitutes its Land-Revenue. They are levied from time to time, as direct taxation, apart from that rent-charge, and are paid by the landlord out of that share of the rental which furnishes his own income. I will not stop now to consider the justice of this form of taxation, though it appears to me as right and just as taxation in any shape can be. I wish at present only to consider the nature and amount of these rates.

"They vary in the different Provinces to which the Bills before the Council are applicable. They are highest in the North-Western Provinces, where they amount to five per cent. on the rental. They are lowest in the Central Provinces, where they do not exceed two and a quarter per cent. In Oudh they are two and a half; and in the Panjáb $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. upon rental. A portion of these rates is old, and a portion of recent imposition.

"The five per cent. which is taken in the North-Western Provinces is no new taxation. It has been levied for a great many years past. I mention this because I have seen exception taken to the levy of the additional rate of one per cent. for famine-purposes, which is now proposed, on the ground that only so lately as 1871, the people of the North-Western Provinces were subjected to new and extraordinary taxation which swallowed up five per cent. of the entire rents of their estates. It is as well that a misapprehension of this sort should be corrected. The truth is that the Local Rates Act, 1871 (except as far as it related to that small portion of the North-Western Provinces which is permanently settled), did not impose any new taxation at all. It merely legalized rates which had been actually collected for a long time prior to 1871. It should be clearly understood that the one per cent. now under consideration will, if passed, be the only new tax (excepting the Income Tax) which has been imposed upon the land-owning community of the North-Western Provinces as a body for the last twenty years or more.

"In Oudh, of the $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. which the native proprietors pay, $1\frac{1}{2}$ was newly imposed in 1871, and $1\frac{1}{2}$ was of older standing.

"In the Central Provinces the $2\frac{1}{2}$ of the rental which is paid, dates entirely, I believe, from the last settlements, that is, from ten or twelve years ago.

"In the Panjáb the existing rates were first imposed in 1871. These rates are high, but we have heard from the Hon'ble Member who spoke last how very far they are from being a heavy burden upon the resources of the people, and how little dissatisfaction they created, though they were much heavier than the rate which is now proposed.

"The present relation between the State and the land, then, in the Provinces of which I am now speaking, may be summed up broadly thus:—That the State in its capacity of landlord enjoys one-half of the rents paid by the land, and that it also directly taxes the native proprietors of the soil by rates applied to local purposes which range between two and a half and five per cent. of the entire rents that pass through their hands.

"The measures now before the Council, if passed, will raise the amount of this latter payment by one per cent. all round; and some doubts have been expressed, as I said at the commencement, of the propriety of such taxation.

"These objections, so far as I have seen or heard or understood them, have been directed partly against the justice of the proposal, and partly against its expediency.

"As regards the injustice of such taxation, it is said, in the first place, that the agricultural classes are already contributing more than their fair share to the general revenues of the country.

"Well, it is true that the land-revenue does supply rather more than two-fifths of the total public income of India. Judged by our European standard, this may naturally seem an excessive amount. But if we wish to judge rightly, the first thing that we have to do is to put European standards out of our head, and to consider facts, not as they exist in other countries, but as we find them in this. If the landlords of England were compelled to-morrow to resign one-half of their rental to supply the public necessities, no doubt it would be felt as nothing short of confiscation. In India, as we have seen, taking one-half of the profits of land, is making a large and liberal concession to its owners. We must not lose sight of the fact that it is not the income which a man has never had, and which he has never dreamed of having, that he feels it an oppression to be deprived of. It is the money deducted from his ordinary and accustomed means of living that he misses, and the taking of which comes home to him as taxation. Looking at the question from this, which seems to me the true point of view, and remembering that what they pay as Land-Revenue has never formed part of their income, I do not think that it can fairly be said that the proprietors of the land are unduly burdened. Their accustomed means of living, so far from being less, are much greater, than they were in former times. If we take the case of the North-Western Provinces, where the rates are considerably higher than anywhere else, and add the amount of them to what is paid to the State in its capacity of landlord, we find that out of every Rs. 100 of rental, not more than Rs. 55 go into the treasury, namely, Rs. 50 as Land-Revenue and Rs. 5 as taxation. If we add the Re. 1, which it is now proposed to take, it will be Rs. 56. Half a century ago, Rs. 80 would have been required; and up to twenty years back Rs. 66 would have been demanded by the State. The land-owners therefore are receiving much more, and contributing much less, than they have ever done in times past. I have taken the case of the North-Western Provinces as that in which the claims of the State are largest. The argument, of course, is still stronger in the other Provinces, where the payment made by the proprietors is smaller. In the face of these facts it seems to me impossible to make good any case for further indulgence towards agriculturists as a class. Assuming that they are in a position to contribute without hardship towards the funds which are required for the general protection of all classes from famine, I would ask, how they can be exempted from doing so without inflicting very great injustice on all other classes? The population of the Provinces to which the Bills now under consideration are intended to apply, is mainly agricultural. The proportion which the agriculturists bear to the entire population in them ranges between 56 and 64 per cent.—roughly speaking, it is about 60 per cent. We can judge from these numbers what the effect would be of exempting the agricultural class entirely. It would compel two-fifths of the people to pay for the support of the entire community in all future times of scarcity and famine. It seems to me sufficient to state a consequence of this sort, in order to show how impossible it would be for the Government, with any regard to justice, to exempt the agriculturists from taxation.

“I go on now to consider those objections which, without impugning the justice of taxing the profits of agriculturists, throw doubts upon the expediency of doing so. A principal objection of this sort is that the prosperity of the country mainly depends upon its agriculturists, that the great majority of these are very poor, and that to impoverish them further by taxation is,—if not to kill, yet to injure very seriously—the goose upon which we depend for our golden egg. Now the fallacy of this argument, as it seems to me, is that it confuses the cultivators of the soil with its proprietors. The cultivators do, no doubt, form the mass of the agricultural community, and I fear that many of them are very poor. But I agree with the Hon’ble Member in charge of the Financial Department in demurring to the next step in the argument, which is, that imposing one per cent. upon the landlords will make the cultivators poorer. I do not believe (generally speaking) that such a tax will affect them at all. The class which is taxed is that of landed proprietors—of men who live, not by cultivating the soil, but by enjoying the rent which is paid for its occupation by the actual cultivator. A powerful landlord, I am quite prepared to admit, can do a good deal that is irregular in this country, as in others, without being checked. But I think that this is very far from being true of all proprietors of land in the Upper Provinces of India, where large properties are the exception and not the rule; and I do not believe that illegal methods of transferring the incidence of this tax are likely to be generally successful there. Nor am I convinced that the legal powers which landlords have of enhancing their rents will help them to shift this tax on to their tenants. This will be evident if we consider the practical working of any attempt to do so. Suppose that a proprietor owns an estate with a clear annual rent of Rs. 100. He is enjoying Rs. 45 of these under the existing settlement, and paying Rs. 55 to the Government—Rs. 50 for Land-Revenue and Rs. 5 for rates. When the extra Re. 1 of taxation is imposed, he will be receiving only Rs. 44 and paying Rs. 56. Suppose, again, that this proprietor is entitled, under present rules, to enhance his rents, so that they will yield him Rs. 105 instead of Rs. 100, and that he does so. Still, by raising his rental, he has not recovered his extra Re. 1 of taxation. This right of raising his rents does not depend upon the taxation which has been laid upon him, but upon grounds altogether irrespective of that. He could have improved his rental therefore up to Rs. 105 in any case, and will still be poorer by the additional Re. 1 that he has to pay into the Treasury.

“I do not mean to say that calculations of this sort can pretend to anything like mathematical accuracy or to be of universal application; but, making every allowance for the working of unforeseen causes, I think that the most reasonable expectation regarding the incidence of the proposed tax is, that it will not fall upon the poor and laborious tenant-class.

“A further argument which has been used against the proposed tax is, that it is a breach of faith, and, as such, likely to lead to serious political dangers.

“So far as the tax can be said to have met with any opposition at all, I believe that the misgivings which have been felt have originated in feelings, more or less well defined, of this nature. And if such a feeling were deep-seated and universal, even though it might not be well founded, it would furnish a very strong ground of objection. It is worth while, therefore, to see what amount of real force is contained in it.

“In doing this, I do not purpose to waste the time of the Council by any arguments directed to show that no breach of faith is actually committed by the imposition of a rate upon land, distinct from, and in addition to, the fixed demand upon it on account of Land-Revenue. That controversy was fought out and settled some years ago, and the results of it have been sufficiently referred to by the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Financial Department in his speech to-day. Those who have still any doubts upon the conclusion which was then finally adopted—that the limitation of the Land-Revenue does not confer an absolute immunity from direct taxation in every shape upon the classes who pay it—can look back to the records of the discussions then held and they will, I think, find their doubts satisfied.

“ I only wish now to say a few words upon the political importance which may rightly be given to any impression, right or wrong, on the minds of the people of this country, if there be such an impression, that they are being oppressed or unfairly dealt with.

“ In the first place, I question whether the levy of an additional one per cent. will give rise to any strong feeling at all.

“ In judging of its probable effect upon the people, I think we may dismiss from our minds all distinctions of Land-Revenue and land rating, of the State's share as landlord, and its requirements as tax-collector. It is not that I believe that these distinctions do not really exist. On the contrary, I have no doubt that they do, and that they are highly important. But I should not say from my experience that the people take much account of them. It has so happened that, from motives of convenience and economy, the manner in which the land-tax has been levied, and the machinery for levying it, have been the same as those by which the Land-Revenue has been collected. It is not by any means necessary that this should always be the case, and I hope that the advantages to be gained by changing the present mode of taxing the land, for one that distinguishes it more clearly from the Land-Revenue, will, in time, outweigh what I admit to be at present the much greater counterbalancing advantages of the existing system. When that time comes, a distinction between Land-Revenue and Rates may perhaps arise in the minds of the landed proprietors who pay them. But at present I doubt if they draw any practical distinction between the two. They pay so much into the Treasury. The Government may credit the money as it pleases; but to their minds it is one payment, and the whole of it made out of their own pockets, because the actual cash has passed through their hands and they hold a receipt for it. It does not occur to them that the greater part of it, namely, that which represents their Land-Revenue, has been paid over to the Ruling Power in the same way by their forefathers from time immemorial, and that it will continue to be so paid through any length of future time that we can look forward to, by themselves and their descendants, and that therefore this money has never belonged to them in any proper sense of the word. But though this payment, regarded from their point of view, may be a large one, it does not seem so to them. They have always been accustomed to make it, and do not grumble at it. Nor do they trouble themselves with any nice considerations of the precise percentages in which the profits of the land should be divided between themselves and the State. All that they are concerned about is, that their means of subsistence should never be seriously curtailed. I hope that it has been sufficiently shown to the Council to-day, that there is no danger of any such considerable curtailment from the addition of another Re. 1 per cent. to their payments, and, as long as this is the case, though they may not like the extra payment—as who does like making payments—there will be no dissatisfaction, I believe, such as a Government need take any account of.

“ So far as to the likelihood of any strong feeling being aroused by the measures before the Council. Next as to the ‘breach-of-faith’ objection, I cannot help thinking, when this argument is used by the tax-payers, that it is employed more for the effect that they hope it may produce upon those whom they are addressing, than because the argument carries any very great force to the speaker's own mind. The levy of cesses or rates in addition to Land-Revenue has been familiar to the people for generations, and in some of the provinces affected they have been paying much heavier rates than are now demanded for many years past without a murmur. If they had really felt this to be a breach of faith, I think we should have heard more of this objection before now.

"Again, any objection which is taken on this ground to the proposed tax, is just as applicable to an Income-tax, which has been levied from the agricultural classes at different times during the past sixteen years. The cases are precisely similar. I know of no argument which applies to the one, that does not equally apply to the other. Yet, though I cannot say that the Income-tax was anything but an extremely unpopular tax in the part of the country where my experience has been, yet I do not remember that there was any strong or general feeling against it on this ground in Upper India. The agriculturists did not expect to escape from having to help in bearing the common burden, and submitted without serious discontent to their share of it during the continuance of the Income-tax. I do not know why we should suppose that they will be more suspicious and less reasonable now.

"I have referred now, as far as I am able, to the principal arguments which I have seen urged against further taxation on the land; but in conclusion, I would remark that they do not appear to have found anything like general expression. It is true that expressions of opinion in matters of this sort are apt rather to follow, than to precede, measures in this country. It is one of the recognized difficulties of the Indian Government that there are such imperfect means of ascertaining the sentiments, and feeling the pulse, of its subjects. In the provinces which will be affected, there is no Press which faithfully reproduces public opinion. That opinion must be sought for and found as best may be. The surest means that exist at present of learning the course of public sentiment is through the local officers of Government who are distributed over the country, who are in constant communication with people of all classes, and who will not hesitate to express frankly and fearlessly what they believe to be the general feeling of the country. Now, it is from these local officers that the Local Governments and Administrations derive their information, and by them that they are in great measure guided in their action. It is a significant fact, then, that of the Local Governments and Administrations concerned, with whom the responsibility will rest of collecting the tax, there is not one that has expressed any doubt or hesitation about the taxation of the land. They have on the contrary signified their cordial approval of it. This, I think, is the best assurance that it is possible for us to have, that the measure is not radically distasteful to the people affected, and the best assurance that there will be no great difficulties in enforcing it.

"But even if these difficulties were likely to be far greater than I anticipate, I do not the less think that it is not only proper, but absolutely necessary, to carry the proposed measures into execution. The taxation of the land must not be judged of by itself; it must be regarded in connection with the whole scheme of which it forms a part. That scheme is intended to provide for the famine-expenditure of the whole country,—an expenditure which is no old and recognized want of the administration, but one, the necessity for which has only come to light within the last few years. It is a charge which the old ways and means of the Empire are quite inadequate to meet; and the money which is to be raised will be applied for the benefit of all. In providing the money for a new and general necessity of this kind, it would be so grossly unjust to exempt upwards of one-half of the population from stirring so much as their little finger towards lifting the common burden, that the difficulties and perils of any such course would, I am convinced, be far greater than any which can result from the measures which the Council are to-day asked to pass."

HIS HONOUR THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR said:—"My Lord,—Though the measures now under the consideration of the Council do not immediately affect the Provinces under my charge, they are the outcome of a policy which applies to the whole country, and I hope that I may be permitted to say that I think that the explanation which has been given by the Hon'ble Member will be considered to be perfectly satisfactory. There is one fact on which my hon'ble friend has laid considerable stress, which cannot be questioned, and that is, that the policy in respect to famine-relief and famine-prevention, which has been accepted by the Government of India, I believe with the full concurrence of all parties both in this country and in Europe, cannot be carried out without an increase of means, and these means can only be obtained by an increase of taxation. This being admitted, I must say that it seems to me, and I find that it is the opinion of most well-informed and thinking men, that no measures could have been devised more likely to be efficient, equitable and unoppressive, than the measures which have been determined upon by your Excellency's Government.

"There is no question that the proper principle to follow in respect to the raising of revenue for such purposes as that which has led to the present schemes of taxation is, that all having a permanent interest in the welfare of the country should bear their share of its burdens. The measures now before the Council adjust the incidence of taxation upon all interests, whether trading or landed interests. And though it has been alleged that the taxation has been thrown altogether on the poor, the license-tax does not touch any of the quite poorest classes, because those who have incomes of less than Rs. 100 a year are exempt, and though it may be difficult for men who know nothing of the country to realise, practically a Native with an income of Rs. 100 a year is in a better position than a European trader or mechanic in Europe with an income of £100 a year; I am sure that every one really acquainted with Native habits and modes of life and requirements will agree with me that this is so.

"I see that some objections have been raised to the levy of cesses on the landed interests of the North-Western Provinces on the ground that the cesses now levied do not extend to Bengal. Those who argue in this way seem entirely to forget that Bengal set the example of contributing such a cess to the Imperial Revenues, and last year relieved the Government of India of nearly £300,000, by imposing on the land, charges hitherto borne by the Imperial Government. It would have been most unreasonable and unfair that this taxation should have been maintained in Bengal while the landed interests of the rest of India were left free. Last year the only taxation imposed on the North-Western Provinces was a low license-tax, while Bengal raised enough to meet the demands of the Imperial Government by a cess on land: this year the Government of Northern India have supplemented their trades license-tax by a cess upon land, while Bengal has supplemented its cess upon land by a license-tax.

"It is nothing to the point to urge that the results leave the Bengal zamindár in a better position than the North-Western Provinces zamindár; that really has nothing to do with the question. The object of the present measures is, not to equalise the incidence of the assessments and charges upon land throughout India, but to levy an additional rate for a special purpose from one end of India to the other. Out of the money (£1,500,000) now required by the Government of India for the construction of works to prevent famine, Bengal will contribute £600,000, or nearly one-half; and the outcry that she has been unduly favoured is most unjust and unfounded. It must be remembered that, till the last settlement, the zamindárs of the North-Western Provinces had to pay to Government two-thirds of their collections, while they retained one-third. For no very apparent reason, when the new settlement was made, they were only called upon to pay half, keeping one-half. Admitting as I do that it is sound policy of the Government of India to limit its demands on the country to its actual requirements, and to distribute the burden of taxation as evenly as is practicable on all classes of the people, I should be sorry to condemn the principles of the present settlement; but the fact remains that, if the present settlement had followed the lines of the old settlement in respect to the shares of Government and the landholders, Government would, setting new cesses aside, have received two millions more per annum than it receives now. And making all allowances for new cesses, including those now imposed, the land-owners of the North-Western Provinces are receiving $1\frac{1}{2}$ millions more than they received before. And now that its imperative requirements have increased, I do not consider that there is anything unjust or unreasonable in Government imposing upon the classes who received these great benefits the same burden which is imposed upon all other classes; and, after all, the entire fresh charge thrown upon the land-owners in the North-Western Provinces is only £80,000 or £90,000.

"Of course it requires no very great ingenuity to find some sort of objection, theoretical or practical, to every kind of tax; and I am sorry to have to say, that those who are loudest and most unreasonable and impatient in their demands that Government should take upon itself the liability of relieving and preventing famine, and of constructing extravagant works of irrigation, are the first to put into the mouths of the people reasons why no one should contribute anything towards such a purpose. But the money has to be raised, and this being so, I must congratulate Your Excellency's Government as to the substantially fair and even manner in which this liability has been distributed."

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY said:—"My Lord,—In the discussion that has now taken place on the Bills before the Council, several questions of importance have been referred to, but I have said already all that I feel called upon to say upon most of them, and some of these questions have been completely disposed of by preceding speakers. There are, however, still a few points which have been raised, on which it seems right that I should offer some further explanation.

"First, as to the suggestion that these taxes should be imposed only for a limited period of time, in the hope that greater economy in military expenditure or otherwise may render their retention unnecessary. This suggestion has not been repeated to-day, but it was made at one of our former meetings, and I then promised to notice it.

"In reply to this, I would remind the Council that, before the Government resolved to introduce these measures, it carefully enquired whether any present reduction of expenditure could be made, and for the reasons I before stated, it was satisfied that, so far at least as the Civil expenditure was concerned, no substantial relief could thus be obtained. In regard to the Home Military Charges, I sufficiently indicated the anxiety of the Government to obtain their reduction, or if that were not practicable, at least to prevent their increase. But here the remedy is neither in our hands nor in those of the Secretary of State for India. If any remedy is to be found, it can only be applied by the British Parliament. The circumstances, however, are obviously not such as to give any justification for our relying on such a reduction of charge as could affect our present calculations.

"Next, I must remind the Council that we have still not provided for a considerable part of the ordinary surplus of half a million, which we are bound to secure irrespective of the special surplus of $1\frac{1}{2}$ million to constitute the insurance against famine, and that we have reckoned on future possible increase of income or reduction of charge to make good the sum that we still had to provide.

"Again, it is to these possible improvements of income, or to increased economy, that we have to look for meeting those future unforeseen charges for which experience shows that we must be prepared, and we may consider ourselves fortunate if such charges can thus be met without fresh calls for taxation.

"Lastly, the causes which have led to our present demands are unfortunately permanent, and not temporary, and the resources we create to meet those demands must be permanent also, or at all events they must continue until evidence is forthcoming that such a change of circumstances has arisen as will justify our abandoning them.

"It was suggested at a previous meeting of the Council, and the proposal has been urged in a memorial received from the British Indian Association, that a separate fund should be created from the produce of the new taxes, for the objects now in view by the Government. I think it desirable to make a few observations on this subject. It may first be said that the money obtained by the new taxes will in fact be applied, either to discharge of debt, the special origin of which cannot be ascertained, or to the construction of useful remunerative works of precisely the same description as those on which a far larger sum has hitherto been spent year by year, partly obtained from the general revenues and partly from borrowed funds. It is not the intention of the Government to reduce this outlay; on the contrary, it hopes to be able to increase it. To create any separate fund, therefore, would be to make a perfectly arbitrary and artificial distinction between a small part of the outlay, say $1\frac{1}{2}$ millions, and the larger part, say 3 millions, on works in themselves not really distinguishable in their character or objects. Such a division would be, not only useless, but mischievous, and could not practically be maintained. It would necessarily lead to artifices in adjusting the grants and accounts, which would create suspicion and cause much trouble to all concerned.

"In fact, what the Government desires is to establish a sense of the obligation under which it is placed in respect to the expenditure due to Famine, which shall be felt in the same way as the obligation to provide proper Courts of Justice, Police, Education, and so forth. For none of these objects has it ever entered into the mind of any one to suggest a special allocation of the revenue or a separate fund. Nor can any greater reason be found for a separate Famine-fund than for separate funds for any of those other objects which are obligatory on the Government.

"The intention of the Government is to obtain the means of meeting the charges that arise in all parts of India on account of the relief of famine, whenever such calamities occur. This could not be done if the additional income obtained were specially allocated for expenditure in the Provinces where it was raised, and there never was any such intention. At the same time it is held to be desirable to employ the Provincial Governments in obtaining the funds, and in supervising their application so far as it takes the form of an investment in useful works of a remunerative character. It is with this exclusive object that it has been proposed to make the new taxes Provincial, so that the best possible agency shall be secured for their collection and for administering their outlay in detail.

"I will not attempt to state in detail the reasons why the persons responsible for the administration of the finances reject separate funds of all kinds, unless under very special circumstances, as productive of confusion and complication without any counterbalancing advantage. It will be enough, probably, after what I have already said on this point, to reconcile the Council and the public to the decision of the Government, not, in the present case, to create any separate fund, if I point out that any other determination might lead to results probably not contemplated by those who have suggested the establishment of a separate fund; I mean that this might involve the necessity for imposing more taxation. Suppose, for instance, that the produce of the new taxes were by law strictly set apart from the general revenues and paid into a separate fund only to be applied to specified purposes. If, then, any sudden change of circumstances arose, calling for seriously increased expenditure, or causing a considerable falling-off in the revenue, we should have to choose between the imposition of fresh taxes and the abrogation of the law constituting the fund; for I set aside the idea of meeting ordinary charges by borrowing as a course financially inadmissible. This dilemma might arise, though the pressure was likely to be only temporary; nor can any one say that such a contingency would be at all improbable, or that it might not occur at any moment.

"With all my desire to see the pledges maintained that we have given, as to the application of a sum not less than $1\frac{1}{2}$ million as an insurance against famine, I think it would be irrational, under many circumstances that I can conceive, to object to the temporary diversion of any necessary part of the revenue from this purpose, with a view to obtaining relief which might be no less urgently required than that which experience has taught us to be requisite in meeting famine. When I introduced these Bills, I used the following words: 'Without thinking of a future far removed from us, events might of course happen which would render it impossible even for us who have designed these measures to maintain our present resolution.' I now merely repeat this, though I equally repeat what I before said, that 'I hope no desire to carry out any administrative improvement, however urgent, or any fiscal reform, however wise, will tempt the Government to neglect this sacred trust.'

"While, however, I cannot give any hope of the constitution of any separate fund or account of the produce and application of these new taxes, I would remark that it has already been publicly announced by Her Majesty's Government in the House of Commons, that it is intended to take steps for placing before the public, in a clearer form than that hitherto followed, accounts of the Capital and Revenue income and outlay of the larger productive Public Works, whether carried on wholly or in part from borrowed funds. The Government is now considering the means by which this intention may best be acted on, and I trust that the reasonable desire of the public to receive in a full and thoroughly comprehensible shape accounts of the financial results of these undertakings will thus be complied with.

"The British Indian Association, in the paper to which I have already referred, have proposed as a proper and sufficient way of meeting the charge arising from famine, that the sum required to pay the interest on debt created in time of famine should be met by special taxation. It is precisely this view that the Government of India rejects as quite incompatible with proper financial principles. It is the capital charge that must be paid off, not the interest. To adopt the course proposed by the Association would lead to the constant increase of debt and taxation without limit—a course which cannot be admitted.

"The Association also appears to regard it as sufficient if provision is made from time to time for the discharge of the obligations arising from debt incurred in the past. It has not a word to say as to the future. Here, again, the policy of the Government is essentially different. The Government declares that it has exclusively in view the future, and that its primary object is to provide a revenue that shall enable it to meet future famines without permanent increase of debt or of annual charge on the revenues; and it proposes to combine with this a system which, by judicious application of its increased means, shall secure the provision of those material improvements to the country which experience shows to be the best, nay, the only real, means of alleviating the pressure caused by famine when extreme drought occurs, while they are constantly adding to the wealth and prosperity of the people.

"It now, my Lord, only remains for me to acknowledge, on behalf of the Government, the loyal spirit in which our measures have been received by all classes of the public, and to thank the Members of the Council who have taken part in our deliberations, here or in Committee, for the aid and support which they have given us."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY also moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

ADDITIONAL RATES (NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES) BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY also moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the levy of Additional Rates on Land in the North-Western Provinces be taken into consideration.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY also moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

ADDITIONAL RATES (OUDH) BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY also moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the levy of Additional Rates on Land in Oudh be taken into consideration. He said—"MY LORD,—There is only one point in regard to this Bill which I wish to mention. In all the Bills for imposing additional rates on the land, it has been assumed by the Government that no questions are now under discussion regarding the propriety of altering the law under which the existing rates on land are levied.

"On this ground we have not been able to meet the wishes which in regard to some matters have been expressed by the Local Governments, that this opportunity should be taken of amending the existing law.

"If such amendments are desirable, they must be separately considered hereafter. The sole object of our present measures is the imposition of new taxation for certain purposes. So far, therefore, as the existing rates on land in Northern India are concerned, our present Bills do nothing more than re-enact the existing law. To this general statement there is one exception only, and it is to be found in the present Bill relating to Oudh.

"In March last Act VII of 1877 was passed, authorising the Government of the North-Western Provinces to appropriate a sum, not exceeding one-tenth part of the local rates, for the purpose of meeting charges on account of railways and canals of general provincial utility.

"This Act has received the approval of the Secretary of State. The Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Commissioner of Oudh has, as the Council is aware, asked that a similar power to that which I have just described should be given to the Administration of Oudh, which has now been united to that of the North-Western Provinces. The Government considers that the circumstances of Oudh are so similar to those of the neighbouring Province, that there can be no objection to applying the same principle in both cases.

"This view has been adopted by the Select Committee, and, in accordance with the wishes of the Local Government, the necessary alteration has been made in the Bill as it was originally introduced."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY also moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

ADDITIONAL RATES (PANJÁB) BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY also moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the levy of Additional Rates on land in the Panjáb be taken into consideration.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY then moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said:—"I have listened with great attention, and, I may add, with great satisfaction, to the comments made to-day upon the Bills which this Council has now passed into law. I do not wish to detain unnecessarily the attention of the Council; but, before I put the last question moved by my hon'ble colleague, I desire to make a few observations on the origin and objects of the policy embodied in those Bills.

"Now, when this Government undertook the onerous task of effecting, in the revenues of the State, an increase sufficient to enable them to provide an insurance-fund for future famines, I certainly could not have ventured to hope that the measures which, under the experienced guidance of my hon'ble friend and colleague, Sir J. Strachey, we prepared for that purpose, would have been discussed so generously, and received so favourably, as they have been, by this Council, and by all classes of the community represented in this Council. Those measures I can honestly affirm to be, at least, the result of long and anxious deliberation, guided by a scrupulous study of the social interests affected by them, and animated by a most earnest desire not consciously to add one unnecessary fraction to the existing burdens of the community. But taxation is an instrument which painfully resembles that of the dentist. Resort to it is, unfortunately, often necessary; but it is never pleasant to the patient, even though it may promise him relief from acute distress; and the operator is fortunate if his fingers be not bitten by the teeth he is called upon to extract. In the present case, although we have endeavoured to inflict as little pain as possible in the performance of an unavoidable operation, we were not unprepared for a little natural shrieking. But the success of the operation has been largely due to the admirable behaviour of the patient: and, on behalf of our present measures, I feel bound to express the thanks of the Government, first of all, to those local Administrations on whose valued co-operation our whole financial policy is so largely dependent; secondly, to the Press of India for the discriminating judgment and high public spirit with which it has recognized the difficulties of our position, the sincerity of our good intentions, and the necessity of our present action: thirdly, to those enlightened exponents of Native opinion who have generously acknowledged the justice of the principles on which we have based our measures; and, finally, to the Members of this Hon'ble Council for the practical aid they have given to the improvement of those measures in Committee, and the moral support with which they have honoured them in their passage through debate.

"Our measures, however, have not been wholly exempt from criticism: but their most adverse critics have been the persons who are least acquainted with the details of them, and none of those critics have favoured us with any practicable proposals in substitution of our own. They have told us, nevertheless, that, if these measures are well received, it is not because they deserve to be well received, but because those who have not received them are not affected by them, and those who are affected by them cannot make themselves heard. In short, to put the case as it is put by one of our censors, we have heaped upon that willing horse, the poorer classes, all the burdens which ought to have been placed upon gayer steeds.

"Now, undoubtedly the taxes which will come into operation by the passage of the Bills before us must, to be successful, have a wide incidence. But the same condition applies to taxation in all countries, as well as to taxation in India; and in India, where the mass of the population is poor, it is impossible to obtain a large increase of revenue, such as we now require, from any tax which falls mainly on the rich. Vast private fortunes certainly exist in India; but the owners of large fortunes constitute but a very small proportion of the population; and I know of no circumstances which would justify, or any process short of confiscation which could enable, the Government of this country to concentrate upon the backs of its few rich subjects the main burden of that taxation which is necessary for the protection and improvement of its many poor ones. The European community in India, non-official as well as official, is a very hard-working, but certainly not a wealthy, one; and it was one of the most remarkable facts of the old income-tax, that only a comparatively small portion of the whole revenue obtained by that tax was covered by the upper layer of the schedule.

"My hon'ble colleague, Sir John Strachey, has already shown that it would be a gross misrepresentation of the present license-tax to say that it falls only on the very poor; and that, as a matter of fact, this tax touches no section of the community which can be fairly regarded, or rated, as other than a well-to-do class, if due regard be had to the known standard of life in India. But, then, we have been told by some other critics that we ought not to have exempted from the operation of this tax official and professional incomes. Now, I will not dwell upon the fact that the continued depreciation in the exchangeable value of silver has already very grievously reduced the incomes of those Government servants who, during the past two years, have been so nobly labouring (many of them at a great sacrifice of health, some of them at the sacrifice of their lives, all of them with a prolonged sacrifice of personal comfort), in aiding the Government to preserve the lives of its subjects from famine. I will not pause to ask whether a further deduction from their pay would be the State's fitting reward to its brave soldiers in that great campaign against so formidable an invader. But, of course, had we decided to tax official incomes, we could not possibly have exempted from taxation professional incomes of all kinds; and, if taxation were extended to professional incomes, where could the extension of it be stayed? At what further point could we have legitimately limited our application of the principle under which income was taxed? There is no conceivable form or source of income, whether derived from land, commerce, investments in public securities, the profits of literature, science, industry or anything else, which could, in that case, be fairly exempted from taxation. And thus we should be brought,—inexorably brought,—to what is really the only practical alternative to our present measures—the revival of the hated income-tax.

"Now, no one can acknowledge more readily than I do that a scientifically adjusted tax upon all denominations of income is, primâ facie, wherever such a tax be practically possible, the wisest and fairest distribution of the public burden. The old Indian income-tax did not completely fulfil these somewhat ideal requirements. Its incidence was unequal, and its assessment a fruitful source of perennial grievance. But, for my own part, I confess that, had I found it in existence, I think my inclination would have been rather to reform and maintain it at a minimum rate than to abolish it altogether. Science, however, may sometimes prolong the existence of the living; but it is another matter to resuscitate the dead. The income-tax was abolished by the administration of my predecessor; and I have no doubt that those who abolished it, and who were in the best position to judge whether the popular opposition to it was well justified, had good grounds for their conclusion that its theoretical merits and ascertained financial convenience were insufficient to compensate the practical social mischief of the general heart-burning with which it was regarded by all classes of the community. Our predecessors, when they abolished the income-tax, not appreciating, as we were bound to appreciate them, the great additional burdens likely to be caused by famine, did not provide any other means of meeting financial emergencies, foreseen or unforeseen. Thus, with a depreciated silver standard, which greatly enhances the cost of all liabilities payable in gold, the present administration has been suddenly called upon, not only to pay the heavy bill for two years of unprecedented famine, but also to make pecuniary provision for the insurance of the country against future calamities of a similar character. Now, I need hardly point out how much more difficult it is to revive an unpopular impost than to retain it. But I can truly assert that the present Government of India would not for a moment have shrunk from confronting that difficulty, had it not recognized in the measures now before the Council a wiser and a sounder policy. The task we have undertaken, and which we hope to accomplish, is, not to distribute the public burdens according to doctrinaire ideas of abstract science or symmetrical perfection, but to provide sufficiently for the present requirements of the State in the manner least provocative of social inconvenience and popular discontent, by distributing the incidence of the burden which has to be imposed, along what is indicated, by the actual circumstances of the country, as the line of least resistance.

"We have felt that the two great classes of the community from whom we could most equitably collect our famine-insurance-fund are the trading and the agricultural classes. The grounds of this conclusion have been lucidly explained by my hon'ble friend, Sir John Strachey, and I need not now revert to them. The first step in the taxation requisite for the fulfilment of the obligation imposed upon us was taken last year in the shape of a cess on the agricultural classes of Lower Bengal. This year it is supplemented in that province by a license-tax on the trading classes. In the North-Western Provinces the basis was laid last year by a contribution levied from the trading classes; and that contribution will now be supplemented by a cess upon the agricultural classes.

"The necessity of a famine-insurance-fund, and the duty of the Government to provide such a fund, have been generally acknowledged. But equally general must be, I think, the acknowledgment that, in our selection of the sources of this fund (which are necessarily limited), we could not, with any show of reason or justice, have maintained the agricultural cess in Bengal had we shrunk from subjecting to a similar obligation the agricultural classes in the other provinces of Northern India. On that point, I think, the observations of my hon'ble friend the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal are quite unanswerable. Nor is it less undeniable that, from the same point of view, and for the same reason, we could not justly maintain the license-tax upon the trading classes of the other provinces, if we did not impose it also on the trading classes in Lower Bengal.

"I think, then, I may fairly claim for the measures now before the Council at least the modest merit of an equitable distribution of famine-charges between the two great classes of the community who are, collectively, best able to bear them, and on whom such charges most reasonably fall. I think that no apology is needed, either to the community at large, or to those classes in particular, for our decision not to resort to the revival of the income-tax. But one thing I cannot too plainly or positively assert. Had we failed to secure the assent of this Council to our proposed taxes upon trade and landed property, we should have had no choice but to revert to the obnoxious income-tax. There is absolutely no alternative that would adequately meet the requirements of the present occasion.

"In speaking of the agricultural cess, I have not alluded to Madras and Bombay, because, as the Council is aware, we have decided not to extend this tax to the two Southern Presidencies. Our reason for that decision has been twofold. In the first place, we considered that, after two years of severe famine, the agricultural classes of Southern India are scarcely in a condition to bear any present increase in their direct contributions to the State; but our second reason for not augmenting the direct taxation of these classes in Bombay and Madras was really our chief reason; and it was that, on altogether other grounds, quite independent of our requirements on account of famine, it had become necessary to increase the salt-duties of those Presidencies. It thus happens that, in consequence of the steps taken in the prosecution of a great fiscal reform, which has been the continuous aim of the Government of this Empire under at least four successive administrations, we have found ourselves justified in relieving the agricultural classes of the two Southern Presidencies from additional taxation which, at a time when other parts of the Empire were being subjected to increased burdens, we could not otherwise have foregone.

"Now, here I would ask leave to remind the Council that the taxation of salt is a part of the fiscal system which the British Government inherited from the Native Rulers of India. The history of our present salt-duties is a separate one for each province. Except in one respect, which I will mention immediately, these provincial duties have had no connection with each other; and hence that irregularity in the rates of them which the Government of India has always desired, and is now endeavouring, to rectify. The only historical connection between these local salt-duties is to be found in the common origin of additions made to them in connection with the abolition of a mass of most vexatious transit-duties with which the whole surface of this Empire was formerly covered. Under Native Rule, tolls were taken on all roads and navigable rivers; and, in spite of their irregularity, these early transit-duties were probably less harassing to trade than the forms which they subsequently assumed under the Regulations of the East India Company; for those Regulations added to the original tolls all the refinements and checks of an elaborate customs-system. About half a century ago, the Government, recognising the intolerable inconvenience of these multiplied checks upon internal trade, decided to abolish them and substitute for them higher rates of duty upon salt. This great reform is mainly due to the enlightened advice of Sir Charles Trevelyan, then a member of the Bengal Civil Service. Thus, by the Act of 1837, the salt-duty in Bombay was fixed at eight annas per maund, and, early in the following year, all the transit, or inland customs, duties were abandoned in that Presidency. The town-dues, trade-taxes and other imposts of a similar nature were relinquished in 1844; and the Bombay salt-duty was again raised to twelve annas per maund. The fiscal result of these reforms was investigated in 1855, and it then appeared that the extinction of the condemned imposts had involved a loss of revenue amounting to more than 31½ lakhs of rupees, whilst the enhanced duty on salt had yielded only a revenue of less than 21½ lakhs. Thus, on behalf of fiscal reforms in the Bombay Presidency alone, the Government had sacrificed more than 12¼ lakhs of rupees. In Madras, the loss of revenue incurred on behalf of the same purpose was still greater. The transit and inland-customs-duties, which the Act of 1841 abolished in that Presidency, had yielded a nett revenue of about 31 lakhs of rupees. In abolishing them, the Government raised the price of salt to rupee 1-8 per maund; but, under the orders of the Court of Directors, no more than 1 rupee per maund was levied for many years. This increase in the salt-duty yielded less than 9½ lakhs, while the revenue already surrendered had amounted to 31 lakhs. Again, in 1853, the tobacco-monopoly in Malabar and Canara was also relinquished; and finally, in 1860, the Government abolished the trade-tax, which yielded about 11 lakhs of rupees. Thus, the slightly increased salt-duty in Madras was accompanied by the surrender of about half a million sterling of revenue.

"I think these facts sufficiently prove that the history of the southern salt-duties is not one which the Government of India has any reason to recall with self-reproach. I may add, however, that a similar policy has been pursued in Bengal and the upper provinces of India. The Bengal transit-duties were abolished by the Act of 1836, and the Bengal salt-duty was fixed in the following year at rupees 3-4 per maund. The Act of 1843 abolished all import and export-duties on the frontiers of the North-Western Provinces, with the exception of the duties on salt, sugar and cotton; and the cotton-import-duty was abandoned in 1855; the salt-duty in the North-Western Provinces having been fixed in 1843 at rupees 2 per maund, with an additional assessment of rupee 1 on all salt passing eastward of Allahabad. The annexation of the Panjāb was followed by an increase of the salt-duty of that province; but that increase was part of a general measure which extinguished simultaneously all the export, import, transit and town-duties previously levied in the province. It will thus be seen that the present system of comparatively high salt-duties in British India is the result of an enlightened and beneficent fiscal policy, which has relieved British India from a multitude of mischievous and vexatious imposts on internal commerce: imposts described by a competent authority as being 'so full of inequalities, and anomalies, and complications, that it would be vain to enquire from what objections or what abuses they were free.'

"In 1868, Sir George Campbell, then Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, strongly advocated the introduction of these principles into the Native States of Rājputāna. 'Might not the Native States,' he said, 'be induced to accept our system as, on the whole, the most justifiable; that is, to substitute a high salt-duty for all internal duties whatever? To some extent the burden would thus fall more exclusively on the poorer of their subjects; but, then, the system of constantly recurring transit-duties is so wasteful, and involves a burden so much greater than the nett gain to the State, that even to the poor the substitution of a high, but not excessive, salt-tax, collected cheaply and without vexation at the source of supply, would probably be a gain.'

"It is obvious, however, that we cannot carry out such a policy without correcting the inequalities which still unfortunately exist in the local rates of our own salt-duty. Now, the history of these inequalities deserves attention. I have already pointed out that, excepting their common origin, the present salt-duties have no connection with each other; and I have mentioned the rates of the duty upon salt, under which the present fiscal system was first established in the different provinces. These rates have subsequently undergone various modifications; which, however, have, unfortunately, not tended towards their equalization. In Lower Bengal, the duty of rupees 3-4 per maund was gradually lowered to rupees 2-8, until, in 1859, it was again raised to rupees 3, and, in 1861, to rupees 3-4, which was the original rate. In the upper provinces, the rupees 2 duty was raised in 1859 to rupees 2-8; and, in 1861, when the Government abolished the differential duty on salt passing eastward of Allahabad, the rate for those provinces was raised to rupees 3 per maund. Meanwhile, in Madras the original rupee 1 duty, or rather the Government selling price, was gradually doubled. In 1861 it was raised to rupee 1-8; in 1866 to rupee 1-11; and in 1869 to rupees 2; whilst the import-duty was kept a few annas lower than the Government selling price. In Bombay, the 12 annas duty was raised, in 1859, to rupee 1; in 1865 to rupee 1-8; and in 1869 to rupee 1-13. The fact is, that the improvement which, under British Rule, has been effected in the communications between Madras and Bombay, had, at length, made it very desirable to place the salt-duty in each of these two Presidencies as nearly as possible on the same footing; and, under the financial administration of Mr. Massey, this policy was adopted, not for the purpose of additional taxation, but of fiscal reform. So long as this country was destitute of railroads, the inconvenience of a salt-duty, assessed at different rates in different provinces, was not seriously felt. The cost and difficulty of carriage prevented the lower taxed salts of one province from displacing the higher taxed salts of another; but when intercommunication had been greatly cheapened and accelerated by steam, then special measures became necessary for redressing or preventing the mischievous effects of these inequalities in the salt-duties. Thus, an inland customs-line was maintained solely to prevent salt taxed in Bombay at rupee 1-13 per maund from entering Bengal, where the salt-duty was levied at rupees 3 and rupees 3-4 per maund; and when that part of the customs-line was abolished in 1871, then other measures were devised for the same purpose, an increased freight or mileage-duty being levied on all salt carried by rail from Bombay into the Central Provinces. I need not here refer to the great customs-line so frequently and eloquently denounced by my hon'ble friend, Sir John Strachey, which still, unfortunately, exists for the sole purpose of intercepting, many miles from its sources of supply, the untaxed salt of Rājputāna, and prohibiting its entry into British territory. I share the opinion of my hon'ble friend that the continued maintenance of this line is a great commercial and political scandal; and I sincerely trust that the history of the present administration may be associated with the removal of that scandal. I may mention here that, since the year 1875, the Government of India, always aiming at the eventual abolition of this great salt-cordon, has been able to effect a saving of five lakhs of rupees by continuous reductions in the establishment of it. But we could not invite the co-operation of our neighbours on behalf of a great fiscal reform which will, we believe, be ultimately beneficial to the whole Empire, if we shrank from simultaneously inviting the co-operation of our own provinces towards the attainment of the same result, even though it should involve some slight intermediate sacrifice on the part of some of them; and the form which such co-operation must necessarily assume is the equalization of our own salt-duty. Now, that is a policy which has been, for many years, if not pursued, at least proclaimed, by the Government of India. In 1868, when the Madras and Bombay salt-duties were only rupee 1-8 per maund, while the salt-duty was assessed in Bengal at rupees 3-4 per maund, and in the Upper Provinces at rupees 3 per maund, Lord Lawrence's Government thus addressed the Secretary of State:—

“‘We consider,’ said His Excellency in Council, ‘that there can be no justification for maintaining this excessive difference any longer than financial necessity shall require. There is no real reason why the people of Bengal and Northern India should pay a higher salt-tax than the people of Madras and Bombay; or why the people of Madras and Bombay should not pay as much as the people of Northern India. The population of Madras,’ he continued, ‘is, at least, as well off as, and the population of Bombay is even better off than, the population of the Bengal Presidency. The prices of salt in Madras and Bombay are generally lower, cost of production cheaper, and the distance of transit less, than in most other parts of India; and the North-Western Provinces, where a high rate prevails, are subjected to particular disadvantage relative to most parts of India, by reason of distance from the source of supply and difficulty of transit; so that the difference of duty ought to be in favour of these provinces, instead of being, as it now is, much against them.’

“Again, the same despatch significantly observes that, ‘financially, it is not possible to bring the standard of the Bengal Presidency down to the standard of Madras and Bombay. We ought, however, to give Northern India that relief which it needs, and to which it is justly entitled; and we might reasonably call upon Southern India to bear a somewhat fairer share than it now does of the burden falling on the salt-consumption of the country generally.’

“Finally, Lord Lawrence's Government declared that the equalisation of the salt-duties, by raising the rates of Madras and Bombay, and lowering those of Northern India, was an object to be steadily kept in view. In reply to the despatch from which I have just quoted, the Duke of Argyll, who was then Secretary of State for India, made the following observations:—‘On all grounds of general principle, salt,’ he said, ‘is a perfectly legitimate subject of taxation. It is impossible in any country to reach the masses of the population by direct taxes. If they are to contribute at all to the expenditure of the State, it must be through taxes levied on some articles of universal consumption. If such taxes are fairly adjusted, a larger revenue can thus be raised, not only with less consciousness on the part of the people, but with less real hardship to them, than in any other way whatever. There is no other article in India answering this description upon which any tax is levied. Salt appears to be the only one which at present in that country can occupy the place held in our own financial system by the great articles of consumption from which a large part of the imperial revenue is derived. I am of opinion, therefore, that the salt-tax in India must continue to be regarded as a legitimate and important branch of the public revenue.’

“This despatch from the Secretary of State was communicated to the Government of Madras, but without any intimation of the wishes of the Government of India in regard to the subject of it. The Government of Madras, however, was at that time administered by a man of rare ability and energy, whose great talents, and quick perception of sound principles, were at all times exerted with the wisdom and loyalty which specially distinguished his administration, in willing harmony with the efforts of the Government of India, on behalf of imperial, as superior to local, interests. I think that my hon’ble colleague, Sir Alexander Arbuthnot, by whom Lord Napier himself was so ably assisted and loyally supported, will confirm the justice of this tribute, which I feel bound to bear, not merely to the brilliant abilities of Lord Napier and Ettrick, but also to the excellent practical results of that uninterrupted harmony of purpose and action in the relations between the Government of India, under the administration of Lord Mayo, and the Government of Madras, under the administration of Lord Napier, for which the Supreme Government was indebted to that statesman. Thus, shortly after the communication of the Duke of Argyll’s despatch to the Government of Madras, Sir J. Strachey was enabled to inform the Legislative Council of this Government, that the question ‘had been taken up quite spontaneously by Lord Napier, whether the provinces under his administration might not co-operate in the great work of giving the people of less fortunate parts of India an ample supply of salt, equalizing the duties, and facilitating the abolition of the inland customs preventive line.’ But it is only fair that I should quote Lord Napier’s own words:—‘The Government of this Presidency,’ he said (i. e., Government of Madras), ‘is not asked to make a sacrifice for a revenue interest merely. It is asked to make a sacrifice for the welfare of the greater number of Her Majesty’s subjects, and for the general good of trade.’ The Madras Government consequently proposed to increase the Madras salt-duty by three annas at once, and subsequently by two additional annas, should the first increase prove to have been attended with no evil consequences. Then, in 1869, Lord Mayo’s Government, with the concurrence of the Governments of Madras and Bombay, raised the salt-duty in those presidencies by five annas per maund, distinctly explaining that this step was not taken merely to increase revenue, but specially to facilitate the equalisation of duties, and the eventual abolition of the inland customs-line. And it is satisfactory to find that the increase in the Madras salt-duty from rupee 1 to rupee 1-11 per maund was followed by a very considerable increase in the consumption of salt by the population of that Presidency.

“Then we come to the year 1876-77, when the Government of my immediate predecessor, Lord Northbrook, proposed a further increase of 3 annas per maund in the Madras and Bombay salt-duties, unaccompanied by any reduction in the salt-duties of Northern India. The Secretary of State apparently attributed this proposal to financial pressure created by a rapid fall in the price of silver; and he withheld his sanction to it, under the impression that circumstances might prove that the Government of India had exaggerated the probable duration and future intensity of that phenomenon; in short, that it would be unwise to make a permanent change, to meet what might be a temporary difficulty. Lord Northbrook’s Government explained to the Secretary of State that the chief motive of its proposal had been a desire to effect an approximation towards the equalization of the salt-duties, and the more comprehensive revision of those duties, which it had long regarded as an important financial improvement. It also considered that the measure, if adopted, would have involved important administrative advantages, by enabling the Inland Customs Department to curtail some part of their obstructive line, and it added an expression of its belief that there were very sufficient reasons, both financial and administrative, for carrying out that part of the measure which would have imposed small additions to the tax on salt in Madras and Bombay; still leaving the salt consumed in Upper India taxed 50 per cent., and the salt consumed in Bengal taxed 60 per cent., higher than the salt-consumption in the Southern Presidencies.

“Finally, during the first year of my own administration, my late colleague, Sir William Muir, just before he resigned his charge of the Financial Department, placed on record a Minute strongly recommending the immediate revival, even in the middle of the financial year, of the above-mentioned proposal to raise the salt-duties in Southern India, without lowering the salt-duties in Northern India. But, in this Minute, Sir William Muir went even further than Lord Northbrook's original proposal. For whilst, on the one hand, he proposed to raise the salt-duties in Madras and Bombay at once to rupees 2-8 per maund, on the other hand, he proposed, instead of lowering the Bengal salt-duty, to raise it also by 4 annas per maund; and, in support of these proposals, he appealed to his intimate experience of the people of the North-Western Provinces to prove that even a three-rupee duty does not anywhere press sensibly upon the population.

"Now, I felt unable to adopt the proposals thus urged upon me by Sir William Muir, and I wish to mention why. It has always appeared to me that a substantial increase in the salt-duties of Southern India is a perfectly legitimate, and even salutary, measure; provided only that measure be deliberately adopted, not as a temporary financial expedient for raising revenue at a pinch, but as the integral and necessary part of a well-considered comprehensive plan, which has previously been ascertained to be practicable, for getting rid of all our inland customs-lines, equalising the rates of the salt-duty in all our provinces, and thus providing the whole population of the Empire with a practically unlimited supply of adequately cheap salt. But the proposals of my late colleague fulfilled none of these conditions. I considered that, before calling on the Governments of Southern India to make some reasonable sacrifice on behalf of this great fiscal reform, it was incumbent on the Government of India to do what it had hitherto not done; that is to say, to ascertain, by negotiation with the Native States of Rájputána and Central India, whether there was any practical prospect of realizing, within a reasonable period of time, the paramount object to which all the present or prospective alterations in the rates of the salt-duty in British India should, in my judgment, be subsidiary; namely, the abolition of the inland customs-lines. In the next place, I considered that, whenever we raised the salt-duties in Southern India, nothing but an overwhelming pressure of financial responsibility ought to prevent us from endeavouring to effect at least some simultaneous reduction in the salt-duties of Upper India. In conformity with these principles, the Government of India has, for more than twelve months, been assiduously labouring to carry out a thoroughly sound fiscal reform in the levy of the salt-duties.

"I would now ask permission to state to the Council, in a general way, what we have actually done, and what we hope to do, in this matter. Our first step was to enter into confidential communication with the Native States I have already mentioned, for the purpose of obtaining their acquiescence in our control over the salt-sources in their territories, and thus enabling us to tax all salt at the places of production, and so abolish our present barbarous inland customs-cordon; upon conditions equitable, and indeed liberal, as regards the financial interests of the Native States concerned and the social interests of their subjects. Now, the Council will not expect me to explain the details of these negotiations, which have been going on for several months; but I think I am in a position to assure it that at present they are far advanced towards a satisfactory completion. We have approached the Native Governments with every consideration for their legitimate interests. We have been met by those Governments in a friendly and reasonable spirit. We have received from them much valuable information and suggestion; and we have formulated our own proposals in careful accordance with the information and suggestions thus received. The result is, that I feel justified in anticipating, at no distant date, the conclusion of arrangements with the great salt-producing States of Native India which, whilst satisfactory to them, and to us, from a financial point of view, will render possible the introduction of a great fiscal reform, generally advantageous to the population of the whole Empire. It is evident, however, that, if our negotiations be attended with the success I anticipate, the first question we shall then have to determine on our own behalf will be the duty to be levied on salt at the places of production. Now, until our recent salt-measures were adopted, that is to say, only a month ago, the rates of the salt-duty levied on British territory surrounding Native territory, varied from 8 annas per maund in Sindh, and rupee 1-13 in Bombay, to rupees 3 per maund in the west and north, by a gradual increase of mileage duties along the south; so that the maximum duty of rupees 3 in the Panjáb was in direct contact with the minimum duty of $\frac{1}{2}$ a rupee in Sindh. Now, I think the Council will perceive at once that, had the recent alteration not been effected in the salt-duties of Southern India, it would have been extremely difficult for this Government to decide at what rate Rájputána salt should be taxed at the various places of production, so as to permit the removal of the customs-lines without serious loss of revenue to the British Government. If the Bombay rate of rupee 1-13 per maund were adopted, then salt taxed at this rate would, in the absence of the preventive line, pour into the Panjáb, the North-Western and the Central Provinces of India, displacing in those provinces the salt taxed at rupees 3 per maund. If, on the other hand, the higher rate of rupees 3 were adopted, then Rájputána itself would be flooded with the cheaper salt of Sindh and Bombay, and the Rájputána salt-industry would be killed. Moreover, whenever the Rájputána State Railway is completed to Ahmadábád, and even, perhaps, before the completion of that railway, the Runn salt of the Bombay Presidency, a first class salt, admirably adapted for carriage without waste, would enter and permeate the whole of Northern India now within the customs-line, at a cheaper rate than the difference of duty, thus widely ravaging our salt-revenue. I venture to maintain, therefore, that an equalisation of the salt-duties in British territory surrounding the salt-producing Native States is a necessary preliminary to the abolition of the inland customs-line; that in the advanced stage of our negotiations with those States it was incumbent on us to lose no time in making an appreciable approach towards the establishment of such an equalisation in our own salt-duties; and that no measure adopted for that purpose could practically be confined to the territories I have mentioned. The Madras duty must be on the same level as the Bombay duty; and the duty in Lower Bengal must not be very much higher than the duty in the Upper Provinces; for, otherwise, the dearer salt would be entirely displaced by the cheaper salt, to the great disturbance and injury of trade. Now, I grieve to say that, in the present state of our finances, it was simply impossible for us to lower the rates in Northern India down to the level of the rates in Southern India. Such a measure would have involved the loss of at least $1\frac{1}{2}$ million sterling of revenue. We had, therefore, to choose between raising the rates in Southern India, without making any simultaneous reduction in the rates of Northern India, or making an addition to the rates in Southern India considerably larger than the simultaneous reduction effected in Northern India. It is the last of these two courses that we have now adopted in the belief that it is the fairest. We have not raised the rates in Southern India without effecting at least some simultaneous reduction in the rates of Northern India; and I assert that this is more than any previous Government of India has done towards the establishment of an equilibrium in the salt-duty upon equitable principles, and at a level which, if high in the first instance, will, I trust, be found susceptible of gradual reduction to a minimum uniform rate. We have raised the Madras and Bombay duties to rupees 2-8; that is to say, we have increased them by 11 annas per maund: but we have simultaneously lowered the salt-duties in the Upper Provinces of Northern India by 4 annas per maund, and in the Lower Provinces by 2 annas per maund; so that, at the present moment, the salt-duty in the Southern Presidencies stands at rupees 2-8; in Lower Bengal at rupees 3-2, and in the Northern Provinces at rupees 2-12, per maund. I must again remind the Council that we have not made these alterations in the rates of the salt-duties without having first assiduously laboured to secure practical guarantees for the early accomplishment of that great and beneficent object which will, when accomplished, complete the fiscal reform, of which these measures are but the necessary preliminaries; and, in this respect also, I think I am entitled to assert that the present Government of India has done more than any of its predecessors have attempted to do, in furtherance of the fiscal policy which all its predecessors have advocated and proclaimed. The inequalities which still remain in the assessment of the salt-duty are sufficiently inconvenient; and it is my earnest hope that the present Government may have an early opportunity of still further approximating the rates in Northern India to the existing rates in Southern India; for we calculate that a uniform rate of rupees 2-8 per maund will give us, with a diminished inconvenience to the trader, and great benefit to the general consumer, about the same revenue as that which we have hitherto realised from the duty at its previous unequal rates. It is true that the present enhancement of the salt-duty in Madras and Bombay is calculated to give an increased revenue of £300,000. But, then, I must remind the Council that we have not imposed any other form of famine-taxation on the agricultural classes of those two Presidencies. I cannot too earnestly repeat that our main object in dealing with the salt-duties of Madras and Bombay has not been to obtain a larger revenue on the whole than we could have obtained had we left those duties alone, but to facilitate and accelerate the completion of that great fiscal reform to which, under four successive Viceroyalties, the Supreme Government of this Empire has long been committed, quite irrespective of all financial exigencies occasioned by famine or other causes. The additional taxation which, on this ground, it was necessary to impose upon Southern India we have willingly accepted as a justification for exempting the agricultural classes in that part of India from the contribution exacted from the same classes in other parts of India on behalf of famine-expenditure.

"In earnest of our sincerity in affirming that our recent alterations of the salt-duty have been made, not for revenue, but for fiscal purposes, I may again remind the Council that, by reducing the salt-duty in Bengal and in Northern India, we have sacrificed £200,000 worth of revenue. Nor should it be forgotten, I think, when we come to consider the practical incidence of the existing salt-duties upon the poorer portion of the population, that the extension of railway-communication has done much to cheapen the virtual price of salt to the people. For instance, the lines which now connect Bombay with Beypore and Madras on the one side, and Jabalpur and Nagpur on the other, and those which connect Negapatam with Tuticorin, carry salt from the sea-coast to the interior at the rate of 1 anna per maund for about every 50 miles. Thus, the carriage of a maund of salt from Madras or Bombay to any intermediate railway-station does not now exceed 8 annas, which is considerably less than the old cost of carriage by road, and may be fairly reckoned, in favour of the consumer, against the corresponding increase of duty.

"Similarly, in the Bengal Presidency, the present railroads have placed a great part of the country in immediate communication with the sea-coast and internal salt-sources; so that, in spite of the continued imposition of comparatively high duties, the development of railway-communication has cheapened the price of salt over a great part of the country; and further reductions in the price of salt may consequently be expected from further progress in the development of railway-communication.

"But, sincerely as I desire to see the price of salt not only equalised, but cheapened, throughout India; earnestly as I hope that it may be the privilege of this administration to accelerate the arrival of the day when such a result may be attainable; still, I must frankly own that I feel unable to accept the dictum of those who assert that the present salt-duties are a grievous burden to the long-suffering back of the poor raiyat. It may be in the power of the Government of India, and I hope, indeed, it may be in the power of the present Government of India, to lighten that burden such as it is; but it is my own belief that it will never be in the power of any Government of India to devise a substitute for it, which will weigh less heavily on the poorer classes, or be less sensibly felt by them. A salt-tax of rupees 2-8 per maund is a tax of less than three farthings per pound. It would be absurd to represent the pressure of such a tax as oppressive. The manner in which the tax is levied renders the pressure of it almost inappreciable. It is an indirect impost, distributed, in minute daily instalments, over vast masses of population; and, in all probability, the majority of the millions who pay it are not even conscious of its existence. It is the only obligatory tax imposed by this Government upon the masses; and the total amount of its proceeds, when compared with the numbers from whom it is collected, shows how small is the contribution of each individual.

"The gross estimated revenue of a salt-tax, assessed at rupees 2-8 per maund, is about 6 millions sterling; and this revenue would be collected from a population of not less than 200,000,000 of consumers. On this point, I shall again venture to quote the words of Sir William Muir. 'If,' he said, 'there were any form of indirect taxation which could be brought to bear upon the rich, rather than upon the poor, and on the luxuries, rather than on the necessities, of life, I would at once agree to such a tax; but I know of none that is practicable.' And then, after dwelling on the dissatisfaction occasioned by all attempts to extract national revenue from the wealthier classes by direct taxes specially imposed on those classes, as compared with the ascertained social results of indirect taxation levied on a commodity which is consumed by rich and poor, and equally necessary for all classes in the community, Sir William Muir concludes by this emphatic record of his own experience: 'In the one case,' he says, 'we stir up angry feelings in every class throughout the country; in the other case, we peaceably realise what we require, without affecting the contentment and tranquillity of any class.'

"In quoting these words, I do not forget that it is no justification of a bad tax that it is borne without complaint, or even without being perceived, by those on whom it really falls. A poison may be fatal, administered in repeated doses, infinitesimally small. All that I desire to point out is, that, so far as objections might arise to the salt-tax on the ground of its being unpopular, as we well know it has been in other countries, such a reason for rejecting this form of taxation has no existence in India.

"I trust, then, I have shown that the recent action of the present Government of India, in reference to the salt-duties of Madras and Bombay, is in complete accordance with the consistent, continuous and repeatedly avowed aim of its predecessors during the last ten years and more. I trust I have shown that of the sincerity of its devotion to the prosecution of that aim the present Government of India has given conspicuous proof, by taking, for the attainment of it, bolder and wider steps than any which have been taken by previous administrations. I trust I have shown that these steps have been taken without deviation from the course prescribed to us by our predecessors. And, if I have succeeded in this endeavour, then I think I am entitled to claim from all who have questioned our policy, a complete acquittal from the charge that, in what we have done, we have sacrificed the interests of the poorer classes to those of the richer, with a view to a mere increase of revenue. The point at which we have now arrived is this. The salt-duty in Madras, Bombay, Sindh and the Central Provinces has been equalized at the rate of rupees 2-8 per maund. In the North-Western Provinces, Oudh, the Panjáb and Lower Bengal, it still varies between higher rates. The aim of the present Government will be to reduce those higher rates to the level already reached by the salt-duties of Southern India. Nor shall we relax our endeavours to cheapen the price of salt throughout the whole Empire by improving our means of communication with the sources of supply. I trust that our administration may last long enough to achieve these long-deferred results; and that my hon'ble friend, Sir John Strachey, may still be a Member of it when we attain the Promised Land to which he first guided our progress, and thus fulfil his eloquent prophecy of the day when the Government of India will have given to the people of India 'the means of obtaining, with the least possible inconvenience, and at the cheapest rate consistent with financial necessities, a supply of salt only limited by the people's capacity of consumption.' In the meanwhile, we must continue, I fear, though animated by hope and free from self-reproach, to adopt the motto suggested by some schoolmaster for the door of a grammar-school, and borrowed from that venerable authority, the Eton Latin Grammar—'Præsens imperfectum, perfectum futurum.' With the expression of this hope, I now beg to put the question moved by my hon'ble colleague."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

TRANSFER OF PROPERTY BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STOKES presented the Preliminary Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to define and amend the law relating to the Transfer of Property.

FERRIES (PANJAB, N.-W. P. AND OUDH) BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STOKES also moved for leave to introduce a Bill to regulate Ferries in the Panjāb, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. He said that in the Panjāb, owing to the inadvertent repeal by Act IV of 1872 (the Panjāb Laws Act) of Bengal Regulation VI of 1819, there was now no law at all for the control of ferries. One result of the repeal was that everything done by the Magistrates for the last five years in the way of appointing persons to the charge of public ferries, regulating the rates of toll, the number and description of boats and so on, had been done without any warrant of law. Another result was that unlicensed persons might legally set up private rival ferries near ferries managed by Government, and thus materially reduce the income derived from the latter, and the funds available for keeping them in order. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, the Bengal Regulation VI of 1819 was still in force; but the Local Government had expressed a desire that it should be replaced by a measure better adapted to the requirements of the present time and the conditions of modern legislation. The Bill had been framed on the lines of the Burma Ferries Act, which this Council had passed in 1873, and which he believed was working well, but of course some modifications were necessary to adapt this measure to the circumstances of Northern India. He would, if the Council gave him leave to introduce the Bill, explain those changes on a future occasion.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

ARMS BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR EDWARD BAYLEY moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Thornton be added to the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Arms, Ammunition and Military Stores.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Wednesday, the 13th February 1878.

TREASURE-TROVE BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR EDWARD BAYLEY moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to Treasure-trove be taken into consideration. He said that, as it was now some time since this Bill was first introduced into this Council, and as the form, though not the substance, of the Bill had been considerably altered since it first came under consideration, he thought it might perhaps be right, in asking the Council to take the report of the Select Committee into consideration, to say a few words to refresh their memory as regards the reasons for and the objects of the Bill. The reasons for the Bill—the reasons for which it was required—were simply that the law throughout the country was partly uncertain, partly diversified, and partly unworkable.

The old law, that is to say, the existing law, was founded upon the principle that all treasure-trove lapsed to, and became the property of, the State. That was a principle which was in theory perfectly defensible and was not to be denied. But as a matter of fact, especially in India, it was impossible to enforce it, and the attempt to do so had only resulted in creating a series of offences which it was difficult to punish, which were also demoralising, and had also led to the destruction of many valuable articles in consequence of the temptations for concealing their discovery. The object of the present Bill was to make the law certain and to place it on a workable foundation. The principle which the Committee had followed was to secure in the first place the intimation of the finding of the treasure, to secure the rights of all persons who could establish an antecedent property in it; and only where no such antecedent right could be established, did the right to the property come to be dealt with under this law. When the property was declared to be without an antecedent owner, then the division of property in the article found was made between the finder and the owner of the place where it was found. The reason for giving this right to the owner of the soil was that, although perhaps it was not a right which could very easily be defended on principle, yet as a matter of fact such right was very largely asserted by persons who were owners of the soil, and the assertion of vague and antagonistic rights had given rise to many disputes and had also frequently led to the concealment of property found. It was therefore proposed to place the finder and the owner of the property in certain definite relations in regard to that property; and finally the Bill provided means whereby the Government would be able to procure for the national museum articles of historical or archæological value which it might be desirable to secure. Special provisions had been largely introduced into legislation in Europe for this purpose, and had the effect of preserving for national use much very valuable property and articles of great historical importance which would otherwise have been destroyed. He hoped that such might also be the result in India. But the Bill being one which was founded on a principle entirely new to India and intended for a state of society which was not exactly the same as that in Europe, might possibly be found practically to require amendment in its details. It was at present launched in the best form which we were able to give it, and he had no doubt that if experience showed that it required modification, the Council would so modify it.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR EDWARD BAYLEY also moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

TRANSFER OF PROPERTY BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STOKES moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Thornton be added to the Select Committee on the Bill to define and amend the law relating to the Transfer of Property.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE, AGRICULTURE, AND COMMERCE.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS
FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 12th FEBRUARY 1878.

GENERAL REMARKS.—In Madras the only rainfall reported is in Ganjam; general prospects are unchanged; the price of rice is fluctuating, and that of dry grains generally rising slightly. The total number on works is 141,551, and on gratuitous relief 153,981, a decrease of 9,355 and 11,091 on the figures for last week respectively. In Mysore there has been no rain, and there is no change in prospects; the number on works for the week ending the 2nd instant was 41,229, and gratuitously relieved 3,775: the former is 1,605 more and the latter 353 less than in the previous week. In Bombay showers are reported, with much consequent benefit to the rabi, from Sind; elsewhere there has been no rain, and the reaping of the rabi is beginning. Moderate rain has fallen in most districts of the Central Provinces, which has partially damaged the crops. In Berar no rain has fallen: the harvest of the rabi has commenced. In Central India rain is reported from Gwalior and a hailstorm from Sutna. In Rajputana slight rain has fallen at Jodhpore, Tonk, Jeypore and Ulwar; prospects are good. In Bengal rain has fallen in several of the Central and Delta districts, in Behar, the Bhāgalpur division and Chota Nagpore; it is wanted in the Eastern districts and in Jalpaiguri, Cooch Behar, and Pooree; the prospects of the rabi and other standing crops are generally satisfactory. In Assam and Sylhet there has been rain. In Burma none has fallen; the harvest is smallest. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh there has been general rain and in many districts hail; some injury has been done to the crops by damp, hail and blight, and fine weather is required to secure the harvest. General rain, with hail in many places, has also fallen throughout the Punjab: agricultural prospects are still good, but more rain is not required in the Northern districts, though it would be beneficial in the Hissar division.

Baroda
Bengal—
Chittagong ...	0·25	Weather fine and warm; the crops are fair, but want rain; rice is rising in price.
Noakholly ...	Nil	Weather seasonable; the cold-weather crops are progressing favourably; public health is good.
Chittagong Hill Tracts...	Nil	Weather seasonable; the hillmen have begun to cut jungle for jooming.
Hill Tipperah ...	Nil	Weather warm for the season, and occasionally cloudy; prospects of chillies and other cold-weather crops continue good.
Backergunge ...	Nil	All is well, save that food is getting dear.
Furreedport ...	Nil	Weather warm; occasional clouds; the kalai crop has been gathered in most places, and sugarcane is being cut; rain is generally wanted, but much rain would injure the crops that are in an advanced stage; there is still a good deal of fever in many parts of the district.
Dacca ...	0·06	Weather warm, with heavy fogs in the morning; state and prospects of the crops are favourable, but rain would do good.
Mymensingh ...	Nil	Weather fine and mild; the cold-weather crops have been nearly all harvested; the outturn is an average one.
Tipperah ...	0·70	Weather dull, but dry; the cold-weather crops are giving a good outturn; boro dhun promises well.
24-Pergunnahs ...	0·03	Weather hot during the day, nights are cooler; state and prospects of the crops are satisfactory; cholera and fever have much abated.
Jessore ...	Nil	Weather perceptibly warmer than last week; during the last few mornings there have been dense fogs; state and prospects of the crops are favourable; a fine crop of sugarcane is being cut; preparations for the sowings of spring rice are going on.
Nuddea ...	Nil	The weather is beginning to be hot in the day, and the sun is fast gaining power; the cold-weather crops may be said to be generally slightly below the average; none seem to be particularly good or particularly bad; the health of the district is a little better than it has been.
Moorshedabad ...	Nil	Weather warmer than is quite seasonable, but cool at night; prospects of the crops continue on the whole satisfactory; cholera still prevails in four thanas.
Pubna ...	Nil	Weather fine, clear, and seasonable; the harvesting of kaldi and sugarcane is still going on; prospects of the rabi crops appear to be promising; fever has not as yet quite disappeared from the Pubna town.
Rajshahye ...	Nil	Weather warm and getting warmer; the rabi crop is good; the amun crop has not been so good; it has been harvested; there have not been many cases of cholera, but fever is still prevalent.
Bogra ...	Nil	Weather fine and getting warmer; the cutting of the winter rice is over; in the eastern part of the district the land is being prepared for aus and jute crops; sugarcane is being pressed; price of rice is rising; 24 "kutcha" seers are being sold per rupee in the bazar; small-pox has appeared in the Dubchanchia outpost; cholera has much abated, there being only nine fresh cases and four deaths reported during the week.
Dinapore ...	0·68	Weather seasonable; ploughing for the aus crop is becoming general.
Rungpore ...	0·54	Weather getting warm; all crops on the ground are doing well, but tobacco is rather bad; there is now little cholera.
Cooch Behar ...	Nil	Weather gradually getting warmer; mornings and nights are cold; the wind is now blowing from the east; the cold-weather crops have improved by the little rain which fell in the previous week, but more is still wanted; the prospects of both mustard and tobacco are good; prices of rice continue high; the health of the people is on the whole good, but fever has not as yet quite disappeared from Matabhanga.
Jalpaiguri ...	0·21	Hot weather is setting in early; rain is needed; prospects of tobacco and other winter crops are good.
Darjeeling ...	0·31	Cold, misty weather, with only occasional short intervals of sunshine; there are no crops of importance on the ground; the young crops of wheat and barley are doing well; buckwheat in the hills will shortly be reaped.
Midnapore ...	Nil	Weather growing hotter daily; the cold weather is apparently quite over; prospects of the crops are fair as before.
Howrah ...	Nil	Weather getting very warm; the only crop of any importance on the ground now is sugarcane, which is being cut and is yielding a good outturn.
Hooghly ...	0·01	Weather getting warm; no change in the state of the crops to report on since last week; state of public health is normal; cattle disease has not as yet disappeared from thana Dhuniakhally.

Bengal—continued.
Burdwan ...	Nil Culna 0·06 Bood Bood 0·26 Jehanabad 0·07 0·80	Prospects of the rabi crops are good; cholera still continues in the Culna, Bood Bood and Jehanabad sub-divisions; fever is also prevalent in the Jehanabad sub-division.
Baukoora ...	0·80	Weather somewhat cloudy in the beginning of the week, the last part clear and cool, but gradually getting hot; the showers have done the crops good.
Beerbhoom ...	Nil	Weather getting rapidly warmer; state and prospects of the crops are satisfactory.
Sonthal Pergunnahs ...	Nil	Weather sometimes cloudy, threatening rain, but none fell; hot weather is setting in; no change in the prospects of the crops; prices are rising in consequence of export.
Bhāgalpur ...	0·68	Weather cloudy and warm for the season; prospects of the rabi crops continue favourable; this week prices are easier; exportation of food-grains still continues; general health is good.
Monghyr ...	0·25	Weather cloudy and warm; state and prospects of the crops are good.
Purneah ...	0·58	High west wind; weather is daily getting warmer owing to the want of rain; the outturn of the rabi crops will not be first-rate; prices which were rising have fallen considerably owing to the importation of rice from Nepal, from which country during the past few months no export has been allowed.
Maldah ...	Nil	Weather fair; the reaping of the kaimanti rice is nearly over; some of the rabi crops are still in the field and promise well; the boro paddy is flourishing; the last week's rain has done much good to the existing plantations; the public health is improving week after week.
Durbhunga ...	0·11	Weather fine and warm; prospects of the rabi crops are favourable; the harvesting of the oil-seeds has commenced.
Mozufferpore ...	0·12	Weather getting warm; the rabi crops are doing well, and prospects are fair; tobacco and rahur have been somewhat injured; poppy looks better owing to the late rains.
Sarun ...	Nil	Weather seasonable; cloudy on the 7th and 8th instant; west wind is prevailing; the rabi crops are fair on the whole; wheat, barley, and rahur are doing well; poppy is in flower; early peas and mustard are being gathered; indigo fields are ready for sowing; slight injury to rahur , peas and mustard from frost and blight has been reported from most thanas; all the rabi crops, however, for 70 miles along the banks of the Gogra are very fine; prices are stationary; public health is good.
Chumparun ...	0·25	Weather becoming warmer; prospects of the rabi crops are the same as before.
Patna ...	0·13	Weather seasonably cold; state and prospects of the crops are the same as in last report.
Gya ...	Nil	Weather hot at midday and cloudy; maximum thermometer in the shade 86°; no change in the prospects of the crops since last report.
Shahabad ...	0·07	Weather generally clear, but cloudy occasionally; the state of the crops in the fields is the same as reported in the preceding week; sugarcane is commenced to be manufactured ; prices are daily rising.
Hazáribágh ...	0·07	Weather considerably warmer; prospects of the rabi crops continue fair; fine bright weather is required for the mohwa crop.
Lohardugga ...	0·30	The rabi prospects are favourable; in Palamow on account of previous drought the rabi is expected to be below the average; public health is good.
	Light rain in seven out of thirteen police-circles in head-quarters division; 20 in Palamow.
Manbhoom ...	0·80	Weather seasonable; there is little to report; the mohwa crop is anxiously looked for; if it fails there will be scarcity.
Singbhoom ...	0·58	Weather seasonable; nothing to report about the crops; the district is healthy.
Balasore ...	0·04	Weather warm and cloudy; the cold-weather crops are fair; cases of cholera are fewer.
Cuttack ...	Nil	Weather fine and warm; no change in the state and prospects of the crops since last report.
Pooree ...	Nil	Weather warm for the season; sarahi rice is being harvested; dalua rice is progressing well in the low lands; moong and kalai promise well; mandia crop in the salt tracts is suffering for want of rain; common rice is selling at 15½ to 21 aers for the rupee; the export of rice appears to be on the increase; public health is good.
		General Remarks. —There has been rain in several districts during the week, but more seems to be still wanted in places in Eastern Bengal and in Jalpáiguri and Cooch Behar; it is also much wanted in the salt tracts of Pooree; the prospects of the rabi and other standing crops are on the whole satisfactory; sugarcane is being cut and pressed, and is yielding a good outturn; exportation still continues, and prices are steadily rising in most places; in Purneah they are said to have fallen considerably, owing to the importation of rice from Nepal.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATIONS.—ACCOUNTS AND FINANCE.

Fort William, the 22nd February 1878.

No. 1133.—The following letter is published for general information:—

From—The Secretary to the Government of India Financial Department,
To—The Secretary to the Government of the Punjab.

SIR,—IN pursuance of the policy announced by the Hon'ble Sir John Strachey in his Financial Statement to the Legislative Council of His Excellency the Viceroy on the 15th March 1877, the Governor General in Council has had under consideration the extension of the financial responsibilities and independence of the Government of the Punjab, and the following arrangements have been accepted by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor with effect from the beginning of the current year 1877-78 to the end of the year 1879-80.

2. The Excise Revenue of the Punjab has been as follows:—

Years.	Gross Revenue.	Expenditure.	Refunds.	Net Revenue.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
1871-72	8,97,000	61,000	1,000	8,35,000
1872-73	8,76,000	61,000	1,000	8,14,000
1873-74	8,82,000	60,000	1,000	8,21,000
1874-75	9,77,000	60,000	6,000	9,11,000
1875-76	9,55,000	58,000	2,000	8,95,000
1876-77	10,39,000	58,000	2,000	9,79,000
1877-78 Regular Estimate	10,68,000	58,000	5,000	10,05,000
1878-79 Estimate ..	10,68,000	58,000	2,000	10,08,000

The Governor General in Council has assigned this Revenue to the Local Government on condition that the Local Government guarantees to the Imperial Treasury the following net sums:—

Years.	Rs.
1877-78	9,70,000
1878-79	9,90,000
1879-80	10,10,000

The Expenditure may be pro forma reckoned at Rs. 58,000, and the Refunds at Rs. 2,000 a year.

3. Assessed Taxes.—The Lieutenant-Governor has very roughly estimated the produce of the new License Tax at Rs. 9,00,000, and the additional Land Cess may be set down at Rs. 4,25,000. The Governor General has assigned these two sources of Revenue, in 1878-79 and 1879-80, to the Government of the Punjab for a net sum of Rs. 12,00,000, or for any less net sum which may be actually collected.

4. The Revenue from Stamps has been as follows:—

Years.	Gross Revenue.	Expenditure.	Refunds.	Net Revenue
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
1871-72	24,12,000	86,000	18,000	23,08,000
1872-73	23,23,000	25,000	14,000	22,84,000
1873-74	23,38,000	33,000	14,000	22,91,000
1874-75	24,04,000	58,000	21,000	23,25,000
1875-76	24,73,000	69,000	17,000	23,87,000
1876-77	24,56,000	65,000	16,000	23,75,000
1877-78 Regular Estimate	26,71,000	71,000	15,000	25,85,000
1878-79 Estimate ...	26,71,000	71,000	18,000	25,82,000

The Governor General in Council has only asked for the following net sums:—

Years.	Rs.
1877-78	23,95,000
1878-79	24,15,000
1879-80	24,35,000

The Expenditure may be pro formâ reckoned at Rs. 72,000 a year, and Refunds at Rs. 18,000.

5: The imperial share of the Revenue recorded under Law and Justice has been as follows :—

Years.	Gross Revenue. Rs.	Refunds. Rs.	Net Revenue. Rs.
1871-72	4,53,000	32,000	4,21,000
1872-73	4,09,000	29,000	3,80,000
1873-74	4,37,000	31,000	4,06,000
1874-75	4,65,000	36,000	4,29,000
1875-76	4,41,000	36,000	4,05,000
1876-77	4,12,000	35,000	3,77,000
1877-78 Regular Estimate	4,00,000	31,000	3,69,000
1878-79 Estimate ...	4,00,000	36,000	3,64,000

The Government of India will make over this Net Revenue for the following sums :—

	Rs.
1877-78	3,80,000
1878-79	3,80,000
1879-80	3,80,000

Refunds may be pro formâ reckoned at Rs. 35,000.

6. In making its arrangements with other Governments, the Government of India has reserved for the Imperial Treasury half of the Net Revenue from Excise, Stamps, and Law and Justice, which may accrue in excess of the amounts fixed by the contract with each Government, undertaking, on its part, to make good half the deficit below this amount. The same arrangement will hold good with the Government of the Punjab.

The Net Revenue from these three sources is assumed in this despatch as follows :—

	1877-78. Rs.	1878-79. Rs.	1879-80. Rs.
Excise	9,70,000	9,90,000	10,10,000
Stamps	23,95,000	24,15,000	24,35,000
Law and Justice ...	3,80,000	3,80,000	3,80,000
Total	37,45,000	37,85,000	38,25,000

If the total Net Revenue under these three Heads, in any year, exceeds the amount thus fixed for the year, half the surplus must be paid to the Imperial Treasury: if it falls below that amount, half the deficit may be debited to the Imperial Government.

7. For example, the Net Revenue from these sources in 1877-78 and 1878-79 is already estimated as follows :—

	1877-78. Rs.	1878-79. Rs.
Excise	10,05,000	10,08,000
Stamps	25,85,000	25,82,000
Law and Justice ...	3,69,000	3,64,000
Total	39,59,000	39,54,000

being in excess of the contract amounts by Rs. 2,14,000 and Rs. 1,69,000, of which Rs. 1,07,000 and Rs. 84,500 will be appropriated, upon the Estimates, in reduction of the Imperial assignment.

8. The following are the statistics of the Miscellaneous Revenue excluding Gain by Exchange, Premium on Bills, and Unclaimed Bills of Exchange :—

Years.	Gross Revenue. Rs.	Refunds. Rs.	Net Revenue. Rs.
1871-72	74,000	5,000	69,000
1872-73	55,000	6,000	49,000
1873-74	1,13,000	13,000	1,00,000
1874-75	1,06,000	6,000	1,00,000
1875-76	82,000	13,000	69,000
1876-77	62,000	1,000	61,000
1877-78 Regular Estimate	59,000	5,000	54,000
1878-79 Estimate ...	59,000	5,000	54,000

The Local Government has agreed to guarantee net Rs. 50,000 a year to the Imperial Treasury under this Head, appropriating, henceforth, all ordinary Miscellaneous Revenue (other than the excepted items) which would be recorded under any Sub-Head of the Miscellaneous Account now existing in the Books of the Accountant General, and any other items not exceeding Rs. 10,000 each. Any item exceeding Rs. 10,000, which cannot properly be classified under any existing Sub-Head of this Account, and any item altogether extraordinary in character and amount, will be credited as reserved Imperial Revenue. The net amount may be pro forma thus recorded—

						Rs.
Revenue	60,000
Refunds	10,000
				Net	...	50,000

9. Thus the gross obligations of the Government of the Punjab on account of the Revenues now made over to its special use and management will be as follows:—

			1877-78. Rs.	1878-79. Rs.	1879-80. Rs.
Excise	10,30,000	10,50,000	10,40,000
Assessed Taxes	12,00,000	12,00,000
Stamps	24,55,000	25,06,000	25,25,000
Law and Justice	4,45,000	4,15,000	4,15,000
Miscellaneous	60,000	60,000	60,000
			39,90,000	52,30,000	52,70,000

Expenditure.

10. The Local Government will be responsible, as already said, for Refunds of Revenue from Excise, Assessed Taxes, Stamps, Law and Justice, and Miscellaneous of all sorts, the following sums being allowed for this purpose:—

						Rs.
Excise	2,000
Assessed Taxes	Nil because, in this despatch, the Revenue is shown net.
Stamps	18,000
Law and Justice	35,000
Miscellaneous	10,000
						65,000

11. The expenditure recorded under the Head of Land Revenue, excluding Settlements, has been—

						Rs.
1871-72	16,61,000
1872-73	16,28,000
1873-74	16,30,000
1874-75	16,40,000
1875-76	16,49,000
1876-77	16,14,000
1877-78 (Regular Estimate)	16,01,000
1878-79 (Estimate)	16,09,000

The Government of India has assigned for this service the sum of Rs. 16,21,000 a year as granted for 1877-78.

12. The Excise Expenditure has been already fixed at Rs. 58,000 a year, and the Expenditure on Stamps at Rs. 72,000.

13. The sum of Rs. 9,74,000 has been granted for 1877-78 for the services classified under Administration excepting the Account and Currency Officers and Settlement Secretary. This sum may be granted for the future. Past figures have been as follows:—

						Rs.
1871-72	9,89,000
1872-73	9,76,000
1873-74	9,90,000
1874-75	9,68,000
1875-76	9,95,000
1876-77	10,13,000
1877-78 (Regular Estimate)	9,90,000
1878-79 (Estimate)	9,84,000

14. The grant this year for Minor Departments, exclusive of Meteorological Department, Census, Bulls and Stallions, Prizes at Horse Fairs, and Gazetteers is Rs. 16,000, which sum may be repeated. Past figures have been as follows :—

	Rs.
1871-72	15,000
1872-73	8,000
1873-74	11,000
1874-75	10,000
1875-76	11,000
1876-77	11,000
1877-78 (Regular Estimate)	13,000
1878-79 (Estimate)	13,000

15. Past Expenditure under Law and Justice has been—

	Rs.
1871-72	17,12,000
1872-73	16,89,000
1873-74	17,20,000
1874-75	17,13,000
1875-76	19,01,000
1876-77	21,05,000
1877-78 (Regular Estimate)	20,17,000
1878-79 (Estimate)	19,15,000

The grant for 1877-78 (20,94,000) has been renewed.

16. Superannuation and Retired Allowances, Compassionate Allowances, and Gratuities have been as follows :—

	Rs.
1871-72	2,49,000
1872-73	2,54,000
1873-74	2,41,000
1874-75	2,87,000
1875-76	2,91,000
1876-77	3,26,000
1877-78 (Regular Estimate)	3,35,000
1878-79 (Estimate)	3,57,000

The grants for this service, the charge for which is increasing, are fixed as follows :—

	Rs.
1877-78	3,38,000
1878-79	3,48,000
1879-80	3,58,000

17. Miscellaneous charges excluding Remittance of Treasure have been as follows :—

	Rs.
1871-72	25,000
1872-73	15,000*
1873-74	26,000
1874-75	41,000
1875-76	63,000
1876-77	41,000
1877-78 (Regular Estimate)	67,000
1878-79 (Estimate)	1,23,000

The sum of Rs. 41,000 is allowed for this Service, the Local Government undertaking all ordinary charges which can be recorded under any Sub-head of the Miscellaneous Account now existing on the books of the Accountant General, and any other charge not exceeding Rs. 10,000. Any item which does not fall under any Sub-head of the Accountant General's books, and which exceeds Rs. 10,000, and any charge altogether extraordinary in character and amount, will fall directly upon the Imperial Government.

18. The cost of stationery and stamps in the Punjab has been as follows :—

	Stationery. Rs.	Stamps. Rs.	Total Rs.
1871-72	51,153	These years
1872-73	56,699	include bi-
1873-74	40,820	color stamps.
1874-75	34,540	31,883	66,423
1875-76	62,989	85,431	98,420

(No later figures known.)

Average	2,46,201	67,314	...
The Government of India has granted Rs. 83,000 for these Services.	49,240	33,657	82,897

* Exclusive of Rs. 1,17,000, charges for losses sustained during the Mutiny.

19. Thus the gross assignments for 1877-78 stand thus :—

	Rs.
Refunds	65,000
Land Revenue	16,21,000
Excise	58,000
Stamps	72,000
Administration	9,74,000
Minor Departments	16,000
Law and Justice	20,94,000
Superannuation and Allowances	3,38,000
Miscellaneous	41,000
Stamps and stationery; a credit with the Superintendents of Stationery of	83,000
Existing Allotment	54,22,000
Total ...	1,07,84,000

20. But, as in dealing with other Governments, so in dealing with the Government of the Punjab, the Government of India is compelled, by the necessities of the Imperial Treasury, somewhat to curtail the total Grant thus ascertained. Of the items detailed in paragraph 17, the following are not susceptible of retrenchment :—

	Rs.
Refunds, Excise and Stamps	1,95,000
(because these Grants have been fixed in determining the net Revenue to be made good by the Local Government).
Superannuation Allowances	3,38,000
(because the outlay under this head is not, for the most part, controllable by the Local Government).
Existing Allotment	54,22,000
(because this Grant was made after retrenchment).
Total ...	59,55,000

21. There remains the sum of Rs. 48,29,000, five per cent. on which is Rs. 2,41,450. The Governor General in Council has, with the consent of the Hon'ble the Lieutenant-Governor, retrenched Rs. 2,24,000, making the Gross Assignment Rs. 1,05,60,000, and the Net Assignment for 1877-78 after setting off the assigned revenue (Rs. 39,90,000) Rs.65,70,000.

22. The calculated increments of Revenue being Rs. 40,000 a year, and of Expenditure (Superannuation Allowances) Rs. 10,000 a year, the net increments will be Rs. 30,000 a year, and in 1878-79 and 1879-80, the sum of Rs. 12,00,000 will be added for Assessed Taxes. The Net Assignments may therefore be, at present, estimated as follows :—

			Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
				Less share of improvement in net Revenue for Excise, Stamp and Law and Justice already estimated.
1877-78	65,70,000	1,07,000	64,63,000
1878-79	53,10,000	85,000	52,55,000
1879-80	53,10,000	...	53,10,000

23. These amounts will be subject to adjustment according to the exact outturn of the Net Revenue from Excise, Assessed Taxes, Stamps, and Law and Justice, as explained in paragraphs 3 and 6.

By order of the Conservator, Oudh Forests,

SIMPSON HILLIER,
Assistant Conservator of Forests.

The 1st June 1877.

NOTICE.

Sealed Tenders are invited by the Superintendent of Marine at the Calcutta Dockyard up to 12 o'clock noon on Thursday, the 14th March 1878, for the supply, by contract, of the articles specified in the several classes entered in the Schedule, for one year from 1st April 1878 to 31st March 1879, or until the date of sanction by Government of new contracts for the year 1879-80.

2. Forms of Tender, with copies of the Schedule, will be supplied by the undersigned and none others will be received. Tenderers must also distinctly understand that any alteration or erasure in the figures, &c., once entered in the three last columns of the Schedule, viz., "Tendered Rates," "Per" and "Amount of the Tendered Rates," also omission of totals, will render their Tender informal and lead to its rejection.

3. Tenders to be superscribed "Tenders for the supply of Miscellaneous Articles."

4. Tenders will not be received after the hour named.

5. Parties may tender for one or as many complete classes as they please, but not for a portion of class.

6. Parties must show in the Schedule the rate, &c., at which they tender to supply each and every article comprised in one or as many complete classes as they intend to tender.

7. Each Tender, before being opened, must be accompanied with the requisite deposit in cash.

8. Each Tenderer must be prepared to supply all articles equal to the samples produced at the Office of the Superintendent of Marine, which are sealed and kept at his Office for their inspection, and to abide by the conditions specified in the Form of Tender.

9. No reason will be assigned by the Superintendent of Marine for rejection of any Tender, and he does not bind himself to accept the lowest tender.

10. Persons desirous of undertaking the contract can obtain, on application at the Office of the undersigned, printed Forms of Tender and Schedule of the Articles to be supplied, and any other information that may be required connected with the contract, and the conditions the Tenderers must abide by, to prevent their tenders being treated as informal.

G. T. ROBINSON, Comdr., I. N.,
Superintendent of Marine.

THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

PUBLISHED UNDER AUTHORITY.

The "Indian Law Reports," published under the authority of the Governor General in Council, will appear in monthly parts, published as soon as possible after the first of each month at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, and will comprise four series,—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court. The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court will be reported in the Series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court will be reported in the Calcutta Series. The Parts of each Series can be had separately, or all four Parts can be had stitched into one wrapper at the option of subscribers and purchasers. It will be observed from the following statement of the terms of subscription and sale, that a considerable reduction is allowed to persons taking the complete set:

Terms of subscription, payable annually in advance.

* The Rig-Veda, the oldest book of Indian literature, has very properly been made one of the principal class-books for those who study Sanskrit in the schools and colleges in India, and though at present a scholar-like knowledge of the Vedic hymns is in the examinations required of the more advanced students only, yet, as soon as editions, translations, grammars, and dictionaries shall have rendered the study of these ancient documents more accessible, I doubt not that the time will come when no one in India will call himself a Sanskrit scholar who cannot construe the hymns of the ancient Rishis of his country.—Extract from Preface.

PART IV.

Acts of the Governor General's Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third Publication.]

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 9th February 1878, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—

ACT NO. II OF 1878.

An Act for the licensing of trades and dealings in the Panjáb, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

WHEREAS, in order to provide means for defraying the public expenditure from time to time incurred and to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine in British India, it is necessary to effect a permanent increase of the revenue; and it is therefore expedient that persons carrying on trades and dealings in the territories and provinces respectively administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb, the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, should take out licenses and pay for the same; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Northern India License Act, 1878."

Local extent.

It extends to the territories under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb, the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, respectively; but nothing herein contained applies to persons earning their livelihood solely by agriculture.

Commencement.

This Act shall come into force in each of the said territories on such date as the Governor General in Council by notification in the Gazette of India directs in this behalf.

2. When this Act comes into force in the territories under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, Act No. VIII of 1877 (for the licensing of certain trades and dealings in the North-Western Provinces) shall be repealed.

3. In this Act "Collector" means the chief officer in charge of the revenue-administration of a district.

4. Every person who, on or after the first day of April 1878, falls under any of the heads specified in the schedule hereto annexed, and carries on (whether on behalf of himself or any other person) his trade or dealing in any district situate in the said territories, shall take out a license under this Act in such district, and shall pay for the same the annual fee mentioned in such schedule as payable by persons of the class and grade to which he belongs.

5. Such license shall be granted by the Collector of such district, and shall be signed by him, or by such officer as he may appoint in this behalf.

Particulars to be specified in the license.

6. Every such license shall specify—

- (a) the date of the grant thereof;
 - (b) the name, father's name, caste and trade or dealing of the licensee;
 - (c) the class and grade to which he belongs;
 - (d) the fee paid for the license;
 - (e) the term for which the license shall remain in force, and
 - (f) the place or places within such district where the licensee intends to carry on his trade or dealing during such term;
- and shall be received in evidence as prima facie proof of all matters contained therein.

7. Every such license shall have effect in such district only and shall continue in force from the day of the date thereof till the first day of January next after the date of the grant thereof.

Commencement and expiration of license.

8. Every person to whom any such license has been granted, and who desires to continue to carry on his trade or dealing in such district after the expiration of such license, shall take out a fresh license for that purpose for the following year, to expire on the day appointed in the last preceding section, and shall renew the same so long as he desires to continue to carry on such trade or dealing in such district.

Renewal of license.

9. As soon as may be after the first day of April 1878 and the first day of January in every subsequent year, the Collector shall prepare a list of the persons to be licensed under this Act in his district. Such list shall state—

Collector to prepare annual list of licensees.

(a) the trade or dealing of each of the persons therein named;

(b) the class and grade under which he is charged; and

(c) the fee to be paid for his license.

Such list shall be in the language of the district, shall be filed in the office of the Collector, and shall be open to public inspection at all reasonable times without any payment.

10. The Collector shall, from time to time, determine under which of the classes and grades mentioned in the said schedule every person to whom a license may be granted by him as aforesaid shall be charged, and shall amend the said list accordingly.

Collector to determine class under which licensee is to be charged.

The list or such part or parts thereof as the Collector thinks fit shall be published in the principal mohallas or gunjes of all towns, and in the chaupál, or other public place, in all villages concerned, together with a notification that if any person falling under any of the heads specified in the said schedule, whether he is mentioned in such list or not, continues his trade or dealing in the said district, payment of the fee specified in the list as payable by him, or, when he is not mentioned in such list, of the fee mentioned in the said schedule as payable by persons of the class and grade to which he belongs, must be made by him in the year 1878 within thirty days of such publication, and in each succeeding year before the first day of February.

Publication of list and notification.

11. The Collector may, by a notice in writing, require the occupier of any house to forward to him a statement in writing signed by such occupier, of the names of all persons residing in such house at the date of the notice and of their respective callings.

Collector may require list of persons in any house.

12. Any person mentioned in the list referred to in sections nine and ten and objecting to the class or grade under which he is charged may, within thirty days after such publication, or within such further time as the Collector may in each case think fit, apply by petition to the Collector in order to establish his right to have his name transferred to another class or grade, or altogether removed from the list.

13. The Collector shall fix a day for the hearing of the petition, and on the day so fixed, or on such subsequent day as he may from time to time direct, shall hear the same and pass such order thereon as he thinks fit.

Hearing of petition.

Provided that if, in his judgment, the petitioner is able to shew that the fee which has been charged exceeds two per cent. upon his annual nett earnings, such excess shall, for the purpose of section twelve, be deemed a valid objection.

14. The Collector may, for the purposes of any proceeding under section thirteen, exercise any of the powers conferred by the Code of Civil Procedure on a Civil Court for the trial of suits.

Collector to exercise powers of a Civil Court.

Provided that the Collector shall not, in the course of any such proceeding, call for any evidence except at the instance of the petitioner, or in order to ascertain the correctness of facts alleged by him.

15. Subject to the control of the Local Government, the Commissioner of Revenue of the Division may, in his discretion, on the application of any person deeming himself aggrieved by an order passed by the Collector under section thirteen, call for the record of the case, and pass such order thereon as he thinks fit, and such order shall be final.

Revision of order passed under section 13.

16. The Collector may in his discretion remit the whole or any part of the fee payable under this Act by any person who has carried on his trade or dealing for a portion of the year only.

Power to remit fee.

17. A person or firm coming under more than one of the designations in the said schedule shall be chargeable only under one of the said designations at the discretion of the Collector; and in the case of a firm, payment by any one of the partners shall, for the purposes of this Act, be considered payment by the firm.

Persons carrying on several trades.

18. If, after expiry of the period mentioned in the notification published under section ten, for payment of the fee specified or referred to therein, any person (whether he is or is not mentioned in the said list) carries on his trade or dealing without having taken out a license as required by this Act, he shall be liable, by order of the Collector, to pay a fine not exceeding thrice the amount payable by him in respect of such license, exclusive of the amount so payable; and on receipt of such payment the Collector shall grant him a license.

Penalty for carrying on business without a license.

19. All sums due under section eighteen and all fees payable under this Act or the said Act No. VIII of 1877 shall be recoverable as if they were arrears of land-revenue.

Recovery of sums due under this Act.

But no fees or other sums due under this Act or the said Act No. VIII of 1877 shall be recoverable by any process whatsoever after the expiry of three months from the last day of the year in respect of which they are payable.

20. Every person holding a license under this Act shall produce and show such license when required so to do by an officer generally or specially empowered in writing by the Collector to make such requisition.

Licensee to be produced on demand.

But no person shall be proceeded against for neglect or refusal to produce such license except at the instance of the Collector.

Prosecution to be at instance of Collector.

21. Courts of Wards and Receivers and managers appointed by any Court in British India, shall be chargeable under this Act in respect of any trade or dealing of which the income is officially in their possession or under their control.

Receivers and managers chargeable.

22. When any trustee, guardian, curator, committee or agent is charged under this Act in such capacity, or when any Court of Wards or Receiver or manager appointed by any Court is charged under this Act, every person and Court so charged may, from time to time, out of the money coming to his or its possession as such trustee, guardian, curator, committee or agent, or as such Court of Wards, Receiver or manager, retain so much as is sufficient to pay the fee charged.

Every such person or Court is hereby indemnified for every retention and payment made in pursuance of this Act.

23. The nett amount of all fees and penalties disposed of fees and paid or recovered under this Act, after deducting the expenses of collection, or such portion of such nett amount as the Governor General in Council from time to time directs, shall be applied, in such manner as the Governor General in Council thinks fit, for the purpose of increasing the revenues available for defraying expenditure incurred or to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine in the territories administered by the Local Government, or, if the Governor General in Council so directs, in any other part of British India.

The residue (if any) of such nett amount shall be carried to the credit of the Local Government.

24. All or any of the powers and duties conferred and imposed by this Act on a Collector may, subject to the control and orders of the Collector of the District, be exercised and performed by an Assistant Collector or such other officer as the Local Government from time to time appoints in this behalf.

Powers of Collector under Act may be exercised by other officers.

25. Every person shall be legally bound to furnish information to any officer exercising any of the powers of a Collector under this Act when required by him to do so.

Obligation to furnish information to Collector.

26. The Local Government may, from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council,—

Power to exempt and make rules.

(a) exempt any portion of the territories administered by such Government, or any persons or class of persons in such territories, from the operation of this Act, and cancel such exemption ;

(b) exempt from the operation of this Act any persons whose respective nett annual earnings are less than such sum as the Local Government may, from time to time, fix in this behalf, and cancel such exemption ;

(c) make rules consistent with this Act, (1) for regulating the time and manner of collecting the fees charged under this Act, (2) for providing in any case or class of cases for serving notices on persons charged under this Act, (3) for determining the mode in which persons belonging to any class shall be distributed into grades, and (4) generally for the guidance of officers in matters connected with the enforcement of this Act.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 9th February 1878, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT NO. III OF 1878.

An Act to amend the law relating to the levy of rates on Land in the North-Western Provinces.

WHEREAS, in order to defray the expenditure incurred and to be incurred

Preamble. for the relief and prevention of famine, it is necessary to make a permanent increase in the annual revenues, and it is accordingly expedient to provide, in the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, for the levy on land of rates in addition to those now applied to local purposes; and whereas it is therefore expedient to repeal the North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1871, and Act No. VII of 1877, and to re-enact them with the amendments hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

I.—Preliminary.

1. This Act may be called "The North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1878."

It extends only to the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces;

and it shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, directs.

2. On and from such date, the North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, of 1871 and VII of 1877, 1871, and Act No. VII of 1877 (to amend the law relating to assignments from the General Provincial Fund established under the North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1871), shall be repealed. But all rates imposed, rules prescribed, allotments made, committees appointed, powers conferred and notifications published under the former Act, shall be deemed to have been respectively imposed, prescribed, made, appointed, conferred and published hereunder.

Interpretation-clause. 3. In this Act—

"Commissioner" means the chief officer in charge of the revenue-administration of a Division;

"Collector" means the chief officer in charge of the revenue-administration of a district;

"Land" means land used for agricultural purposes, or waste-land which is culturable;

"Tenant" means any person using or occupying land, and liable to pay or deliver rent therefor;

"Landlord" means the person responsible for the payment of the Government land-revenue, if any, assessed on an estate, and includes a muáfídár, nazránádár or other person holding land, whereof the revenue has, either wholly or in part, been released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned;

"Estate" means all or any part of a village separately assessed to the land-revenue, or separately exempt from the payment thereof;

"Year" means the year commencing on the first day of April.

II.—Rates on Land in Districts of which the Settlement is liable to Revision.

4. Every estate situate in any district in which the term of the settlement of the land-revenue made under Regulation IX of 1833 has expired, shall be liable to the payment of such rate, not exceeding five per cent. on its annual value, as the Lieutenant-Governor from time to time imposes.

Such rate shall be paid by the landlord independently of, and in addition to, any land-revenue assessed on the estate:

Provided that, in estates in which, before the passing of this Act, provisional engagements have been taken from the landlord for the payment of the land-revenue and cesses in one consolidated sum, and in which it appears to the Lieutenant-Governor inexpedient to cancel such engagements, one-eleventh part of such sum shall be deducted on account of such cesses, and shall be treated in all respects as if it were a portion of a rate levied under the former part of this section.

Every estate situate in a district of which the land-revenue is liable to periodical revision, shall be liable, in addition to any rates levied under the foregoing portion of this section, to the payment of such further rate, not exceeding one per cent. on its annual value, as the Lieutenant-Governor from time to time imposes.

Such further rate shall be paid by the landlord independently of, and in addition to, any land-revenue assessed on the estate.

"Annual value" means as follows :—

(1). In cases in which the settlement of the land-revenue is liable to periodical revision, it means double the amount of the land-revenue for the time being assessed on an estate;

(2). In cases in which such settlement is not liable to such revision, or in which the land-revenue has been, wholly or in part, released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned, it means double the amount which, if the settlement were liable to such revision, would be assessable as land-revenue on the estate.

III.—Rates on Land in Estates of which the Land-revenue is not liable to periodical Revision.

5. Every estate situated in a district of which the land-revenue is not liable to periodical revision, shall be liable to the payment of such rate as the Lieutenant-Governor from time to time imposes.

Fort William, the 14th March 1878.

In exercise of the power conferred by Section 1 of Act IX of 1878, an Act for the better control of publications in Oriental languages, the Governor General in Council is pleased to extend the said Act to the territories subject to the jurisdiction of the Governments of Bombay, Bengal, N.-W. Provinces and Oudh, and of the Punjab respectively.

By Order of His Excellency the Governor General in Council

JAMES O'KINEALY,

Offg. Secretary to the Govt. of India.

to time imposes, not exceeding two annas for each acre under cultivation, or which has been cultivated within the three years next before the assessment of the rate.

The Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time impose upon any such estate, in addition to any rate imposed under the first clause of this section, a further rate of such amount, not exceeding half an anna for each acre as aforesaid, as he thinks fit.

6. The rate or further rate shall be paid by the landlord independently of, and in addition to, any land-revenue assessed on the estate, and in addition to the cess levied now on account of roads.

7. The Lieutenant-Governor shall from time to time, as occasion requires, make rules for ascertaining the area of the land assessable under section five.

8. The landlord may recover, from every tenant of land on which such rate or further rate has been assessed, and for the payment of which the landlord is liable, an amount equal to one-half of the rate or further rate assessed on the land held by such tenant.

9. The Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time make rules consistent with this Act for determining the cases in which a landlord shall be entitled to recover, from tenants holding at fixed or beneficial rates of rent, the whole or any portion of the rate or further rate assessed on the land held by such tenants.

IF.—Manner in which the Rates are to be expended.

10. The amount standing at the credit of the fund constituted under section nine of the said North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1871, at the time this Act comes into force, and the proceeds of all rates imposed under this Act, shall be carried to the credit of a general provincial fund.

11.(a). From such fund the Lieutenant-Governor shall in each year appropriate, in such manner as the Governor General in Council may direct, such amount, not exceeding the proceeds of the further rates assessed in such year under sections four and five, as the Governor General in Council may direct, for the purpose of increasing the revenues available for defraying expenditure incurred or to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine in the said territories, or, if the Governor General in Council so directs, in any other part of British India.

(b). The Lieutenant-Governor may, from time to time, assign from such fund such amount as he thinks fit, to be applied in payment of charges incurred or to be incurred on account of such canals and railways as he, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may declare to be works of general provincial utility:

Provided that the amounts so assigned in any year shall not exceed one-tenth of the proceeds of the rates assessed in such year under the first clause of section four and the first clause of section five.

(c). Subject to the appropriation directed by clause (a), the Lieutenant-Governor shall from time to time allot from such fund such amounts as he thinks fit, to be applied in each district for expenditure on all or any of the following purposes:—

(1.) The construction, repair and maintenance of roads and other means of communication;

(2.) The maintenance of the Rural Police and District-post;

(3.) The construction and repair of school-houses, the maintenance and inspection of schools, the training of teachers and the establishment of scholarships;

(4.) The construction and repair of hospitals, dispensaries, lunatic asylums, markets, wells and tanks; the payment of all charges connected with the purposes for which such buildings or works have been constructed, and any other local works likely to promote the public health, comfort or convenience.

Provided that the amounts so allotted in any for any district shall not be less than nine-tenths of the proceeds of the rates assessed under the first clause of section four and the first clause of section five in such district in such year.

12. In the case of works which benefit more districts than one, the Local Government may determine what proportion of the expense of the work shall be borne by each of the districts benefited thereby, and such proportion shall be payable out of the allotments made as aforesaid to such districts respectively.

13. Any portion of such allotment remaining unexpended at the end of the year in which the allotment was made may, at the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor, be reallocated for expenditure in the same district, or may be applied for the benefit of the North-Western Provinces, in such manner as the Lieutenant-Governor from time to time directs.

14. Accounts of the receipts in respect of all rates levied under this Act, and of the receipts and expenditure of such allotment, shall be kept in each district. Such accounts shall, at all reasonable times, be open to the inspection of the local Committee hereinafter mentioned. An abstract of such accounts shall be prepared annually in English and in the vernacular language of the district, and shall be open, at all reasonable times, to public inspection at suitable places within the district without the payment of any fee.

An abstract of such accounts shall also be published annually in the local Gazette.

15. The Local Government shall appoint, in each district, a Committee, consisting of not less than six persons, for the purpose of determining how the allotment mentioned in secthen shown shall be applied, and in the supervision and control of such allotment :

Provided that not less than one-half of the members of such Committee shall be persons not in the service of Government, and owning or occupying land in the district, or residing therein.

The Lieutenant-Governor shall, from time to time, prescribe the manner in which the members of such Committee shall be appointed or removed, and shall define the functions and authority of such Committee.

V.—Miscellaneous.

16. Suits for the recovery from co-sharers, tenants or others, of any sum on account of any rate imposed under this Act, and all suits on account of illegal exaction of such rate, or for the settlement of accounts, shall be cognizable by the Collector as if such suits had been included among the suits mentioned in section twenty-three of Act No. X of 1859 and in section one of Act No. XIV of 1863 ;

and appeals from decisions in such suits shall be cognizable in accordance with the provisions of Act No. X of 1859 and Act No. XIV of 1863.

17. In matters connected with the assessment and collection of any sum leviable under this Act, an appeal shall lie to the Commissioner from the order of the Collector, provided that such appeal be presented within thirty days from the date of the order.

The Commissioner's decision on such appeal shall be final ; but all such decisions may be reviewed by the Board of Revenue.

18. The Lieutenant-Governor may invest any officer subordinate to a Collector with all or any of the powers of a Collector for the purposes of this Act.

The orders passed by any officer so invested shall be subject to revision by the Collector of the district.

19. All sums due on account of any rate imposed under this Act shall be recoverable as if they were arrears of land-revenue due on the land on account of which the rate is payable.

20. The Lieutenant-Governor may, by notification from time to time,

(a) prescribe by what instalments and at what times such rate shall be payable, and by whom it shall be assessed, collected and paid ;

(b) make rules consistent with this Act for the guidance of officers in matters connected with its enforcement ;

(c) exempt any portion of the territories under his government from the operation of this Act, or exempt any estate from liability to pay the whole or any part of any rate under this Act and cancel such exemptions ;

(d) direct fresh measurements and vary the assessment accordingly.

Every notification under this section shall be published in the local Gazette.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 9th February 1878, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. IV of 1878.

An Act to amend the law relating to the levy of rates on land in Oudh.

WHEREAS, in order to defray the expenditure incurred and to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine, it is necessary to make a permanent increase to the annual revenues ; and it is accordingly expedient to provide, in the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, for the levy on land of rates in addition to those now applied to local purposes ;

and whereas it is also expedient to empower the said Chief Commissioner to provide for the payment of certain charges incurred or to be incurred on account of canals and railways ;

and whereas it is therefore expedient to repeal the Oudh Local Rates Act, and to re-enact it with the amendments hereinafter appearing ;

It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. This Act may be called " The Oudh Local Rates Act, 1878 :"

Short title.

It extends only to the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of Oudh ;

Local extent.

And it shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council by notification in the Gazette of India directs.

Commencement.

2. On and from such date, Act No. XVII of 1871 (to provide for the levy of rates on land in Oudh) shall be repealed. But all rates imposed, committees appointed and notifications published under the said Act, shall be deemed to have been respectively imposed, appointed and published under this Act.

And all assignments made under section ten of the said Act shall be deemed to be allotments made under this Act.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act—

" Land " means land assessed to the land-revenue, and includes land whereof the land-revenue has been wholly or in part released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned :

" Landholder " means the person in receipt of the rent of any land, and responsible for the payment of the land-revenue, if any, assessed on the estate. It also includes a muáfidár or other person holding land, the land-revenue of which has been wholly or in part released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned :

" Estate " means all or any part of a village separately assessed to the land-revenue, or separately exempted from payment thereof ; and

" Annual value."

" Annual value " means—

(2) Where such settlement is not liable to periodical revision, or where the land-revenue or a portion thereof has been released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned—double the amount which, if the settlement were liable to periodical revision, would, but for such non-liability, release, composition, redemption or assignment, have been assessed as land-revenue on the estate :

“Year” means the year commencing on the first day of April.

4. The Chief Commissioner may impose on every estate a rate not exceeding two and a quarter per cent. on its annual value. Such rate shall be payable annually by the landholder, independently of, and in addition to, any land-revenue for the time being assessed on the estate and any local cesses now leviable therefrom.

5. All sums due on account of any rate imposed under this Act, shall be recoverable as if they were arrears of land-revenue due in respect of the land on account of which the rate is payable.

6. Every landholder may recover from his co-sharers or pattidárs, if any, a share of any such rate bearing the same proportion to the whole rate that the annual value of the share of such co-sharer or pattidár, recorded at the time of the settlement, bears to the annual value of the whole estate.

7. Whenever any such rate is charged on a landholder on account of land in the use or occupation of an under-proprietor or permanent lessee, or of a tenant with right of occupancy, whose rent has been fixed or recorded by a competent Court, such landholder may realise from such under-proprietor, lessee or tenant a share of the rate bearing the same proportion to the whole rate that the share of such under-proprietor, lessee or tenant in the annual value of the land on which the rate is charged, bears to half the annual value of such land.

8. Suits for the recovery from co-sharers, under-proprietors, permanent lessees or tenants as aforesaid, of any sum on account of any such rate, and all suits on account of illegal exaction of such rate, or for the settlement of accounts, shall be cognizable by the Courts of Revenue in Oudh ;

and the provisions of the Oudh Rent Act (No. XIX of 1808), chapters VII, VIII and IX, as to similar classes of suits, shall apply to the suits mentioned in the former part of this section.

9. An appeal shall lie to the Commissioner from the order of any person authorized, under the power hereinafter conferred, to make assessments, in any matter connected with the assessment of any sum leviable under this Act : provided that such appeal be presented within thirty days from the date of the order.

The decision of the Commissioner on such appeal shall be final ; but all such decisions may be reviewed by the Chief Commissioner.

10. The amount standing at the credit of the fund constituted under section nine of the said Act No. XVII of 1871 at the time this Act comes into force and the proceeds of a rates imposed under this Act shall be carried to the credit of a general provincial fund.

11. (a). From such fund the Chief Commissioner shall in each year appropriate, in such manner as the Governor General in Council from time to time directs, such amount not exceeding four-ninths of the proceeds of the rate assessed in such year under this Act, as the Governor General in Council may direct, for the purpose of increasing the revenues available for defraying expenditure incurred or to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine in the same territories, or, if the Governor General in Council so directs, in any other part of British India.

(b). The Chief Commissioner may, from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, assign from such fund such amount as he thinks fit, to be applied in payment of charges incurred or to be incurred on account of such canals and railways as he may declare to be works of general provincial utility :

Provided that the amounts so assigned in any year shall not exceed one-eighteenth of the proceeds of the rates assessed in such year.

(c). Subject to such appropriation, the Chief Commissioner shall from time to time allot from the said fund such amounts as he thinks fit, to be applied in each district for expenditure on all or any of the following purposes :—

(1.) The construction, repair and maintenance of roads and other means of communication ;

(2.) The construction and repair of school-houses, the maintenance and inspection of schools, the training of teachers, and the establishment of scholarships ;

(3.) The construction and repair of hospitals, dispensaries, lunatic asylums, markets, wells and tanks ; the payment of all charges connected with the purposes for which such buildings or works have been constructed, and any other local works and undertakings of public utility likely to promote the public health, comfort or convenience :

Provided that the amounts so allotted in any year for any district shall not be less than one-half of the proceeds of the rate assessed in such district in such year.

12. Any portion of such allotment remaining unexpended at the end of the year in which the allotment was made may, at the discretion of the Chief Commissioner, be re-allotted for expenditure in the same district, or may be applied for the benefit of the Province of Oudh in such manner as the Chief Commissioner from time to time directs.

13. Accounts of the receipts in respect of all rates levied under this Act, and of the receipts and expenditure of the allotment made under section eleven, shall be kept in each district.

Such accounts shall, at all reasonable times, be open to the inspection of the local Committee hereinafter mentioned.

An abstract of such accounts shall be prepared annually in English and in the vernacular language of the district, and shall be open, at all reasonable times, to public inspection at suitable places within the district without the payment of any fee.

An abstract of such accounts shall also be published annually in the local Gazette.

14. The Chief Commissioner shall appoint, in

Appointment of Committee.

each district, a Committee, consisting of not less than six persons, for the purpose of assisting in determining how the amount allotted under section eleven shall be applied, and in the supervision and control of the expenditure of such amount:

Provided that not less than one-half of the members of such Committee shall be persons not in the service of Government, and owning or occupying land in the district, or residing therein.

The Chief Commissioner may, from time to time, prescribe the manner in which the members of such Committee shall be appointed or removed, and shall define the functions and authority of such Committee.

15. The Chief Commissioner may, by notification,

Power to make supplementary rules.

from time to time,

(a) prescribe by what instalments and at what times any rate imposed under this Act shall be payable, and by whom it shall be assessed, collected and paid;

(b) make rules consistent with this Act for the guidance of officers in matters connected with its enforcement;

(c) exempt any portion of the territories under his administration from the operation of this Act and cancel such exemption.

Every notification under this section shall be published in the local Gazette.

D. FITZPATRICK,

Secy. to the Govt. of India.

(Third Publication.)

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 9th February 1878, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—

ACT No. V OF 1878.

Act to amend the law relating to the levy of rates on land in the Panjáb.

WHEREAS, in order to defray the expenditure incurred and to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine, it is necessary to make a permanent increase to the annual revenues, and it is accordingly expedient to provide, in the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb, for the levy on land of rates in addition to those now applied to local purposes; and whereas it is therefore expedient to repeal the Panjáb Local Rates Act, 1871, and to re-enact with the amendments hereinafter appearing; hereby enacted as follows:—

This Act may be called "The Panjáb Local Rates Act, 1878."

Short title.

It extends only to the territories for the time being administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb

Local extent.

And it shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council by notification in the Gazette of India directs.

Commencement.

2. From such date the Panjáb Local Rates Act, 1871, shall be repealed.

Repeal of Act XX of 1871.

But all rates imposed, sums credited to the Local Government, committees appointed and notifications published under the said Act, shall be deemed to have been respectively imposed, credited, appointed and published under this Act;

And all assignments made under the said Act shall be deemed to be allotments made under this Act.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act—

'Land' means land assessed to the land-revenue, and includes land whereof the land-revenue has been, wholly or in part, released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned;

'Landholder' means any person responsible for the payment of the land-revenue, if any, assessed on land. It also includes a person holding land, the land-revenue of which has been, wholly or in part, released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned;

'Annual value.'

'Annual value' means—

(1) double the land-revenue for the time being assessed on any land, whether such assessment be leviable or not;

(2) and, where the land-revenue has been permanently assessed, or has been, wholly or in part, compounded for or redeemed --

double the amount which, but for such permanent assessment, composition or redemption, would have been leviable

'Year.'

'Year' means the year commencing on the first day of April.

4. All land shall be liable to the payment of such rate as the Lieutenant-Governor from time to time directs, not exceeding eight pies for every rupee of its annual value.

Rate payable.

Such rate shall be paid by the land-holder independently of, and in addition to, any land-revenue assessed on land for the land-revenue of which he is responsible, and any local cesses now leviable therefrom:

Provided that wherever the proprietors of any land pay the land-revenue in kind to any assignee of revenue or any village headman, such assignee of revenue or village headman shall be responsible for the payment of the said rate, instead of the proprietors, and no demand shall be made by any such assignee or village headman on any such proprietor in respect of the payment of any such rate.

5. Whenever a rate is charged on a landholder

Power to recover a share of rate from tenant.

in respect of lands held by a tenant with a right of occupancy holding at a favourable rent, such landholder may realize from such tenant a share of the said rate, bearing the same proportion to the whole rate as the excess of the annual value over the rent paid by such tenant bears to half the annual value.

6. The proceeds of all rates imposed under this Act shall be carried to the credit of the Local Government.

Rates to be credited to Local Government.

7. From the sums so credited, the Lieutenant-Governor shall in each year appropriate such amount, not exceeding one-fourth of the total proceeds of the rates assessed in such year, as the Governor General in Council may direct, for the purpose of increasing the revenues available for defraying the expenditure incurred or to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine in the said territories; or, if the Governor General in Council so directs, in any other part of British India.

Subject to such appropriation, the Lieutenant-Governor shall from time to time allot from the said sums such amount as he thinks fit, to be applied in each district for expenditure on all or any of the following purposes:—

(1.) The construction, repair, and maintenance of roads and other means of communication;

(2.) The construction and repair of school-houses, the maintenance and inspection of schools, the training of teachers, and the establishment of scholarships;

(3.) The construction and repair of hospitals, dispensaries, lunatic asylums, wells and tanks, the payment of all charges connected with the purposes for which such buildings or works have been constructed, the planting and preservation of trees, and any other local works likely to promote the public health, comfort or convenience:

Provided that the amounts so allotted in any year for any district shall not in the aggregate be less than three-fourths of the proceeds of the rate assessed in such district in such year.

8. In the case of works which benefit more districts than one, the Lieutenant-Governor may determine what proportion of the expenses of the work shall be borne by each of the districts benefited thereby, and such proportion shall be payable out of the allotments made as aforesaid to such districts respectively.

Works benefiting several districts.

9. Any portion of such allotment remaining unexpended at the end of the year in which the allotment was made may, at the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor, be re-allotted for expenditure in the same district, or may be applied for the benefit of the Panjāb, to such one or more of the purposes mentioned in the second clause of section seven as the Lieutenant-Governor from time to time directs.

10. Accounts of the receipts in respect of all rates levied under this Act and of the allotments made under section seven shall be kept in each district.

Accounts to be kept.

Such accounts shall, at all reasonable times, be open to the inspection of the local committee hereinafter mentioned.

An abstract of such accounts shall be prepared annually in English and in the vernacular language of the district, and shall be open, at all reasonable times, to public inspection at suitable places within the district without the payment of any fee.

An abstract of such accounts shall also be published annually in the local Gazette.

11. The Lieutenant-Governor shall appoint, in each district, a committee, consisting of not less than six persons, for the purpose of determining how the amount allotted under section seven shall be applied, and of supervising and controlling such amount:

Local Committee.

Provided that not less than one-third of the members of such committee shall be persons not in the service of Government, and owning or occupying land in the district, or residing therein:

The Lieutenant-Governor shall from time to time prescribe the manner in which the members of such committee shall be appointed or removed, and shall define the functions and authority of such committee.

12. Suits for the recovery from co-sharers, tenants or others, of any sum on account of any rate imposed under this Act, and all suits on account of illegal exaction of such rate, or for the settlement of accounts, shall be cognizable by the Courts which, for the time being, have cognizance of suits for rent due on land.

Suits under Act cognizable by Courts having cognizance of suits for rent.

13. In matters connected with the assessment and collection of any sum leviable under this Act, an appeal shall lie from the order of any person authorized under this Act to make assessments, to such person as the Lieutenant-Governor appoints:

Appeals.

Provided that such appeal shall be presented within thirty days from the date of such order.

The order of such person on such appeal shall be final.

14. All sums due on account of any rate imposed under this Act shall be recoverable as if they were arrears of land-revenue due on the land on account of which the rate is payable.

Recovery of rates.

Supplementary powers Local Government.

15. The Lieutenant-Governor may by notification from time to time—

(a) prescribe by what instalments and at what times such rate shall be payable, and by whom it shall be assessed, collected and paid;

(b) appoint the person or class of persons to whom the appeals referred to in section thirteen shall lie;

(c) make rules consistent with this Act for the guidance of officers in matters connected with its enforcement;

(d) exempt wholly or in part any portions of the territories under his government from the operation of this Act, or exempt any land from liability to pay the whole or any part of any rate under this Act, and cancel such exemption;

(e) direct fresh measurements and vary the assessment accordingly.

Every notification under this section shall be published in the local Gazette.

D. FITZPATRICK,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 13th February 1878, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. VI OF 1878.

An Act to amend the law relating to Treasure-Trove.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to treasure-trove; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Preamble.

Preliminary.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Treasure Trove Act, 1878."

Extent.

It extends to the whole of British India;

Commencement.

And it shall come into force at once.

2. The enactments specified in the schedule hereto annexed shall be repealed to the extent mentioned in the third column of the same schedule.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act—

"treasure" means anything of any value hidden in the soil, or in anything affixed thereto :

"Treasure."

"Collector" means (1) any revenue officer in independent charge of a district, and (2) any officer appointed by the Local Government to perform the functions of a Collector under this Act.

"Collector."

When any person is entitled, under any reservation in an instrument of transfer of any land or thing affixed thereto, to treasure in such land or thing, he shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be the owner of such land or thing.

Owner.

Procedure on finding Treasure.

4. Whenever any treasure exceeding in amount or value ten rupees is found, the finder shall, as soon as practicable, give to the Collector notice in writing—

(a) of the nature and amount or approximate value of such treasure;

(b) of the place in which it was found

(c) of the date of the finding;

and either deposit the treasure in the nearest Government Treasury, or give the Collector such security as the Collector thinks fit, to produce the treasure at such time and place as he may from time to time require.

5. On receiving a notice under section four, the Notification requiring claimants to appear.

Collector shall, after making such enquiry (if any) as he thinks fit, take the following steps (namely) :—

(a) he shall publish a notification in such manner as the Local Government from time to time prescribes in this behalf, to the effect that, on a certain date (mentioning it), certain treasure (mentioning its nature, amount and approximate value) was found in a certain place (mentioning it); and requiring all persons claiming the treasure, or any part thereof, to appear personally or by agent before the Collector on a day and at a place therein mentioned, such day not being earlier than four months, or later than six months, after the date of the publication of such notification;

(b) when the place in which the treasure appears to the Collector to have been found was at the date of the finding in the possession of some person other than the finder, the Collector shall also serve on such person a special notice in writing to the same effect.

6. Any person having any right to such treasure or any part thereof, as Forfeiture of right on failure to appear.

owner of the place in which it was found or otherwise, and not appearing as required by the notification issued under section five, shall forfeit such right.

7. On the day notified under section five, the Matters to be enquired into and determined by the Collector.

Collector shall cause the treasure to be produced before him, and shall enquire as to and determine—

(a) the person by whom, the place in which, and the circumstances under which, such treasure was found; and

(b) as far as is possible the person by whom, and the circumstances under which, such treasure was hidden.

8. If, upon an enquiry made under section seven,

Time to be allowed for suit by person claiming the treasure.

the Collector sees reason to believe that the treasure was hidden within one hundred years before the date of the finding, by a person appearing as required by the said notification and claiming such treasure, or by some other person under whom such person claims, the Collector shall make an order adjourning the hearing of the case for such period as he deems sufficient, to allow of a suit being instituted in the Civil Court by the claimant, to establish his right.

9. If upon such enquiry the Collector sees no reason to believe that the treasure was so hidden; or if, where a period is fixed under section eight, no suit is instituted as aforesaid within such period to the knowledge of the Collector; or if such suit is instituted within such period, and the plaintiff's claim is finally rejected

the Collector may declare the treasure to be ownerless.

Any person aggrieved by a declaration made

Appeal against such declaration.

under this section may appeal against the same within two months from the date thereof to the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority.

Subject to such appeal, every such declaration shall be final and conclusive.

10. When a declaration has been made in re-

Proceedings subsequent to declaration.

spect of any treasure under section nine, such treasure shall, in accordance with the provisions hereinafter contained, either be delivered to the finder thereof, or be divided between him and the owner of the place in which it has been found in manner hereinafter provided.

11. When a declaration has been made in re-

When no other person claims as owner of place, treasure to be given to finder.

spect of any treasure as aforesaid, and no person other than the finder of such treasure has appeared as required by the notification published under section five and claimed a share of the treasure as owner of the place in which it has been found, the Collector shall deliver such treasure to the finder thereof.

12. When a declaration has been made as aforesaid in respect of any treasure, and only one person other than the finder of such treasure has so appeared and claimed, and the claim of such person is not disputed by the finder, the Collector shall proceed to divide the treasure between the finder and the person so claiming according to the following rule (namely):—

If the finder and the person so claiming have not entered into any agreement then in force as to the disposal of the treasure, three-fourths of the treasure shall be allotted to such finder and the residue to such person. If such finder and such person have entered into any such agreement, the treasure shall be disposed of in accordance therewith:

Provided that the Collector may in any case, if he thinks fit, instead of dividing any treasure as directed by this section,

(a) allot to either party the whole or more than his share of such treasure, on such party paying to the Collector for the other party such sum of money as the Collector may fix as the equivalent of the share of such other party, or of the excess so allotted, as the case may be; or

Provided also, that when the Collector has by his declaration under section nine rejected any claim made under this Act by any person other than the said finder or person claiming as owner of the place in which the treasure was found, such division shall not be made until after the expiration of two months without an appeal having been presented under section nine by the person whose claim has been so rejected, or, when an appeal has been so presented, after such appeal has been dismissed.

When the Collector has made a division under this section, he shall deliver to the parties the portions of such treasure, or the money in lieu thereof, to which they are respectively entitled under such division.

13. When a declaration has been made as aforesaid in respect of any treasure, and two or more persons have appeared as aforesaid and each of them claimed as owner of the place where such treasure was found, or the right of any person who has so appeared and claimed is disputed by the finder of such treasure, the Collector shall retain such treasure and shall make an order staying his proceedings with a view to the matter being enquired into and determined by a Civil Court.

14. Any person who has so appeared and claimed may, within one month from the date of such order, institute a suit in the Civil Court to obtain a decree declaring his right; and in every such suit the finder of the treasure and all persons disputing such claim before the Collector shall be made defendants.

15. If any such suit is instituted and the plaintiff's claim is finally established therein, the Collector shall, subject to the provisions of section twelve, divide the treasure between him and the finder.

If no such suit is instituted as aforesaid, or if the claims of the plaintiffs in all such suits are finally rejected, the Collector shall deliver the treasure to the finder.

16. The Collector may, at any time after making a declaration under section nine, and before delivering or dividing the treasure as hereinbefore provided, declare by writing under his hand his intention to acquire on behalf of the Government the treasure, or any specified portion thereof, by payment to the persons entitled thereto of a sum equal to the value of the materials of such treasure or portion, together with one-fifth of such value, and may place such sum in deposit in his treasury to the credit of such persons; and thereupon such treasure or portion shall be deemed to be the property of Government, and the money so deposited shall be dealt with, as far as may be, as if it were such treasure or portion.

17. No decision passed or act done by the Collector under this Act shall be called in question by any Civil Court, and no suit or other proceeding shall lie against him for anything done in good faith in exercise of the powers hereby conferred.

18. A Collector making any enquiry under this Act may exercise any power conferred by the Code of Civil Procedure on a Civil Court for the trial of suits.

19. The Local Government may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Act, to regulate proceedings hereunder.

Such rules shall, on being published in the local Gazette, have the force of law.

Penalties.

20. If the finder of any treasure fails to give the notice, or does not either make the deposit or give the security, required by section four, or alters or attempts to alter such treasure so as to conceal its identity, the share of such treasure, or the money in lieu thereof to which he would otherwise be entitled, shall vest in Her Majesty, and he shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

21. If the owner of the place in which any treasure is found abets, with- in the meaning of the Indian Penal Code, any offence under section twenty, the share of such treasure, or the money in lieu thereof to which he would otherwise be entitled, shall vest in Her Majesty, and he shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be punished with imprisonment which may extend for six months, or with fine, or with both.

CHAPTER I.—Preliminary.

3. We have here followed the Contract Act, section 1, by inserting a clause to save all enactments not expressly repealed, such, for instance, as the Acts limiting powers of guardians and managers to make sales and leases, and the provisions of the Panjab Tenancy Act, section 32, which have been held to restrict to occupancy-tenants the right to sublet. We have also saved all incidents of contracts not inconsistent with the provisions of the Bill. Besides the Malabar mortgage's option, which the Bill as introduced expressly preserved, there must be many other incidents of Native contracts with which it is desirable not to interfere. We have also saved the right to anything affixed to the soil by tenants under leases granted before the proposed Act comes into force.

CHAPTER II.—Assurances of Immoveable Property.

4. We have struck out the section relating to easements, as it will more fitly come into the Bill relating to those rights, which is now in preparation.

5. Section 6 of the Bill as introduced would have often rendered persons liable to an obligation, or at least to be sued on an obligation, the existence of which was unknown to them. We think that this is obviously inexpedient, and have therefore made the section an embodiment of the well-known rule, that a contract between the respective owners of two neighbouring parcels of land, that one of them shall do or refrain from doing something on his parcel for the benefit of the other parcel, may be enforced in equity against all persons claiming the former parcel under him with notice of the contract.

6. We think that section 7 of the Bill, as introduced, should be omitted, as it would allow incidents of a novel kind to be devised and attached to property at the fancy or caprice of any owner. It would, moreover, allow the grantee's enjoyment of the property to be destroyed or materially lessened by the exercise of the right reserved.

7. We have also struck out section 9 of the Bill as introduced. The rules of construction therein referred to, besides being inapplicable in some respects to instruments executed inter vivos, are contained in the testamentary portion of the Succession Act, which does not apply to Muhammadans anywhere, and applies to Hindús only in the Presidency-towns and the Lower Provinces.

8. We have provided (section 7) rules as to the right of innocent grantees for valuable consideration without notice, of persons like the managers of the property of a minor or an undivided family, childless Hindú widows in possession of their deceased husband's property, and benámídar's and other ostensible owners, who have only a restricted power of alienation. Our rules on this head are in accordance with decisions of the Privy Council and the Calcutta High Court.

9. We have redrawn section 13 of the Bill as introduced, so as to save the rights of the creditors of the person paying the consideration for a benámí transaction, and as the section will apply to benámí leases as well as to benámí sales, we have transferred it to chapter II.

CHAPTER III.—Sales.

10. We have declared (section 10) the respective liabilities of an intending seller and an intending buyer to make disclosures of defects and advantages.

11. We have introduced into section 11 clauses as to the seller's duty to produce title-deeds for examination, to answer questions respecting the property and to discharge incumbrances; as to the buyer's right to abandon the contract when the seller materially alters the property; and as to the custody and production of title-deeds after completion. We have also declared when the property vests in the purchaser, and explained when the purchase is completed.

12. Clause (a) of section 11 of the Bill as introduced, would have rendered a vendor liable for damage sustained by the purchaser owing to the loss of his bargain, and it would have made a vendor, like a mortgagor, warrant his title as against all the world. We think that in this respect his liability should be restricted, as it is in England, to acts done by himself or those through whom he claims. Section 11, clause (j), has been framed accordingly.

13. Clauses (c) and (f) of the same section, as introduced, are corollaries from the doctrine of equitable ownership and appear to us to be inconsistent with section 12, which declares that a mere contract for sale shall not transfer the property. Why, for instance, should the buyer be made liable to bear loss arising from destruction of property which is not his own? We have therefore omitted these clauses. Under any circumstances they would have been of little use in a country where, as a rule, the making of the contract is immediately followed by the completion of the purchase.

14. We have provided (section 12) for cases where, before completion, the buyer becomes insolvent. This provision is modelled on the present English law, 32 & 33 Vic., c. 71, ss. 23, 24. We have also provided for the following matters:—

- (a) the liability to the seller of the buyer of a leasehold (section 13):
- (b) the liability to the seller of the buyer of an equity of redemption (section 14):
- (c) money received under a fire-policy by the seller for damage done after the date of the contract (section 15):
- (d) joint-purchases (section 17):
- (e) the rights arising where two estates are subject to a common charge and one of the estates is sold (section 18):
- (f) the exemption of bona fide buyers of trust-property from seeing to the application of the purchase-money (section 19):
- (g) the rights of the seller where there is default on the part of the buyer and the rights of the buyer where there is default on the part of the seller (section 20).

CHAPTER IV.—Exchanges.

15. In this chapter, which corresponds with chapter V of the Bill as introduced, we have made no substantial change except the insertion of a section (22), providing (in accordance with the Code Civil, Art. 1704) that if one of the parties prove that the other was not owner of the thing given or agreed to be given to the former in exchange, the former cannot be compelled to deliver that which he has promised in counter-exchange; but when he has received the thing given to him in exchange, he may be compelled to return it.

16. We have also provided, in accordance with the same Code, Art. 1705, that the party deprived of the thing he has received in exchange by reason of invalidity of title caused by anything done by the other party or any person through whom the latter claims, may at his option sue for compensation or sue for the thing given by him.

CHAPTER V.—Mortgages and Charges.

17. We have made it clear that the mortgages here dealt with are only mortgages of immovable property and sub-mortgages. Mortgages of policies, ships, machinery, furniture, cattle and other moveable property require to be separately treated.

18. We have inserted a section (26) requiring that every mortgage shall be created by an assurance signed by the mortgagor and attested by at least two witnesses. As mortgages by verbal agreement are now rarely if ever made, this will not substantially alter the present practice, and will obviously tend to prevent fraud and litigation.

19. The Bill as introduced permits the mortgagor to deposit the amount due only in the District Court. This might lead to much inconvenience, and we have modified section 28, clause (b), so as to allow the mortgagor to deposit in any Court in which he could have instituted a suit for redemption.

20. We have, in accordance with the present law, precluded (section 28) a person interested in part only of the mortgaged property from redeeming his own part only, and a person interested in part only of the mortgage-money from foreclosing his own part only.

21. We have given (section 29) the mortgagee the rights which he has under the covenants for title contained in an English mortgage-deed. When the mortgagee has a right to sue for the mortgage-money, these covenants are of no practical use during the continuance of the mortgage; but they become valuable after a foreclosure or sale.

22. We have declared (section 30) that, where the property is a lease for years and the mortgagee, while in possession, obtains a renewal, the mortgagor upon redemption shall have the benefit of the new lease.

23. We have imposed (section 32) on a mortgagor making a subsequent mortgage the duty of disclosing to the subsequent mortgagee the previous mortgages, and of giving notice to the prior mortgagees of the subsequent mortgage.

24. Although from the theoretical point of view there is much to be said in favour of discarding the distinctions between the various kinds of mortgages used in India, we think that the amount of simplicity gained would not justify the amount of disturbance created, and that, in practice, confusion and hardship would be caused if simple mortgages and mortgagees by conditional sale were allowed (as they would be by the Bill as introduced) to take possession, or if simple and usufructuary mortgagees were allowed to foreclose. Moreover, any such extension of the power to foreclose would enable large classes of speculators and money-lenders to defeat the intentions with which the Legislature framed the new Code of Civil Procedure, sections 320—322, by obtaining simple mortgages and then instituting foreclosure-suits. We have therefore introduced (section 34) a clause the effect of which will be to maintain the law as it stands in this respect.

25. We have also (section 34) prohibited mortgagees from interfering with the right of the public to the continued use of undertakings, such as canals and railways, in the maintenance of which the public are interested. The remedy of such mortgagees will be to obtain a receiver of the profits of the undertaking.

26. We have provided (section 36) for the case where the parties to a mortgage have omitted to stipulate expressly for interest.

27. We are of opinion that, in the absence of an express contract to the contrary, no mortgagee should be entitled as such to take possession, and we have inserted (section 37) a clause to this effect. We have, however, allowed the mortgagee to sue for a receiver after the expiration of one year from the time when the principal has become payable, or after interest has been in arrear for six months; and we have empowered the Court, in any suit for foreclosure or sale, to appoint a receiver pending the proceedings in the suit.

28. We think that the mortgagee should be allowed to sue for the mortgage-money in four cases only, namely, (1) where the mortgagor binds himself expressly to pay the loan, (2) where the mortgagor remains in possession and allows the property to be sold for arrears of revenue, (3) where the property is destroyed by diluvion, fire or other superior force, and (4) in the case of an usufructuary mortgage, where the mortgagor is unable to give or secure possession. We have inserted a section (38) to this effect.

29. We have considered the question as to whether we should validate powers of sale in mortgages of property situate in the Mufassal, and we have come to the same conclusion as the late Sadr Diwānī Adālat came to in 1842, namely, that it would not be safe to entrust Indian money-lenders with powers so liable to abuse. We have therefore framed the section (39) corresponding with section 24 of the Bill as introduced, so as to invalidate such powers except where the lender is the Government, or the property is situate in the Presidency Towns or Rangoon.

30. We have limited (section 40) the right of a mortgagee in possession to insure to cases in which the property is insurable at ordinary rates. In the case of an inflammable property, the mortgagee might, under the Bill as introduced, impose an unfair burden on the mortgagor.

31. We have provided (section 41) for accessions to the mortgaged property.

32. We have framed the section (43) corresponding with section 17 of the Bill as introduced, so as to exempt mortgagees who, under a contract in writing, take the profits of the mortgaged property in lieu of interest, from keeping accounts of their receipts.

33. Where a mortgagor in possession fails to pay arrears of revenue and the estate is consequently sold, our Courts have ruled that the mortgagee has a charge on the surplus of the sale-proceeds after payment thereof of such arrears. We have in section 45 adopted this ruling.

34. The Bill as introduced had nothing to shew that Lord Denman's doctrine in Pickard v. Sears applies to mortgages. We have therefore inserted the following :—

“46. Where, through the fraud or gross neglect of a prior mortgagee, another person has been induced to advance money on the security of the mortgaged property, the prior mortgagee shall be postponed to the subsequent mortgagee.”

35. The Bill should, we think, embody the equitable principles that a creditor who can satisfy his debt out of several funds shall so exercise his right as not to take from another creditor the fund which forms his only security, and that a fund which is equally liable with another to pay a debt shall not escape because the creditor has been paid out of that other fund alone. We have therefore inserted sections (50, 51) as to what English lawyers call marshalling securities and contribution.

36. Though the matter is one rather of procedure than of substantive law, we have inserted a rule (section 52) as to the proper parties to suits for redemption, foreclosure or sale, which will save the right of subsequent incumbrancers to redeem, and, if a decree for sale is made, conclude them.

37. We have provided (sections 54 and 60) that in suits for foreclosure and redemption, upon good cause shewn, the time fixed by the Court for payment may be enlarged. We believe that this power (which is constantly exercised by Courts of equity) will be in accordance with the feelings of the people of many parts of India where, until recently, the power to redeem was held to last for ever, and even the long term of sixty years fixed by the Limitation Act is sometimes regarded as an unfair innovation.

38. We have designedly withheld power to open foreclosures.

39. We have enumerated the persons entitled to redeem as follows :—

“58. Besides the mortgagor, any of the following persons may institute a suit for redemption of the mortgaged property :—

- (a) any person (other than the mortgagee) having any interest in or charge upon the property :
- (b) any person having any interest in or charge upon the right to redeem the property :
- (c) any surety for the payment of the mortgage-debt or any part thereof :
- (d) the guardian of the property of a minor mortgagor :
- (e) the committee or other legal curator of a lunatic or idiot mortgagor :
- (f) the judgment-creditor of the mortgagor, when he has obtained execution :
- (g) a creditor of the mortgagor who has in a suit for the administration of his estate obtained a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property.

Explanation.—An easement is not an interest within the meaning of clause (a).”

40. When property is mortgaged for successive debts to successive mortgagees, we have expressly authorised (section 62) any mesne mortgagee to institute a suit to redeem the prior mortgagees and to foreclose those that are posterior to himself. We have given in the third schedule a form of the decree passed in such a suit.

41. We think that as a person having a charge has a mere right of realization, he should not be allowed to foreclose, and should be only entitled, under the proposed Act, to institute a suit for the sale of the property charged. We have framed section 68 accordingly. We have introduced a section (69) providing for the merger of charges. But the section in its present form is not to be understood as representing our final opinion on the subject.

CHAPTER VI.—Leases.

42. We have prefixed to this chapter a section (70) declaring the respective duties of proposing lessors and lessees to make disclosures of defects and advantages.

43. As the law stands, both in England and, as a general rule, in India, there is no implied warranty on the letting of land or an unfurnished house that it is fit for cultivation or occupation; there is no implied obligation on the landlord to repair the premises, and, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, the tenant is bound to keep and leave them in good repair; and the landlord does not warrant his title, but merely covenants that the tenant paying his rent and performing his covenants may peaceably enjoy the property during the term without interruption by the landlord or any one claiming through him. We think that the Bill should, in these respects, accord with the law as above stated, and we have therefore struck out, in section 44, of the Bill as introduced the latter half of clause (b) and the whole of clause (f), and substituted for clauses (c) and (d) a clause providing for quiet enjoyment by the lessee. But there is no doubt that, in certain parts of India and with regard to certain classes of houses, usages have become established with regard to repairs, with which it is undesirable to interfere. We have, therefore, made our provisions as to liability to repair subject to local usage.

44. Where part of the property leased is destroyed by superior force, we think that the lease should become void as to that part, that any rent or fine payable under the lease should proportionately abate, and that a proportionate part of any fine paid by the lessee should be returned. If the lessor reinstate the part destroyed, he and the lessee can come to a new agreement. We have altered clause (i) in accordance with these views.

45. We think that no lessee should, without the lessor's consent, erect any permanent structure on the property, except for agricultural purposes, and we have made provision to that effect in section 71, clause (m). Under the Bill as introduced the tenant might have erected unsightly buildings on his holding and thereby seriously injured the landlord's contiguous property.

46. We have struck out the words authorising a lessee to remove fixtures after the termination of his lease. They might have prevented the lessor from letting the property to another at the end of the term.

47. We have declared (section 71, clause r) that the power of transfer conferred on a lessee shall not be deemed to authorise an occupancy-ryot to assign his interest. This is the law in Bengal, in the absence of a special custom: the saving clause in section 2 will leave unaffected the right of occupancy-tenants in the Panjáb.

48. We have provided (section 73) for the insolvency of the lessee, and enabled the receiver of his property, with the leave of the Court, to disclaim the property leased. This provision, like the similar clause in chapter III, is founded on 32 & 33 Vic., c. 71, sections 23, 24.

49. We have declared (section 74), in accordance with the present law, that a tenancy begins on entry, and that a lessee before entry cannot sue for trespass.

50. We have stated (section 76) the various ways in which a lease may be determined: we have explained (section 77) the law as to the waiver of forfeiture or a notice to quit; and we have provided by the same section for relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent. Power to grant such relief has long been exercised by Courts of equity on payment of arrears and the landlord's costs, and a like power was, by 23 & 24 Vic., c. 126, conferred on the Common-law Courts. Act X of 1859, section 78, and Bengal Act VIII of 1869, section 52, provide for stay of execution of a decree for ejectment on payment into Court within fifteen days from its date, and we propose to leave this procedure untouched.

51. Strong representations have been made to us that, in the case of European and East Indian married women, restraints on anticipation should continue to be allowed. We have therefore added a proviso to section 82 (corresponding with section 52 of the Bill as introduced) which will have the desired effect.

52. We think that section 83 in its present state requires further consideration. But in deference to the Indian Law Commissioners we have let the section stand as they framed it.

53. We think sections 85 and 86 (corresponding with sections 55 and 56 of the Bill as introduced) should not apply to Natives; and we have made a provision to this effect.

CHAPTER VIII.—Discretion of the Courts to deal with settled Land.

54. We think that the delicate jurisdiction which this chapter proposes to confer should be exercisable only by the High Courts. We have altered the wording of section 88 accordingly.

55. We have recast section 90 (=section 68 of the Bill as introduced) so as to restrict the privilege of appearing, &c., to persons interested in the land and to persons permitted by the Court to appear.

CHAPTER IX.—Gifts for Religious and Charitable Purposes.

56. We have exempted Natives from the operation of this chapter, which would have interfered with their religious usages: we have confined it expressly to immoveable property; and we have provided that notice of the assurances contemplated shall be given to the Local Government.

CHAPTER X.—Owners of Limited Interests.

57. It is said that Hindú law allows the person increasing by his own exertions the value of an estate a larger share in the increase than he possesses in the corpus. We have therefore saved (section 99) in such cases any benefit to which the person making the increase is entitled under his personal law.

58. We have in the section (100) relating to the discovery of the deaths of tenants for life, taken care that the Court shall not be authorised to compel the appearance in public of pardah-women.

CHAPTER XI.—Powers.

59. We have here added rules declaratory of the present law, as to the following matters:—

- (a) the revocation of appointments (section 107):
- (b) the delegation of powers (section 108):
- (c) the application of the doctrine of election to appointments (section 120):
- (d) gifts by implication to the objects of powers (section 125):
- (e) the priority of interests created under powers (section 127):
- (f) the extinguishment of powers (section 128).

CHAPTER XII.—Property held by several Persons.

60. We have, at the request of our honourable colleague Maharaja Jotindra Mohan Tagore, declared (section 130) that nothing in the clause authorising the Court in a suit for partition, to direct a sale and distribute the proceeds, shall apply to the property of an undivided family. But we have reason to believe that, in the Hindú community of Calcutta much difference of opinion exists as to the expediency of making such declaration, and we invite the especial attention of the Local Governments to this matter.

61. We have provided (section 134) that the buyer or mortgagee of a share of undivided immovable property takes subject to the right of the co-owners to enforce a partition, and that, when such partition is effected, his right extends only to the share allotted to his transferor.

CHAPTER XIII.—Assignments of Things in Action.

62. When the debtor receives notice of the assignment, we have provided (section 137) that he shall give effect thereto unless he resides, or the property is situate, in a foreign country, and the title of the person in whose favour the assignment is made is not complete according to the law of such country.

The First Schedule.

63. We have added to the enactments proposed for repeal, 4 Wm. & Mary, c. 16, as to clandestine mortgages, a matter provided for by section 32 of the amended Bill, Act XXXI of 1854, section 17, which is embodied in section 19 of the amended Bill, and Act I of 1877, section 13, which is inconsistent with section 12 of the same Bill. We have also, by repealing the words 'in writing' in the Specific Relief Act, sections 35 and 36, rendered those sections applicable to oral contracts.

The Second Schedule.

64. We have added forms of an exchange and an English mortgage, and for the form of lease contained in the Bill as introduced, we have substituted forms of a lease of a dwelling-house and a farm.

65. We have now enumerated the changes which we have made in the substance of the Bill. We have also made some in its wording and arrangement.

66. We recommend that the Bill as now amended be republished with this report in the Gazette of India and sent to the several Local Governments for consideration and for republication in the local Gazettes. In order to give ample time for the further discussion of so important a measure, we think that no steps should be taken to pass it into law until the Council re-assembles next November.

67. We desire, in conclusion, to express our obligations to the gentlemen who have favoured us with criticisms on the Bill. We are especially indebted to the Honourable Raymond West, a Judge of the High Court of Bombay; Mr. Grant, Officiating Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces; Pandit Lakshmi Narayana of Lucknow; Mr. J. W. Smyth, a Judge of the Panjab Chief Court, Muttusami Ayyar, c. i. E., Acting Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Madura, and Srinivasa Rao, a Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Madras; and Mr. Stokes desires to acknowledge some valuable remarks privately communicated to him by Sir R. Garth.

No. II.

A Bill to define and amend the law relating to the Transfer of Property, and for other purposes.

WHEREAS it is expedient to define and amend the law relating to the transfer of property, to owners of limited interests, and to powers, property held by several persons and apportionment; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called "The Transfer of Property Act, 1878."

Short title. It extends to the whole of British India;

Extent. And it shall come into force on the first day of January 1879.

Commencement. 2. On and from that day the enactments specified in the first schedule hereto annexed shall be repealed to the extent mentioned in the third column thereof. But nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect—

(a) the provisions of any enactment not hereby expressly repealed:

Having of certain Acts, incidents, rights, liabilities, &c. (b) any incidents of any contract which are not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act:

(c) any right or liability acquired or incurred before this Act comes into force, or any remedy in respect of any such right or liability:

(d) the right to anything affixed to the soil by the tenant under any lease granted before this Act comes into force:

(e) any right of pre-emption acquired after this Act comes into force:

(f) any sale in execution of a decree or order or for arrears of rent or revenue:

And nothing contained in sections 85 and 86 and Chapter IX shall apply to Hindús, Muhammdans or Buddhists.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

Interpretation-clause. "assurance" means any non-testamentary instrument which purports or operates to create, transfer,

"assurance." or otherwise dispose of, whether in present or in future, any right, title or interest, whether vested or contingent, to or in immoveable property:

the person so creating, transferring or otherwise disposing, is called a grantor.

"grantor." or: the person in whose favour such creation, transfer or disposition is made,

"grantee." is called a grantee; and the operation effected by an assurance is called a grant:

"grant." "registered" means registered in British India under the law for the time being in force regulating the registration of documents:

"registered." "affixed to the soil" means—

"affixed to the soil." (a) imbedded in the soil, as in the case of walls:

(b) permanently resting upon it, as in the case of buildings; or (c) attached to what is so imbedded or so rests, as by means of nails, bolts, screws, cement, solder or other permanent fastening.

All words occurring in this Act and defined in the Indian Contract Act, 1872, shall have the meaning attributed to them respectively by that Act.

CHAPTER II.

OF ASSURANCES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

4. Every person competent to contract may make an assurance of immoveable property: but subject to the law for the time being in force as to the circumstances and extent in and to which he may dispose of such property.

5. An assurance may be made in the form in the second schedule hereto annexed, or in any other form which expresses an intention thereby, and without any further act on the part of the grantor, to create, transfer or otherwise dispose of any right, title or interest to or in immoveable property.

6. Unless a contrary intention appears by the assurance, it shall be deemed to pass to the grantee all the interest which the grantor is capable of passing in the object of the grant, and to comprise—

(a) standing trees and all other products of the soil;

(b) things affixed to the soil, and, in the case of machinery so affixed, the moveable parts thereof;

(c) in the case of a house, the locks, keys, bars, doors and windows.

7. The owner of immoveable property cannot give to another a title there-to higher or more free from incumbrance than his own.

and when he has only a restricted power of alienating the property, he cannot give to another a title thereto valid as against third parties, except upon an alienation within the restriction :

Provided that where a grantor makes a grant as

Protection to innocent (a) the manager of the grantees for value. property of a minor or an undivided family, (b) a childless Hindú widow in possession of her deceased husband's property, or (c) a benámídar or other ostensible owner, the grantee's title shall not be impeached if the grant has been made for a consideration and the grantee has acted in good faith and used due care and diligence to ascertain that the grantor had power to make the grant.

8. A contract in writing between the respective

Contracts restricting owners of two neighbouring mode of enjoyment of parcels of land, that one of land. them shall do or refrain from doing something on his parcel for the benefit of the other parcel, is binding on all persons claiming the former parcel under him with actual knowledge of the contract, and may be enforced by the owner of the latter parcel or his legal representative.

A contract in writing between the owner of certain land and any other person, that the former shall do or refrain from doing something on the land for the benefit of the public, is binding on all persons claiming the land under the former with actual knowledge of the contract, and may be enforced by the latter, or his legal representative, or by the Secretary of State for India in Council.

9. Where a grant of immoveable property for

Effect of payment by one person of consideration for which grant is made to another. a consideration is made to one person, and the consideration is paid by another, no trust shall result in favour of the person by whom such payment is made ; but the property shall vest in the grantee, subject only to the provisions next following.

Every such grant shall be presumed to be fraudulent as against the creditors, at that time, of the person paying the consideration ; and where a fraudulent intent is not disproved, a trust shall result in favour of such creditors to the extent necessary to satisfy their just demands.

CHAPTER III.

OF SALES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

10. A person proposing to sell immoveable

Disclosures required from proposing sellers and buyers.

property need not disclose defects therein which the buyer might with ordinary care discover : but the proposing seller must not conceal, or attempt to conceal, such defects, and he must disclose to the buyer all other defects therein of which the former is, and the latter is not, aware.

Where the proposing buyer stands, or has stood, as regards the property, in a fiduciary relation to the seller, he must disclose to the seller any fact which increases the value of the property itself, and of which the former has, during the existence of such relation, become aware. Save as aforesaid, a person proposing to buy immoveable property need not disclose any fact unknown to the seller which increases the value of the property itself : but the proposing buyer must disclose any such fact which increases the value of the seller's interest therein, and of which the former is, and the latter is not, aware.

Illustrations.

(a.) A proposes to sell a field to his neighbour B. A need not disclose the existence of an open foot-path over the field.

(b.) A proposes to sell a mine to B, who has the opportunity of examining it. A need not disclose the fact that he has himself worked the mine, but has abandoned the working as unprofitable.

(c.) A proposes to buy B's field. There is not, and never has been, any fiduciary relation between A and B. A need not disclose the fact that there are minerals under the field, though he knows that B is ignorant of it.

(d.) A proposes to buy from B his interest in certain property to which B is entitled on C's death. C, to the knowledge of A, but not of B, is actually dead or is about to die. A is bound to disclose this fact to B.

11. Unless a contrary intention appears from the contract or assurance, the Rights and liabilities of buyer and seller. buyer and the seller of immoveable property respectively have the rights, and are subject to the liabilities, mentioned in the ten rules next following, or such of them as are applicable to the property sold :

(a.) The seller must produce to the buyer, for examination, all documents of title relating to the property which are in his possession or power, and must inform the buyer of all facts not apparent thereon which affect the seller's power to fulfil his contract, and must answer to the best of his information all relevant questions put to him by the buyer in respect to the property or the title thereto.

(b.) When the buyer has been let into possession of the property before payment of the whole of the purchase-money, the seller has a charge upon the property for the amount of the purchase-money, or any part thereof, remaining unpaid, and for interest on such amount or part ; but as soon as the assurance, if any, is registered, such charge shall cease except as against the buyer.

(c.) Unless the buyer has improperly declined to complete the purchase, he has, against the seller, a charge on the property, to the extent of the seller's interest therein, for the amount of any purchase-money properly paid by the buyer in anticipation of the completion of the purchase, and for interest on the amount of such payment ; and, when the buyer properly declines to complete the purchase, also for the deposit (if any) and for his costs (if any) of a suit by himself or the seller to compel specific performance of the contract or to obtain a decree for its rescission.

(d.) If the seller alter the property in any particular which does not admit of compensation or reinstatement, the buyer may decline to complete the purchase.

(e.) When the buyer has been let into beneficial possession of the property before completion of the purchase, and the purchase is not completed owing to defects in the seller's title, the buyer is not liable to pay for his use of the property.

(f.) The seller must discharge all incumbrances on the property existing at the date of the contract. The buyer may retain out of the unpaid purchase-money the amount of such incumbrances and shall pay the amount so retained to the parties entitled thereto.

(g.) On payment or tender of the amount due in respect of the purchase-money, the seller is bound to execute a proper assurance of the property when the buyer tenders it to him for execution at a proper time and place.

(h.) On completion of the purchase, the property vests in the buyer, and the buyer is entitled to all documents of title relating to the property which are in the seller's possession or power :

Provided that (1) where the seller retains any part of the property comprised in such documents, he is entitled to retain them all, and (2) where the whole of such property is sold to different buyers, the buyer of the lot of greatest value is entitled to such documents. But in case (1) the seller, and in case (2) the buyer, of the lot of greatest value, is bound, upon every reasonable request by the buyer, or by any of the other buyers, as the case may be, or by any person claiming under him, and at the cost of the person making the request, to produce the said documents and furnish such true copies thereof as he may require ; and, in the meantime, the seller or the buyer, as the case may be, of the portion of greatest value, must keep the said documents safe, uncanceled and undefaced, unless prevented from so doing by fire or other inevitable accident.

(i). In the absence of fraud, concealment and misrepresentation, the seller is not answerable for any defect in the property sold.

(j). Unless the sale is made by a person in a fiduciary character, the seller shall be deemed to contract with the buyer, first, that notwithstanding anything done by the seller or any person through whom he claims, the seller has power to grant the property to the buyer, free from incumbrances ; secondly, that the seller and all persons claiming any interest in the same through or for him, or any person through whom he claims, will on demand execute and deliver to the buyer at his expense any further assurance of the same that may reasonably be required ; and, where the property is leasehold, thirdly, that the lease is valid and subsisting and that the rent reserved thereby, the conditions contained therein and the contracts binding on the lessee have been paid, performed and observed down to the completion of the purchase.

When the sale is made by a person in a fiduciary character, the seller shall be deemed to contract with the buyer that the seller has done no act whereby the property is incumbered or whereby he is hindered from granting it.

EXPLANATION.—A purchase is completed within the meaning of this chapter when possession of the property is delivered to the buyer. When the transfer is made by assurance, such delivery takes place when the assurance is executed by the seller and (if its registration be required by law) registered. When the transfer is not made by assurance, such delivery takes place, in the case of an incorporeal right, when the parties consent to the delivery, and, in the case of other immoveable property, when the buyer becomes capable of exercising physical control over it and determines to exercise such control on his own behalf, or on behalf of the person whom he represents.

12. A contract for, or relating to, the sale of immoveable property, shall not have the effect of creating any interest in, or charge on, such property ; but the only right of any person under the contract shall be to apply for specific performance, or for compensation, or for both, according to the rules laid down in the Indian Contract Act, 1872, the Specific Relief Act, 1877, and section twenty.

13. If, before completion of the purchase, the buyer is declared insolvent, the receiver of his property appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure, section 351, may, if the contract is unprofitable, by writing under his hand disclaim the same, and thereupon the contract shall be deemed to be determined from the date of the declaration : provided that the receiver shall not disclaim such contract in cases where an application in writing has been made to him by any person having any interest in the property, requiring him to decide whether he will disclaim or not, and the receiver has, for a period of not less than twenty-eight days after the receipt of such application or such further term as may be allowed by the Court, declined or neglected to give notice whether he disclaims the contract or not.

Any person injured by the operation of this section shall be deemed a creditor of the insolvent to the extent of such injury and may prove the same as a debt under the insolvency.

14. As between the seller and buyer of leasehold property, the buyer is, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, bound to pay the rent reserved by the lease and accruing due after completion of the purchase, to perform the contracts by the lessee, and to indemnify the seller and his legal representative against all claims for non-payment of such rent or breach or non-observance of such contracts.

15. As between the seller and buyer of a right to redeem mortgaged property, the buyer is, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, bound (a) to pay to the mortgagee or his legal representative the principal sum which, on completion of the purchase, is owing on the security of the mortgage, and all interest for the time being due for the same, when payment thereof, respectively, is lawfully demanded, and (b) to indemnify the seller and his legal representative against the payment thereof, and against all claims for non-payment thereof, respectively.

16. If at the date of the contract the property is insured against loss or damage by fire, the buyer, in case of such loss or damage, may, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, require any money which the seller may actually receive under the policy, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be applied in reinstating the property.

17. When two or more persons purchase any immoveable property, with separate funds belonging to them respectively, they shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, be interested in such property in proportion to the shares of the purchase-money which they respectively advanced.

18. When two properties are subject to a common charge, and one of the properties is sold, the buyer is, as against the seller and his legal representative, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, entitled to have the charge satisfied out of the other property, so far as such property will extend.

19. When any property is sold, the proceeds of which are subject to any trust, the bond fide buyer of the property is not bound to see to the application of the purchase-money to the purposes of the trust.

20. When the buyer fails to perform any duty imposed on him, as such, by this Act or any other law for the time being in force, the seller may, notwithstanding anything contained in the Indian Contract Act, 1872, section 56, sue the buyer for compensation for such non-performance.

When the seller fails to perform any duty imposed upon him, as such, by this Act or any other law for the time being in force, the buyer may either sue under the Specific Relief Act, 1877, to have the contract rescinded, or may affirm it and sue for compensation for its non-performance. In the latter case, the buyer may recover his expenses reasonably incurred, after the contract was entered into, in relation to the attempted purchase; and in each case he may recover his deposit (if any) with interest thereon.

CHAPTER IV.

OF EXCHANGES.

21. When two persons contract to mutually give one thing for another, neither thing or both things being money only, the contract is called a contract of exchange.

22. If one of the parties prove that the other was not owner of the thing given or agreed to be given to the former in exchange, the former cannot be compelled to deliver that which he has promised in counter-exchange; but when he has received the thing given to him in exchange, he may be compelled to return it.

The party deprived of the thing he has received in exchange by reason of anything done by the other party or any person through whom the latter claims, may, at his option, sue for compensation or sue for the thing given by him.

23. Save as otherwise provided in this chapter, each party has the rights and is subject to the liabilities of a seller as to that which he gives, and has the rights and is subject to the liabilities of a buyer as to that which he takes.

24. On an exchange of money, each party there-by warrants the genuineness of the money given by him.

CHAPTER V.

OF MORTGAGES AND CHARGES.

25. When, for the purpose of securing money advanced or to be advanced by way of loan or an existing or future debt, one person transfers to another a right over specific immoveable property, the transfer is called a mortgage, the transferor is called a mortgagor, the transferee a mortgagee, the money of which payment is secured is called the mortgage-money, and the assurance by which the transfer is effected is called a mortgage-deed.

For the purposes of this chapter, any person entitled as heir, legatee, assignee, lessee or otherwise than as a mortgagee to the interest of the transferor in the property subject to the mortgage, or any part of such interest, is a mortgagor; and any person entitled as heir, legatee, assignee or otherwise to the interest of the transferee under the mortgage, or any part thereof, is a mortgagee.

Where the mortgagor transfers the property to the mortgagee conditionally upon the non-payment of the mortgage-money at a certain date, the transaction is called an English mortgage.

Where the mortgagor delivers possession of the property to the mortgagee, and authorises him to retain such possession and to pay himself from the rents and profits of the property the interest, or the principal and interest, of the mortgage-money, the transaction is called an usufructuary mortgage.

Where the mortgagor binds himself personally to repay the mortgage-money, and pledges the property as collateral security for the repayment, but does not deliver possession of the property, or contract that in default of payment of the principal and interest at a certain date the property shall pass to the mortgagee, the transaction is called a simple mortgage.

Where the mortgagor not so binding himself and not delivering possession of the property, contracts that, on default of payment of the principal and interest at a certain date, the property shall pass to the mortgagee, the transaction is called a mortgage by conditional sale.

26. A mortgage can be effected only by assurance signed by the mortgagor and attested by at least two witnesses.

27. The deposit of title-deeds with intent to create a mortgage on the property comprised therein, but without actual transfer of such property, shall be deemed to be only evidence of a contract to execute a mortgage of the property.

Rights and Liabilities of Mortgagor.

28. A mortgagor has the following rights as against the mortgagee:—

(a) at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable, or has been paid, and before an order absolute has been made foreclosing his right to redeem the mortgaged property or the property is duly sold in pursuance of a decree or under a power conferred by the mortgage-deed, he may, on payment or tender of the mortgage-money remaining due, require the mortgagee to re-grant the property to him, or to execute an acknowledgment in writing that any right in derogation of his ownership or other interest granted to the mortgagee has been extinguished.

(b) at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable and before such suit is barred, he may tender to the mortgagee at a proper time and place, or deposit in any Court in which he might have instituted a suit for redemption of the mortgaged property, to the account of the mortgagee, the whole amount for the time being due on the mortgage.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise a person interested in part only of the mortgaged property to institute a suit for the redemption of his own part only, except where there is but one mortgagee and the mortgagor's interest in part of the property becomes vested in such mortgagee.

29. In the absence of a contract to the contrary, the mortgagor shall be deemed to contract with the mortgagee, first, that the mortgagor has power to grant the property to the mortgagee, free from incumbrances; secondly, that the mortgagor and every person claiming any interest in the same will on demand (at the cost until foreclosure or sale of the mortgagor and afterwards of the person requiring the same) execute every such assurance of the same that may reasonably be required; and, where the property is leasehold, thirdly, that the lease is valid and subsisting, that the rent reserved thereby, the conditions contained therein, and the contracts binding on the lessee have been paid, performed and observed down to the execution of the mortgage-deed; and that the mortgagor will, so long as the security exists, pay the rent reserved by the lease, perform the conditions contained therein and observe the contracts binding on the lessee and indemnify the mortgagee against all claims sustained by reason of the non-payment of the said rent or the non-performance or non-observance of the said conditions and contracts.

30. Where the mortgaged property is a lease for a term of years, and the mortgagee, while in possession of the property, obtains a renewal of the lease, the mortgagor, upon redemption, shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, have the benefit of the new lease.

31. A mortgagor in possession of the mortgaged property must not commit waste thereon, if the security is insufficient or will be rendered insufficient by such waste.

Explanation.—A security is insufficient within the meaning of this section unless the value of the mortgaged property exceeds by one-third, or, if consisting of buildings, exceeds by one-half, the mortgage-money.

32. A mortgagor proposing to make a second or other subsequent mortgage of the mortgaged property shall, before effecting the mortgage, give the second or other subsequent mortgagee notice in writing under his hand of the prior mortgage or mortgages, and a mortgagor making a second or other subsequent mortgage of the mortgaged property shall, as soon as may be, give the prior mortgagee or mortgagees like notice of such mortgage.

A mortgagor failing to give any notice required by this section, in addition to any other liability resulting from such failure, shall, when the accounts are taken in pursuance of a decree made under this chapter, be debited with the loss, if any, occasioned by such failure.

33. If the owner of two or more properties creates separate mortgages on them by separate assurances, each mortgage may be dealt with irrespectively of the other, though the mortgages are created in favour of the same mortgagee.

Illustration.

A, the owner of farms Z and Y, mortgages Z to B for Rs. 1,000. A afterwards mortgages Y to B for Rs. 1,000, making no stipulation as to any additional charge on Z. A may institute a suit for the redemption of the mortgage on Z alone.

Rights and Liabilities of the Mortgagee.

34. In the absence of a contract to the contrary, the mortgagee may, at any time after the mortgage-money has become payable to him, and before a decree has been made for the redemption of the mortgaged property, or the mortgage-money has been paid, institute against the mortgagor (1) a suit for a foreclosure of his right to redeem the property with or without possession thereof, or (2) a suit for a sale of the property, or (3) a suit for such foreclosure or sale.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed—

(a) to authorize a simple mortgagee to institute a suit for a foreclosure, or an usufructuary mortgagee to institute a suit for a foreclosure or sale, or a conditional mortgagee to institute a suit for a sale

(b) to authorize the mortgagee of a railway, canal or other work in the maintenance of which the general public are interested to institute a suit for a foreclosure or sale; or

(c) to authorize a person interested in part only of the mortgage-money to institute a suit relating only to a corresponding part of the mortgaged property: but he may institute any of the suits mentioned in this section, which, under this Act, he is authorized to institute, relating to the whole of the mortgaged property, making the other mortgagees, if they cannot or will not join as plaintiffs, defendants.

35. Where the mortgagor deposits money in court under section twenty-eight, the Court shall forthwith cause written notice of the deposit to be served on the mortgagee, and the mortgagee may, on depositing the mortgage-deed in the same court and on filing a written statement (verified in manner prescribed by law for the verification of plaints) of the amount due to him under the mortgage, apply for and receive in payment of such amount the money so deposited.

36. When the mortgagor and mortgagee have contracted as to the payment of interest on the principal money for the time being due to the mortgagee under the mortgage, interest shall be payable in accordance with such contract: Provided that, where the mortgagor has tendered or deposited in court under section twenty-eight the whole amount due to the mortgagee, such interest shall cease from the date of the tender or from the earliest time when the mortgagee could take such amount out of court, as the case may be.

Where no such contract has been entered into, the mortgagee is entitled to interest on such principal money at the rate of six per cent. per annum.

37. In the absence of an express contract to the contrary, no mortgagee shall be entitled as such to take possession of the mortgaged property; but at any time after the expiration of one year from the time when the principal money has become payable according to the terms of the mortgage-deed, or after any interest thereon has been in arrear for six months, he may institute a suit for the appointment of a receiver of the rents and profits of the whole or any part of the same.

In any suit for a foreclosure or sale, the Court may, if it think fit, appoint such a receiver pending the proceedings in the suit.

38. No mortgagee shall be deemed to imply a debt for the recovery of which a suit will lie against the debtor; but the mortgagee may sue the mortgagor for the mortgage-money—

(a) where the mortgagor expressly binds himself to repay the same:

(b) where the mortgagor remains in possession of the property and fails to pay arrears of revenue due in respect thereof, and the property is consequently sold:

(c) where the property is destroyed by diluvion, fire or other superior force:

(d) in the case of an usufructuary mortgage, where the mortgagor fails to deliver to the mortgagee possession of the property or to secure the possession thereof to him without disturbance by the mortgagor or any other person.

39. A power conferred by the mortgage-deed on the mortgagee to sell or concur in selling the mortgaged property, or any part thereof, is invalid, except where the mortgagee is the Secretary of State for India in Council, or the mortgaged property is situate within the town of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay or Rangoon.

Act No. XXVIII of 1866, section 6, is repealed so far as it is inconsistent with this section.

40. If, at the date of the mortgage, the mortgaged property is insured against loss or damage by fire, the mortgagee, in case of such loss or damage, may, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, require any money which the mortgagor may actually receive under the policy, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be laid out in reinstating the property.

41. If, after the date of the mortgage, any accession is made to the mortgaged property, the mortgagee, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, shall, for the purposes of the security, be entitled to such accession.

Illustrations.

(a) A mortgages to B a certain field bordering on a river. The field is increased by alluvion. For the purposes of his security, B is entitled to the increase.

(b) A mortgages a certain plot of building land to B and afterwards erects a house on the plot. For the purposes of his security, B is entitled to the house as well as the plot.

42. When, during the continuance of the mortgage, the mortgagee takes possession of the mortgaged property, he has the following rights and liabilities:—

(a) he shall manage the property as a person of ordinary prudence would manage it if it were his own

(b) he shall use his best endeavours to collect all rents and other profits arising out of the property;

(c) he shall, in the absence of an express contract to the contrary, out of the income of the property pay the Government revenue and all other charges of a public nature accruing due in respect thereof during such possession;

(d) he may spend such money as is necessary (1) for the due management of the property and the collection of the rents and other profits arising out of the same, (2) for its preservation from destruction, deterioration, forfeiture or sale, (3) for supporting the mortgagor's title to the property, (4) for making his own title thereto good against the mortgagor, and (5), when the mortgaged property is a renewable leasehold, for the renewal of the lease; and may, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, add such money to the principal money secured, at the same rate of interest;

(e) he may eject the tenants (if any) in occupation of the property under leases made without the mortgagee's consent after the completion of the mortgage;

(f) where the property is by its nature insurable at ordinary rates, he may insure and keep insured against loss or damage by fire the whole or any part of such property, and add the premiums paid for any such insurance to the principal money secured, at the same rate of interest; and, in case of such loss or damage, shall apply any money which he may actually receive under the policy, or so much thereof as may be necessary, in reinstating the property;

(g) he shall, in the absence of an express contract to the contrary, keep accurate accounts of all sums received and spent by him as mortgagee and, at any time during the continuance of the mortgage, give the mortgagor, at his request and cost, true copies of such accounts and of the vouchers by which they are supported;

(h) his receipts from the mortgaged property, after deducting the expenses mentioned in clauses (c), (d) and (f), shall be debited against him in reduction of the amount (if any) from time to time due to him on account of interest on the principal sum secured by the mortgage, and, so far as such receipts exceed any interest due, in reduction of such principal sum.

43. Nothing in section forty-two, clauses (g) and (h), applies to cases where there is an express contract in writing between the mortgagee and the mortgagor that such receipts, after deducting the said expenses, shall, so long as the mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged property, be taken in lieu of interest on the principal sum secured by the mortgage.

44. A mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged property must not commit waste thereon.

45. When a mortgagor in possession of the mortgaged property fails to pay arrears of revenue due in respect thereof, and the property is consequently sold, the mortgagee has a charge on the surplus, if any, of the proceeds, after payment thereout of the said arrears.

Priority.

46. Where, through the fraud or gross neglect of a prior mortgagee, another person has been secured to advance money on the security of the mortgaged property, the prior mortgage shall be postponed to the subsequent mortgage.

47. If a mortgage made to secure the balance of a running account expresses the maximum to be secured thereby, a subsequent mortgage on the same property shall, if made with actual knowledge of the prior mortgage, or if the instrument effecting the prior mortgage is registered, be postponed to the prior mortgage in respect of all advances or debts not exceeding the maximum, though made or allowed with notice of the subsequent mortgage.

Illustration.

A mortgages Sultánpur to his bankers, B & Co., to secure the balance of his account with them to the extent of Rs. 10,000. A then mortgages Sultánpur to C, to secure Rs. 10,000, and gives notice thereof to B & Co. At the date of the second mortgage, the balance due to B & Co. does not exceed Rs. 5,000. B & Co. subsequently advance to A sums making the balance of the account against him exceed the sum of Rs. 10,000. B & Co. are entitled, to the extent of Rs. 10,000, to priority over C.

48. No mortgagee paying off a prior mortgage, whether with or without notice of an intermediate mortgage, shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his original security. And, except in the case provided for by section forty-seven, no mortgagee making a subsequent advance to the mortgagor, whether with or without notice of an intermediate mortgage, shall thereby acquire any priority in respect of his security for such subsequent advance.

49. Any second or other subsequent mortgagee may, at any time before a sale of the mortgaged property has taken place under this chapter, tender to the next prior mortgagee the amount due to him on account of his mortgage. Such mortgagee is bound to accept such tender and to give a receipt for the sum due, and on such receipt being registered, the person making the tender shall acquire, in respect of the property, all the rights and powers of the mortgagee to whom he has made such tender.

50. If the owner of two properties mortgages them both to one person and then mortgages one of the properties to another person without actual knowledge of the former mortgage, the second mortgagee is entitled to have the debt of the first mortgagee satisfied out of the property not mortgaged to the second mortgagee, so far as such property will extend; but not so as to prejudice the rights of the first mortgagee or of any other person having an incumbrance on either property.

51. Where several properties, whether of one or several owners, are mortgaged to secure one debt, the several properties shall contribute rateably to the debt secured by the mortgage, after deducting from the value of each property the amount of any other incumbrance to which it is subject.

Where of two properties belonging to the same owner, one is mortgaged to secure one debt, and then both are mortgaged to secure another debt, and the former debt is paid out of the former property, each property shall contribute rateably to the latter debt, after deducting the amount of the former debt from the value of the property of which it has been paid.

Nothing in this section applies to a property liable under section fifty to the claim of the second mortgagee.

Suits for Redemption, Foreclosure or Sale.

52. Subject to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, section 467, all persons having an interest either in the right of redemption or in the security ought to be joined as parties to any suit under section twenty-eight, thirty-four, and the first or any subsequent mortgagee who institutes a suit for foreclosure or sale ought to make every mortgagee and other incumbrancer whose security is subsequent to his own, a party to the suit.

Foreclosure and Sale.

53. In a suit for foreclosure, or foreclosure or sale, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a decree, ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the plaintiff for principal and interest on the mortgage and for his costs of the suit, on the day next hereinafter referred to, or declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree, and ordering that, upon the defendant paying to the plaintiff or into court the amount so due, on a day within six months from the date of declaring in court the amount so due, to be fixed by the court, the plaintiff shall deliver up to the court, the defendant, or to such person as he appoints, all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall transfer the mortgaged property to the defendant free from all incumbrances created by the plaintiff or any person claiming under him, or, where the plaintiff claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims; and shall, if necessary, put the defendant into possession of the mortgaged property; but that, if such payment is not made on or before such day, the defendant shall be absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem such property.

54. If payment is so made of such amount and of such subsequent costs as are mentioned in section sixty-four, the defendant shall (if necessary) be put into possession of the mortgaged property.

If such payment is not so made, the plaintiff may apply to the Court for an order absolute for the foreclosure of the said mortgage, and the Court shall then pass an order absolute that the defendant to be foreclosed of all right to redeem the mortgaged property, and may, if necessary, deliver possession of the property to the plaintiff; and thereupon the defendant's right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished.

Provided that the Court may, upon good cause shewn, from time to time postpone the day appointed for such payment.

In the Code of Civil Procedure, Schedule IV, No. 129, for the words "Final Decree", the words "Order absolute" shall be substituted.

55. In a suit for a sale under this chapter, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall, and in any other suit an auditor of the mortgagor who has in a the administration of his estate obtained the sale of the mortgaged property.

62. If the mortgagee fail to perform any of the duties imposed upon him by section forty-two, he may, when accounts are taken in pursuance of a decree made under this chapter, be debited with the loss, if any, occasioned by such failure.

Costs.

63. The mortgagee is ordinarily entitled to receive or add to his debt his costs properly incurred of any suit under this chapter.

Costs of mortgagee.

But such costs, or any part thereof, may be disallowed if the mortgagor has paid or tendered to the mortgagee, or has deposited in court, the whole amount due to him under the mortgage, and if the mortgagee has unreasonably refused to accept such tender or to take such money out of court in discharge of his claim, or if he has prevented a mortgagor willing and able to make such payment, tender or deposit from making it by refusing or neglecting to give him proper information as to the state of the accounts required to be kept under section forty-two.

64. In finally adjusting the amount to be paid to a mortgagee in case of a redemption or a sale by the Court under this chapter, the Court shall, unless the conduct of the mortgagee has been such as to disentitle him to costs, add to the principal debt such costs of suit as have been properly incurred by him since the decree of foreclosure, redemption or sale up to the time of actual payment.

Costs of mortgagee subsequent to decree.

Sale of Property subject to prior mortgage

65. If any property the sale of which is directed under this chapter is subject to a prior mortgage, the Court may, with the consent of the prior mortgagee, order that the property be sold free from the same, giving to such prior mortgagee the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold.

66. Such proceeds shall be brought into Court and applied as follows first, in payment of all expenses incident to the sale or properly incurred in any attempted sale;

secondly, if the property has been sold free from any prior mortgage, in payment of whatever is due on account of such mortgage;

thirdly, in payment of all interest due on account of the mortgage in consequence whereof the sale was directed, and of the costs of the suit in which the decree directing the sale was made;

fourthly, in payment of all principal moneys due on account of that mortgage; and

fifthly, the residue (if any) shall be paid to the person proving himself to be interested in the property sold, or if there be more such persons than one, then to such persons according to their respective interests therein or upon their joint receipt.

67. If property subject to a mortgage, or the right to receive mortgage-money, be transferred to a third person, the transferee has all the rights and powers of his transferor, under the mortgage, and is subject to the liabilities existing between his transferor and the mortgagor or mortgagee, as the case may be.

Where such a transfer is made for the purpose of securing money advanced or to be advanced by way of loan or an existing or future debt, the original mortgage-debt, if recovered by either the transferor or the transferee, is applicable, first, in payment of the costs of such recovery, secondly, in or towards satisfaction of the amount for the time being secured by the transfer; and the residue, if any, belongs to the transferor.

Charges.

68. If by any assurance other than a mortgage-deed, or by any will, or under the provisions of this or any other Act, or by operation of law, certain immoveable property of one person is made security for the payment of certain money to another, the latter person is said to have a charge on the property, and all the provisions hereinbefore applied to a mortgagor shall apply to the owner of such property, and all the provisions hereinbefore applied to a mortgagee instituting a suit for the sale of the mortgaged property shall apply to the person having such charge.

Charges.

69. Where a person is or becomes absolutely entitled to immoveable property, of a charge or other incumbrance on which he is also the owner, the charge or incumbrance shall be extinguished, unless by an instrument in writing registered he expressly declares that it shall be kept on foot.

Merger of charges.

CHAPTER VI.

OF LEASES OF IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

70. A person proposing to let immoveable property need not disclose defects therein which the lessee might with ordinary care discover; but the proposing lessor must not conceal, or attempt to conceal, such defects, and he must disclose to the lessee all other defects therein of which the former is, and the latter is not, aware.

When the proposing lessee stands, or has stood, as regards the property, in a fiduciary relation to the lessor, he must disclose to the lessor any fact which increases the value of the property itself, and of which the former has, during the existence of such relation, become aware. Save as aforesaid, a person proposing to take a lease of immoveable property need not disclose any fact unknown to the lessor which increases such value.

71. In the absence of a contract in writing or local usage to the contrary, the lessor and the lessee, as against one another, respectively, possess the rights and are subject to the liabilities mentioned in the eighteen rules next following, or such of them as are applicable to the property leased:—

(a.) The lessor is bound to put the lessee in possession of the property leased:

(b.) The lessor shall be deemed to contract with the lessee that the latter paying the rent reserved by the lease and performing the contracts by the lessee may hold the property leased during the time limited by the lease without interruption by the lessor or his assigns, or any person lawfully claiming through him or them:

(c.) In the absence of fraud, concealment or misrepresentation, the lessor is not answerable for any defect in the property leased which the lessee could not with ordinary care have discovered:

(d.) During the continuance of the lease, the lessee is entitled to the enjoyment of all easements appendant to the property leased at the time when the lease was made until such easements are extinguished:

(e.) The lessee is bound to keep, and on the termination of the lease to restore, the property leased in as good condition as it was in at the time when he was put in possession, subject only to reasonable wear and tear:

(f.) If by fire, tempest or flood, or violence of an army or of a mob, or other superior force, any part of the property leased be wholly destroyed or rendered substantially unfit for the purposes for which it was let, the lease shall be void as to that part, and any rent or fine payable under the lease shall proportionately abate, and a proportionate part of any fine paid by the lessee shall be returned by the lessor:

If the injury be occasioned by the wrongful act or default of either party, such party shall not be entitled to avail himself of the benefit of this provision:

(g.) In case the lease is rescinded for the default of the lessee, he is bound to pay the rent up to the time of such rescission, and also to make compensation for any other loss resulting from his default; but in estimating such compensation, the Court shall take into account the fine (if any) paid under the lease:

(h.) If the lessor neglects to make, within a reasonable time after notice, repairs which he is bound to make, the lessee may make the same himself, and deduct the expense of such repairs from the rent, or otherwise recover it from the lessor:

(i.) If the lessor neglects to make any payment which he is bound to make, and which, if not made by him, is recoverable from the lessee or against the property leased, the lessee may make such payment himself, and deduct it from his rent, or otherwise recover it from the lessor:

(j.) Every lessee who becomes aware of any proceeding to recover the property leased to him or any part thereof is bound to give notice thereof to the lessor with reasonable diligence; and, in default of so doing, he is liable to make compensation to the lessor for any loss or expenses occasioned by such omission:

(k.) The lessee is bound to give notice to the lessor, within a reasonable time, of any encroachment made upon, or any interference with the lessor's rights concerning, the property leased, which may come to his knowledge; and, in default of so doing, he is liable to make compensation to the lessor for any loss or expenses occasioned by such omission:

(l.) The lessee may use the soil and its products for all purposes of enjoyment as a reasonable owner would use them; but he may not fell timber, pull down or damage houses, open mines, or commit any other waste:

(m.) No lessee of immoveable property shall, without the lessor's consent, erect any permanent structure thereon, except for agricultural purposes; and no such lessee who erects thereon any building, engine or machinery for agricultural purposes shall remove the same without first giving to the lessor or his agent one month's previous notice in writing of his intention so to do, and thereupon the lessor or his agent may elect to purchase the thing so proposed to be removed, and the lessee's right to remove the same shall thereby cease, and the same shall belong to the lessor, and the value thereof shall in case of dispute be ascertained and determined by two referees, one to be chosen by each party, or by an umpire to be named by such referees, and shall be paid or allowed in account by the lessor:

(n.) Subject to the provisions of clause (m), the lessee has a right to remove at any time during his possession of the property leased, all things which he has affixed to the soil: but he is liable to make compensation to the lessor for all damage caused to the property by such removal:

(o.) On the determination of the lease, the lessee is bound to put the lessor into possession of the property leased:

(p.) When a lease of uncertain duration determines by any means except the fault of the lessee, he or his legal representative is entitled to all the crops planted or sown by the lessee and growing upon the land for the season current when the lease determines, and to free ingress and egress to reap and carry them:

(q.) If the lessor transfers the property leased, or any part thereof, or any part of his interest therein, the transferee shall possess all the rights and, if the lessee so elects, be subject to all the liabilities, of the lessor as to the property or part transferred so long as he is the owner of it; but the lessor shall not by reason only of such transfer cease to be subject to any of the liabilities imposed upon him by the lease, unless the lessee elects to treat the transferee as the person liable to him: Provided that, if the lessee pay rent to the lessor without having reason to believe that such transfer has been made, he shall not be liable to pay such rent over again to the transferee:

Where only a part of the property leased is transferred by the lessor, he may determine what proportion of the rent reserved by the lease is payable in respect of the part so transferred:

(r.) The lessee may transfer, absolutely or by way of mortgage, the whole or any part of his interest in the property, and any transferee of such interest or part may again transfer it. The lessee shall not, by reason of such transfer, cease to be subject to any of the liabilities attaching to the lease, unless the lessor elects to treat the transferee as the person subject to such liabilities. Subject as aforesaid, each successive transferee, so long as he is entitled to the property leased, possesses all the rights, and is subject to all the liabilities, of the lessee.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise a tenant having a right of occupancy to assign his interest as such.

72. A tenancy begins when the lessee enters, under the lease, into possession of the property leased, and until he so enters, he cannot sue for compensation for a trespass thereon.

73. When the lessee is declared an insolvent, the receiver of his property appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure, section 351, may, with the leave of the Court, by writing under his hand, disclaim the property leased, and thereupon the lease shall be deemed to be surrendered from the date of the declaration, and the Court may order the property to be delivered up to the lessor or make such other order as to the possession thereof as may be just:

Provided that the receiver shall not disclaim such property in cases where an application in writing has been made to him by any person interested therein, requiring him to decide whether he will disclaim or not, and the receiver has for a period of not less than twenty-eight days after the receipt of such application, or such further time as may be allowed by the Court, declined or neglected to give notice whether he disclaims the property or not.

On the application of any person interested in the property, the Court may direct possession thereof to be delivered to him, or make such other order as to possession thereof as may be just.

Any person injured by the operation of this section shall be deemed to be a creditor of the insolvent to the extent of such injury, and may accordingly prove the same as a debt under the insolvency.

74. In the absence of a contract in writing or Duration of certain leases in absence of written contract or local usage.

local usage to the contrary, a lease of property for purposes of cultivation shall be a lease from year to year terminable by six months' notice expiring with the end of a year of the tenancy; and a lease of property for any other purpose shall be a lease from month to month, terminable by fifteen days' notice expiring with the end of a month of the tenancy.

Every notice under this section must be in writing signed by or on behalf of the party giving it and tendered or delivered to the party who is intended to be bound by it, or affixed on a conspicuous part of the property.

75. Where the time limited by a lease is expressed as commencing from a particular day, in computing that time such day shall be excluded. Where no day of commencement is named, the time so limited begins from the making of the lease.

Exclusion of day on which term commences.

Where the time so limited is a year or a number of years, in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary, the lease shall last during the whole anniversary of the day from which such time commences.

Where the time so limited is expressed to be determinable before its expiration at the option of the parties or one of them, the lessee, in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary, shall have such option.

Option to determine lease.

the lessee, in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary, shall have such option.

Determination of lease.

76. A lease determines—

- (a) by efflux of the time limited thereby;
- (b) by rescission;
- (c) by surrender in express terms;
- (d) by surrender by operation of law, that is to say, in case the lessee accepts from the lessor a new lease of the property leased, to take effect during the continuance of the existing lease;
- (e) by forfeiture, that is to say, (1) in case the lessee breaks an express condition which provides that, on breach thereof, the lessor may re-enter, or the lease shall become void; or (2) in case the lessee renounces his character as such either by setting up a title in a third person or by claiming title in himself;
- (f) on the expiration of a notice to quit duly given to the lessee.

• 77. A forfeiture or notice under section seventy-six clause (e) or (f), is waived by receipt of rent which has become due since the breach or the expiration of the notice, or by distress for such rent, or by any other act on the part of the lessor showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting.

Where a lease has determined by forfeiture for non-payment of rent and the lessor sues to eject the lessee, if, at the hearing of the suit, the lessee pays or tenders to the lessor the rent in arrear, together with interest thereon and his full costs of the suit, or gives such security as the Court thinks sufficient for making such payment within fifteen days, the Court may, in lieu of making a decree for ejectment, pass an order relieving the lessee against the forfeiture; and thereupon the lessee shall hold the property leased as if the forfeiture had not occurred.

Nothing in this section applies to suits under Act No. X of 1859, or Bengal Act No. VIII of 1869.

78. If a lessee or sub-lessee of property remains Effect of holding over.

in possession thereof after the determination of the lease, and the lessor or his legal representative accepts rent from the lessee or sub-lessee, or otherwise assents to his continuing in possession, the lease is, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, renewed from year to year or from month to month, according to the purpose for which the property is leased, as specified in section seventy-four.

Illustrations.

(a.) A lets a house to B for five years. B sub-lets the house to C at a monthly rent of Rs. 100. The five years expire, but C continues in possession of the house and pays the rent to A. C's lease is renewed from month to month.

(b.) A lets a farm to B for the life of C. C dies, but B continues in possession with A's assent. B's lease is renewed from year to year.

CHAPTER VII.

OF SETTLEMENTS.

79. "Settlement" means, in this chapter, any disposition in writing of moveable or immovable property—

- (a) which is not testamentary, and is not founded on any consideration, or
- (b) which is made in consideration of marriage, or
- (c) which is made for the purpose of dividing property of the settlor among his family or those for whom he desires to provide, but does not include a gift made by a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist.

80. A settlement, whether made for a consideration or not, is binding on the settlor and those claiming under him.

81. A settlement made for the purpose of depriving present or future creditors or other persons of their demands against the settlor, is void against all present and future creditors of the settlor and their successors in interest, and against any person upon whom his property devolves in trust for the benefit of his creditors.

Nothing in this section affects the rights of persons who have acquired, in good faith and for consideration, any interest under the settlement.

82. A condition or limitation in a settlement or will, restraining any person from parting with or disposing of his interest, is void :

Condition restraining alienation of interest.

provided that property may be settled or bequeathed for the benefit of a married woman who is not a Hindú, Muhammadan or Buddhist, so that she shall not have power to deprive herself of the income thereof in anticipation.

83. A condition or limitation contained in a settlement or will, making an interest thereby reserved or given to or in trust for any person to cease on his becoming insolvent, or endeavouring to transfer or dispose of the same, is void.

84. If, by a settlement, property be given to a person then living in general terms, without indicating the time when it is to be paid or delivered, such person has a vested interest therein from the day of the execution of the settlement, and if he dies without having received it, it shall (subject to any legal disposition thereof which he may have made) pass to his legal representative.

85. Where, by the terms of a settlement, property is given to a person not in existence, but he is not entitled to possession of it immediately upon his birth, a right to receive it at the proper time shall, unless a contrary intention appears by the settlement, become vested in such person upon his birth, and shall (subject to any legal disposition thereof which he may have made) pass to his legal representative if he dies before that time, and without having received it. And in such cases it is from his birth said to be vested in interest.

86. The provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, sections 100 to 104, both inclusive, 107 and 108, 111 to 127, both inclusive, and 167, shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to gifts contained in settlements.

87. Whenever a person becomes entitled in possession, by virtue of a settlement, to money or any other property yielding income, he shall be entitled to receive the interest or income thereof from that time.

CHAPTER. VIII.

OF THE DISCRETION OF THE COURTS TO DEAL WITH SETTLED LAND.

88. If any person having, under a settlement or will, a limited interest in possession in any land, apply under this section to the High Court within the limits of whose appellate civil jurisdiction such land or any part thereof is situate, the Court may, if it deem it just and expedient to do so,—

(a) make such leases of the whole or any part of the land for such terms of years, for such rents, with such powers, and with such conditions, reservations and exceptions as the Court thinks fit;

(b) make such sales of the whole or any part of the land, for such sums, payable either at once or periodically, with such powers, and with such conditions, reservations and exceptions as the Court thinks fit;

(c) appropriate any part of the land for the formation of streets, roads, gardens or other open spaces, tanks, sewers, drains or water-courses, and authorize the erection of buildings and works thereon;

and generally deal with the land in any way the Court may think just and beneficial to the persons interested therein

89. Every such application shall be in writing, and notice thereof shall be served through the Court on all trustees under the settlement or will, and on any other persons who in the opinion of the Court ought to be so served, and shall be published in such newspapers as the Court may direct.

90. The Court shall permit any person interested in the land, and may in its discretion permit any other person, to appear and be heard in opposition to, or in support of, any such application, on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

91. The Court may order the costs of all or any parties to any such application to be paid out of any principal money receivable on account of any dealing with the land which is the subject of the application, or to be a charge on such land or on any other land belonging to the same owners

92. Every lease made under section eighty-eight shall take effect in possession; and on every such lease shall be reserved the best rent that can be reasonably obtained, to be made payable half-yearly or oftener without taking any fine other benefit in the nature of a fine.

93. All or any part of the proceeds of any lease, sale or disposition under section eighty-eight may, if the Court think fit, be paid into court.

94. The Court shall declare what parts of such proceeds so received shall be considered as income, and may direct the same to be paid to the person for the time being entitled in possession to the land dealt with; and the residue of such money shall be applied as the Court shall direct in one or more of the manners following:—

(a) the payment of the amount due in respect of any charge on the land dealt with;

(b) the purchase of other property or the investment in securities for the benefit of the persons interested in the land dealt with;

(c) the payment to any person becoming absolutely entitled to the land dealt with.

EXPLANATION.—In this section the term “securities” means

(d) promissory notes, debentures, stock and other securities of the Government of India;

(e) bonds, debentures and annuities charged by the Imperial Parliament on the revenues of India;

(f) stock or debentures of, or shares in, Railway or other companies, the interest whereon has been guaranteed by the Government of India; and

(g) debentures or other securities for money issued by or on behalf of any municipal body under the authority of any Act of an Indian legislature.

CHAPTER IX.

OF GIFTS FOR RELIGIOUS AND CHARITABLE PURPOSES.

95. No person having a nephew or niece, or any nearer relative, shall have power to give any immovable property to religious or charitable uses, unless by an assurance executed not less than twelve months before his death, and registered.

96. Subject to the provisions of the last preceding section, immovable property may be assured in perpetuity for the benefit of the public in the advancement of religion, knowledge, commerce, health, safety or any other object beneficial to mankind. Provided that notice of such assurance shall be given, as soon as may be after its execution, to the Local Government and that no such assurance shall take effect until it has been sanctioned by some public authority to be designated by the Local Government by notification in the official Gazette.

The grant or refusal of such sanction may be notified by an entry in the book in which the assurance is registered, and the registering officer shall make such entry on receiving from the public authority aforesaid a written order in this behalf.

If no such order is made within two years next after the time when the property becomes applicable for the benefit of the public, it shall be deemed that sanction has been granted.

If such sanction is refused, the property shall devolve as if no such assurance had been made.

CHAPTER X.

OF CERTAIN RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF OWNERS OF LIMITED INTERESTS.

97. A person having a limited interest in any immovable property is not, as such, entitled to do or omit any act the doing or omitting of which is destructive or permanently injurious to such property.

EXPLANATION.—No act done in the reasonable use and enjoyment of property is destructive or injurious within the meaning of this section, though it may exhaust the substance of the property.

Illustrations.

(a). A is a tenant for life of land on which a dwelling-house stands. He is not entitled, as such, to pull down the house. Nor must he suffer it to fall for want of necessary repairs.

(b). A is tenant for life of land in which coal lies. He is entitled, as such, to work and use the coal.

(c). A is tenant for life of land planted with trees. He is entitled as such to cut the trees at maturity, but is not entitled, as such, to cut them when immature, except for the purpose of thinning out or otherwise benefiting the plantation.

Save as aforesaid, such person or his legal representative has the same right as a lessee to remove, during the continuance of such interest or within a reasonable time afterwards, all things which he has affixed to the soil in which he had such limited interest, and all crops growing upon the land for the season current when such limited interest determines.

98. A person having a limited interest in possession in any immovable property, is bound to discharge all taxes and other public periodical charges to which such property is liable and, to the extent of the rents and profits of the property which without his wilful default he might have received, all periodical payments accruing due on account of any mortgage or charge thereon taking effect during the continuance of his interest in priority to such interest.

99. Every advantage or increase of value accruing (accidentally or through the exertions of any one having a limited interest) to any immovable property in which successive interests exist, belongs, in the absence of any personal law to the contrary, to all the persons having any interest in the property, in the same shares and manner as they are entitled to the property.

100. Any person claiming any immovable property after the death of any minor, married woman or other person, and having reason to believe that such minor, married woman or other person is dead, and that his or her death is concealed by his or her guardian, husband or any other person, may once a year move the High Court to order the person concealing or suspected to conceal such person to produce him or her at such time and place, and before such persons (if any), as the Court may direct. And the High Court, if it think fit, shall make such order, and in case of disobedience thereto by the person in possession of the property, the person so claiming the same may, by order of the Court, enter thereon and receive the profits thereof as if the person so concealed or suspected to be concealed were dead.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize the High Court to compel the production in court of women who, according to the customs and manners of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear in public.

101. Nothing in this chapter applies to mortgagees or

CHAPTER XI.

OF POWERS.

102. A person may be authorized to determine, with or without the consent of others, the disposition of property otherwise than by virtue of his ownership. A person so authorized is said to have power to appoint such property.

The person who gives the power is called the donor, the person to whom the power is given is called the donee, and the persons for whose benefit the power is to be exercised are called the objects of the power. A person to whom any property is appointed is called an appointee.

Illustrations.

(a). A grants land to B for B's life, with remainder to such of B's children as B shall appoint. B appoints to C and D, two of his children, in equal shares. A is the donor of the power, B the donee, B's children the objects, and C and D the appointees.

(b). A, the absolute owner of certain land, grants it to B to such uses as C, with the consent of D, shall by assurance appoint. C with D's consent appoints part of the land to E absolutely, and the rest to F for seven years. Here C is the donee and also the object of the power, and E and F are the appointees.

A power authorising the donee to appoint to whomsoever and for whatsoever interest he pleases, is called a general power.

A power restricted in respect either of its objects or the interests that may be conferred under it, is called a special power.

Where the donee has neither a present nor a future interest in the property, the power is called a collateral power.

Rules as to all Powers.

103. Where a power is vested in several donees, all who are living must unite in its execution; but in case any one or more of them die during the continuance of the power, it may be exercised by the survivors or the survivor, unless a contrary intention appears by the instrument creating the power.

104. The donor may direct that the power shall be exercised by will only, or by non-testamentary instrument only.

If he directs that the power shall be exercised by will only, it must be exercised by will duly executed according to the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, or according to such other law as at the time of the execution of the power may be applicable to a will executed by the donee.

If he directs that the power shall be exercised by non-testamentary instrument only, it must be exercised by such an instrument and registered.

If he imposes no such restriction on the exercise of the power, it may be exercised either by such will or by such assurance as lastly hereinbefore mentioned.

105. When the power is not properly exercised, no Court shall in any case compel the person in possession of the property to which the power relates to deliver the property as if the power had been properly exercised, or shall otherwise aid the defective execution, except as provided in the Specific Relief Act, 1877, chapter three.

106. All appointments made in the manner directed by section one hundred and four shall be deemed to be executed and attested in proper form, notwithstanding that some other mode of execution or attestation has been proscribed by the donor.

107. An appointment made by will may be revoked by a subsequent will; but it is not revoked by mere general words of revocation of all former wills, without a new appointment.

An appointment made by a non-testamentary instrument is irrevocable except where power to revoke the appointment is expressly reserved by such instrument.

108. A power exercisable by will only cannot be delegated.

A special power involving the exercise of personal discretion by the donee cannot be delegated.

A power to do an act merely ministerial and involving no personal discretion may be delegated.

Illustrations.

(a). A has power under a settlement to dispose of an estate in such proportions as he thinks fit among the issue of his marriage with B. A by his will purports to delegate this power to B, to exercise as she thinks fit. The attempted delegation is void, and the dispositions, if any, in default of appointment take effect.

(b). A, the donee of a power to appoint to his children, determines to exercise it in favour of the objects equally. With this view he causes an instrument of appointment to be prepared. A may appoint an attorney to execute this instrument.

109. Where a power is to be exercised with the concurrence where consent of several persons, power is to be exercised with consent of several persons. all who are living must concur in the consent, but in case any one or more of them die during the continuance of the power, the consent of the survivors or the survivor is sufficient, unless a contrary intention appears by the instrument creating the power.

Consent to the exercise of a power must be given during the donee's lifetime by a non-testamentary instrument registered.

Consent to the exercise of a power need not be given by the instrument by which the power is exercised, but if it is given by a different instrument, such instrument must be executed at a time not later than the time at which the donee of the power executes the instrument by which he exercises the power.

110. If a person disposes of property in such manner as is authorized by a power vested in him, such disposition shall take effect under the power, notwithstanding that the power is not mentioned or referred to in the instrument of disposition.

Illustration.

Land is settled upon A for life with a special power to charge, by a non-testamentary instrument, portions in favour of his children. Subsequently, a general power to dispose of the land by any instrument is vested in A. He executes an assurance, by which he directs that a sum of money shall be raised out of the land and settled on his son B for life, with remainder to B's wife and children. Such an appointment cannot take effect under the special power, but may be treated as a valid exercise of the general power.

111. The donee of a power need not exercise it entirely and at once by a single instrument, but he may from time to time exercise any unexhausted part thereof at his discretion.

If the donee has purported to exercise his power in such a manner that his appointment is void, the power is, to that extent, unexhausted.

Illustrations.

(a). A has a general power. He may appoint the property at one time to B for his life and at another to C absolutely.

(b). Trustees under a settlement, having power to lend Rs. 10,000 to A, the tenant for life, lend the money accordingly. A repays it. The trustees may again lend Rs. 10,000 to A.

(c). A has power to raise Rs. 10,000 by sale or mortgage of Sultānpur. A exercises the power by mortgaging Sultānpur. He may afterwards exercise the power by selling Sultānpur in order to pay off the mortgage.

112. Where a power given by any instrument is Disposition intended to take effect after interests appointed under void power.

void in its creation, no disposition or gift made by the same instrument shall be deemed void merely because it is intended to take effect after the interests to be appointed under the power or in default of any such appointment.

Illustration.

A marriage-settlement provides that the settled property shall belong to the husband and wife successively for their lives; that after the death of the survivor of them, it shall go to such of the children of the marriage, and in such shares, as the husband and wife shall jointly appoint, the interest of each such child to become vested in him on his attaining the age of twenty-five years; and that in the event of there being no child of the marriage who shall attain that age, or in default of appointment, the property shall belong to the husband or his legal representative.

Here the power to appoint the property is, under section eighty-six, void in its creation; but the ultimate interest given to the husband takes effect.

*General Powers.113. If the donor confers on the donee a general Effect of general power, the donee shall, so far as regards his power of disposition, his creditors and all persons who contract with him for lawful consideration to obtain any interest in the property comprised in the power, be deemed to be the absolute owner of such property for such interest therein as the donor could dispose of.

This rule is to take effect notwithstanding that the donor has prescribed some particular method for executing the power.

Illustrations.

(a). A, the absolute owner of land, settles it on B for life with remainder to such purposes as B—

- shall appoint, or
- shall by deed appoint, or
- shall by will appoint, or
- shall by deed or will appoint,

and, in case B dies without making any such appointment, on C absolutely.

If B—

- grants the land by assurance, or
- bequeathes it, or
- contracts to sell it, or
- incurs debt,

the property is liable, in the hands of either B or C, as the case may be, to the claims of B's grantee, legatee, purchaser or creditors, as the case may be.

If B dies having made no disposition of the property, C is entitled to it, subject to any claims which B's creditors may establish against it.

(b). A confers on B a general power, exercisable by a non-testamentary instrument, to appoint certain land. B appoints the land to certain persons in such shares as C shall fix. This appointment is valid.

114. If the donor confers on the donee a general

Effect of general power without disposition of property in case of non-appointment.

power, and makes no disposition of the property in the event of non-appointment, the donee shall be considered as the absolute owner of the property or such interest therein as the donor could dispose of.

Illustration.

A, the absolute owner of property, settles it on B for life with remainder to such purposes as B shall appoint, and makes no gift over in default of appointment. B dies without making any disposition of the property. The property vests in the representatives of B, and does not revert to A or his representatives.

Special Powers.

115. If the donee has only a special power, he Interest conferrible by donee of special power. cannot confer any interest in the property comprised therein which could not have been conferred by the donor at the time of the creation of the power.

Illustrations.

(a). A settles a fund upon B for life with remainder to such purposes as B shall appoint. After the settlement is made C is born. B then appoints the fund to C for life with remainder to C's children absolutely. The appointment is valid, though C has no children at the time.

(b). A settles a fund upon B for life with remainder to his children as he shall appoint. At the date of the settlement B has no child, but afterwards has a son C. B then appoints to C for his life, with remainder to his children. Such interest could not have been conferred by A, and B's appointment is void.

116. Where the donee of a special power purports, in exercise of the power, to appoint to objects authorized by the power and also to objects not so authorized, the appointment in favour of the authorized objects shall take effect if their interests are independent of those of the unauthorized objects:

Illustration.

Property is settled on A for life, and after his death on such of his children, as he shall appoint, and in default of appointment to all A's children equally. A appoints that the property shall go after his death to his widow for her life, and after her death to two of his sons, C and D, in equal shares. There are five children of A. The appointment in favour of A's widow is invalid, and the rents and profits of the property during her life will go to all the five children in equal shares, but after her death to C and D absolutely.

117. Where the donee of a special power purports, in exercise of the power to confer a larger interest than is authorized thereby, such appointment shall, if the appointee so elect, be void only for the excess, and good for the residue, if they can be separated.

Illustrations.

(a). A has a life-interest in Rāmnagar, with power to grant leases thereof for 30 years. A makes a lease of Rāmnagar for 50 years. Such lease is good for 30 years only.

(b). A having a life-interest in Rāmnagar and Sultānjar, with power to grant leases of Rāmnagar for 21 years, grants a lease comprising both Rāmnagar and Sultānjar for 21 years. After A's death the lessee may, if he thinks fit, elect to retain the lease as a lease of Rāmnagar only, till the end of the 21 years.

(c). A having power to charge Rāmnagar with Rs. 7,000 charges it with Rs. 8,000. The appointment is good for the Rs. 7,000, but not for the residue.

118. Where, by an appointment under a special power, interests authorized and also interests unauthorized are created, and the interests authorized cannot be distinguished from those unauthorized, the whole is void.

Illustrations.

(a). A fund is settled on A during his life, and after his death on his children as he shall appoint. A appoints the annual income for the benefit of his son B and B's wife and children, in such manner as trustees shall think fit. The appointment is wholly void.

(b). Under a similar settlement, A having legitimate children by B, his wife, and others by C and D, his concubines, appoints the property to be divided among his children by B, C and D, the shares of the sons to be double those of the daughters. Here the interests authorized and unauthorized cannot be distinguished, and the appointment is wholly void.

119. When a person exercising a special power annexes to the gift a condition or qualification which is not authorized by the power, the gift is good and the condition or qualification only is void.

Appointment with unauthorized condition.

Illustrations.

(a). A, having a power to appoint a fund among his children, gives a part of it to his son B on condition that B shall settle it on B's children. The condition is void, and the gift is absolute.

(b). A, having a power to appoint a fund to a limited class of objects of whom B is one, appoints it to B, adding a condition that B shall release a debt owing to him by A, and also pay Rs. 1,000 to C. The appointment is good; but the condition is void.

120. Where the donee of a special power purports, in exercise of the power, to appoint to persons not objects of the power, and by the same instrument gives to the persons entitled, in default of appointment, to the property comprised in the power benefits out of other property, the persons so entitled shall elect either to confirm such appointment or to dissent from it, and in the latter case they shall relinquish the benefits so given to them.

The rules contained in the Indian Succession Act, 1865, sections 173 to 177, both inclusive, shall, mutatis mutandis, apply to elections under this section.

121. If a beneficial interest in immoveable property, and also a power to let it, are given to the same person, and he grants his interest in the property, he may enter into a contract not to exercise his power.

Contract not to exercise power of leasing.

122. Save as provided by section one hundred and twenty-one, an agreement or undertaking not to exercise power. a power which is given for the benefit of persons other than the donee is void.

123. Where a power given for the benefit of Frauds on powers.

persons other than the donee is exercised with a view to the benefit, direct or indirect, of the donee, in any mode not intended by the donor, the appointment is void.

Illustrations.

(a). A, having power to appoint a fund in favour of any of her children, appoints the whole fund absolutely to one child, who has previously entered into an agreement with her to give one-half of the fund to A's husband absolutely. The appointment is void.

(b). A, having power to appoint a fund in favour of any of his children, appoints a portion of the fund to his son C, a minor, whom he knows to be suffering from a mortal disease; A being the person entitled to C's property in the event of his death. The appointment is void.

(c). A, having power to grant leases of certain settled land, exercises the power in favour of B in consideration of Rs. 1,000 paid to A by B as a fine or premium. The lease is void, and A holds the Rs. 1,000 in trust for the persons interested under the settlement.

124. If the instrument by which a power of appointment in favour of specified objects is created does not provide for the event of no appointment being made, the property belongs (subject to any appointment that may have been made) in equal shares to the said objects.

Right to property in default of appointment,

Illustration.

A settles property on B for life with remainder to B's children as he shall appoint, and makes no disposition in default of appointment. B has two children, C and D, and appoints Rs. 1,000, part of the property, to C. Then C dies. Then B dies without making any further appointment. After paying Rs. 1,000 to C or his representative, the residue of the property is divisible in equal moieties between D and the representative of C.

125. Where there is a power of appointment in favour of a certain class of objects, and there is also a disposition of the property comprised in the power in the event of there being no objects, if the power is not exercised and there are objects, the property belongs to them in equal shares.

126. Under a power of appointment in favour of several objects, an appointment of the whole property to one or more of such objects exclusively of the others is valid:

Provided that, where the assurance creating the power declares the minimum amount or value of the share from which no object of the power is to be excluded, the appointment shall be invalid so far as it excludes any such object from any such share, and no further.

127. Interests authorized to be created under a power take effect when created as if they had been created by the original instrument conferring the power, unless where a contrary intention is expressed therein.

128. A power given to the owner of a limited interest in the property comprised in the power is extinguished when he becomes the absolute owner of such property.

When the exercise of a power given to the owner of a limited interest in property would derogate from a previous grant of such interest by the donee, the power shall be deemed to have been extinguished by such grant.

Illustrations.

(a). Z, tenant for life of certain land with power to charge it with a jointure for his wife, becomes absolute owner of the land. The power is extinguished.

(b). A, tenant for life of certain land with power to grant leases thereof in possession, grants his life-interest in the land to B. The power is extinguished.

CHAPTER XII.

OF PROPERTY HELD BY SEVERAL PERSONS.

129. On the death of one of two or more persons entitled to property in their own right, his share shall become vested in his legal representative, unless the property is held under an instrument which expressly provides that on the death of one, his share shall accrue to the survivor or survivors.

Nothing in this section applies to property belonging to an undivided family.

Illustration.

A and B jointly advance money on mortgage, A contributing one-third. A dies intestate. A's third belongs to his legal representative.

130. When immoveable property is held in possession by co-owners, any one of them may institute a suit in the proper Court, and such Court may direct a partition of the property to be made among the co-owners, and for the purposes of partition may, in order to equalise the value of the shares, direct any money to be paid by one to another or to be charged on one share in favour of another.

If it appear to the Court that a sale of the Power to direct sale of the property and a distribution of the proceeds would be more beneficial for the persons interested than a division of the property between them, the Court may, on the application of any such person, direct a sale of the property.

Nothing in the second clause of this section shall be deemed to authorise the Court to direct a sale of the property of an undivided family.

131. On any sale under the last preceding section, the Court may, if it think fit, allow any of the persons interested in the property to bid at the sale, on such terms as to setting-off or accounting for the purchase-money or any part thereof, or as to any other matters, as to the Court seems reasonable.

Power to allow person interested to bid for property sold for purpose of partition.

132. All sums of money paid under the two last preceding sections may, if the Court think fit, be paid into court.

133. Nothing in this chapter shall affect any local law for the time being in force relating to the partition of estates paying revenue to Government.

Saving of laws relating to partition of revenue-paying estates.

134. When undivided immoveable property is held in possession by co-owners and one of them transfers his share or any interest therein, by sale, mortgage or otherwise, the transferee takes the share or interest subject to the right of the other co-owners to enforce a partition of the property; and when such partition is effected, the right of the transferee as such, in the absence of a contract to the contrary by the co-owners, extends only to the share allotted to himself or to his transferor.

135. When one co-owner of immoveable property commits, or threatens to commit, waste on the same without the consent of the other joint-owner, that other may institute a suit to recover compensation for the injury caused to him by the waste, or to obtain an injunction to stay the waste, as the case may require.

Waste by one-co-owner.

CHAPTER XIII.

OF ASSIGNMENTS OF THINGS IN ACTION.

136. No assignment of, or charge on, any debt, or any beneficial interest in moveable property, shall have any operation against the debtor or against the person in whom the property is vested, until express notice of the assignment or charge is given to him, unless he is a party to such assignment or charge; and every dealing by such debtor or person, not being a party to, and not having received express notice of, an assignment or charge, with the debt or property shall be valid as against such assignment or charge.

Illustrations.

(a) A owes money to B, who assigns the debt to C. B then demands the debt from A, who, having no notice of the assignment, pays B. The payment is valid, and C cannot sue A for the debt.

(b) A has jewels deposited with B, a jeweller. A mortgages them to C. A then executes an instrument assigning them to D, who takes it to B and gets the jewels from him before he, B, has received any notice of C's mortgage. B is justified in handing the jewels to D, and C has no remedy against D.

137. Every such notice must be in writing signed by the person making the assignment or charge, or by his agent duly authorized in this behalf.

138. On receiving such notice, the debtor or person in whom the property is vested shall give effect to the assignment or charge, unless where the debtor resides, or the property is situate, in a foreign country and the title of the person in whose favour the assignment or charge is made is not complete according to the law of such country.

139. The person to whom a debt or charge is assigned shall take it subject to all the liabilities to which the assignor was subject in respect thereof at the date of the assignment.

Liability of assignee of thing in action.

Illustration.

(a). A debenture is issued in fraud of a public company to A. A sells and transfers the debenture to B, who has no notice of the fraud. The debenture is invalid in the hands of B.

140. Nothing in this chapter applies to debts secured by negotiable instruments.

Saving of negotiable instruments.

CHAPTER XIV.

OF APPORTIONMENT.

141. All rents, annuities, pensions, dividends and other periodical payments shall, upon the determination by death or otherwise, of the interest of the person entitled to receive such payment, be apportioned as if they had been made to accrue due from day to day, but to be payable on the days appointed for the payment thereof.

Nothing in this section shall affect any express provision in any instrument binding on such person.

THE THIRD SCHEDULE.

DECREE FOR SUCCESSIVE REDEMPTIONS.

(See section 61.)

[A, third mortgagee ... Plaintiff.
B first mortgagee in possession)
C second mortgagee ... } Defendants.]
D owner of right of redemption)

Account of what is due to the defendant B for principal and interest in respect of the said mortgage of 1837, and for costs properly incurred in respect thereof, and tax him his costs of the suit.

Account of the rents and profits of the mortgaged property received by the said defendant B, or by any other person by his order or for his use, or which without his wilful neglect or default might have been received. Let what shall be owing on such last mentioned account be deducted from what shall be found due to the defendant B for principal, interest and costs as aforesaid.

And upon the defendant C paying to the said B the balance which shall be remaining due to him for such principal, interest and costs after such deduction within six months after such balance has been declared in court,

Let the said B assign the mortgaged property free from incumbrances created by him, or any one claiming under him, or those under whom he claims, and deliver upon oath all documents of title in his possession or power relating thereto to the said C, or as he shall appoint.

But in default of the said C paying to the said B such balance by the time aforesaid, let him stand absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem such property.

And in case of such foreclosure, compute for the said B his subsequent interest on his said mortgage and tax him his subsequent costs of the said suit. And upon the plaintiff A paying to the said B what shall be found due to him for principal, interest and costs as aforesaid after such deduction as aforesaid within three months after such amount has been declared in court,

Let the defendant B assign the mortgaged property free from incumbrances, &c. [as above] and deliver upon oath, &c. [as above] to the said A, or as he shall appoint.

But in default of the said A paying to the said B what shall be found due to him as aforesaid by the time aforesaid, let the said A stand absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem such property.

And in case of such foreclosure, compute the said B subsequent interest on his said mortgage and tax him his subsequent costs of the said suit, and upon the said D paying to the said B the amount found due to him for principal, interest and costs as aforesaid, within three months after such amount has been declared in court, let the said B assign the said mortgaged property free from incumbrances, &c. [as above] and deliver upon oath, &c. [as above] to the said D, or as he shall appoint.

But in default of the said D paying to the said B what shall be found due to him as aforesaid by the time aforesaid, let the said D stand absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem such property.

But in case the said C should redeem the said B as aforesaid by the time aforesaid—

Let an account be taken of what is due to the said C for principal and interest in the mortgage of 1841, and for what the said C shall so pay to the said D for principal, interest and costs as aforesaid, and for interest thereon, and also tax the said C his costs of the said suit,

And upon the said A paying to the said C what shall be found due to him for such principal, interest and costs within three months after such amount has been declared in court, let the said C assign the said property free, &c., [as above] and deliver upon oath, &c. [as above] to the said A, or as he shall appoint.

But in default of the said A paying to the said C what shall be found due to him as aforesaid by the time aforesaid, let the said A stand absolutely foreclosed of all right to redeem such property.

And in case of such foreclosure, compute the said C his subsequent interest on his said mortgage and on what he shall have paid to the said B and tax him his subsequent costs of this suit. And upon the said D paying to the said C what shall be found due to him for principal, interest and costs as aforesaid within three months after such amount has been declared in court, let the said C assign, &c. [as above].

But in default of the said D paying to the said C what shall be found due to him as aforesaid by the time aforesaid, let the said D stand absolutely foreclosed, &c. [as above].

But in case the said A shall redeem the said C as aforesaid, let an account be taken of what was due to the said A for principal and interest on the mortgage of 1861 in the plaint mentioned, and for what the said A shall so pay the said C for principal, interest and costs as aforesaid, and for interest thereon, and also tax the said A his costs of the said suit.

And upon the said D paying to the said A what shall be found due to him for such principal, interest and costs as aforesaid, within three months after such amount has been declared in court—

Let the said A assign the said property free, &c. [as above], and deliver upon oath, &c. [as above], to the said D, or as he shall appoint.

But in default of the said D paying to the said A what shall be due to him for such principal, interest and costs by the time aforesaid, the said D is from thenceforth to be absolutely foreclosed, &c. [as above].

D. FITZPATRICK,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

(First Publication.)

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 23rd February 1878, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 3 OF 1878.

A Bill to regulate Ferries in the Panjáb, North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

WHEREAS it is expedient to regulate ferries in the Panjáb, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called “The Northern India Ferries Act, 1878.”

It extends only to the territories respectively administered by the Lieutenant-Governors of the Panjáb and the North-Western Provinces and the Chief Commissioner of Oudh; and

It shall come into force in each of the said territories on such date as the Local Government may by notification in the local official Gazette fix in this behalf.

2. On and from the date on which it shall come into force in the territories respectively administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, Bengal Regulation VI of 1819 shall be repealed therein.

3. In this Act the word “ferry” includes a bridge of boats, pontoons or rafts, and also includes the approaches to, and landing-places of, a ferry.

II.—PUBLIC FERRIES.

4. The Local Government may, from time to time, establish public ferries.

(a) declare what ferries shall be deemed public ferries, and the respective districts in which, for the purposes of this Act, they shall be deemed to be situate;

(b) take possession of a private ferry and declare it to be a public ferry;

(c) establish new public ferries, where, in its opinion, they are needed;

(d) change the course of any public ferry;

(e) discontinue any public ferry which it deems unnecessary.

Every such declaration, establishment, change or discontinuance shall be made by notification in the local official Gazette:

Provided that, when a river lies between two Provinces, the powers conferred by this section shall in respect of such river be exercised by the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India and not otherwise :

Provided also that, when any alteration in the course of a public ferry is rendered necessary by changes in the bed of the river, such alteration may be made by the Commissioner of the Division in which such ferry is situate.

5. Claims for compensation for any loss sustained by any person in consequence of a private ferry being taken possession of under section four shall be enquired into by the Magistrate of the District and submitted for the consideration and orders of the Local Government, and shall not be cognizable by the Civil Courts.

6. The immediate superintendence of all public ferries shall, except as provided in section seven, be vested in the Magistrate of the District in which such ferries are situate, or in such other officer as the Local Government may, from time to time, appoint in this behalf ; and such Magistrate or officer shall make all necessary arrangements for the supply of boats for such ferries, and for the collection of the authorized tolls leviable thereat.

7. The Local Government may direct that any public ferry situated within the limits of a town be managed by the officer or public body charged with the superintendence of the municipal arrangements of such town ;

and may further direct that all or any part of the proceeds from such ferry be paid into the Municipal Fund of such town ;

and thereupon such ferry shall be managed, and such proceeds or part thereof shall be paid, accordingly.

8. The tolls at any public ferry may from time to time be let by public auction for such term not exceeding five years as may be deemed expedient by the Commissioner of the Division in which such ferry is situate, and may be let to the highest bidder.

The lessee shall conform to the rules made under this Act for the management and control of such ferry ; and may be called upon by the officer conducting the auction, to give such security for his good conduct and for the punctual payment of the rent as such officer thinks fit.

Such officer may, for sufficient reason recorded in writing under his hand, refuse to accept the offer of the highest bidder, and may accept any other bid, or may withdraw the tolls from auction.

9. All arrears due by the lessee of a public ferry on account of his lease may be recovered from the lessee or his surety (if any) by the Magistrate of the District in which such ferry is situate, as if they were arrears of land-revenue.

10. The Local Government may cancel the lease of any public ferry, on the expiration of six months' notice to the lessee of its intention to cancel such lease.

When any lease is cancelled under this section, the Magistrate of the District shall pay to the lessee such compensation as he may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, award.

11. Subject to the revision and confirmation of the Local Government, the Commissioner of each Division may from time to time make rules consistent with this Act—for the control and the management of all public ferries within his division ;

for regulating the time and manner at and in which, and the terms on which, the tolls of such ferries may be let by auction ;

for collecting the rents payable for the tolls of such ferries ;

and for fixing the limits of such ferries ;

and, when the tolls of a ferry have been let under section eight, he may from time to time (subject as aforesaid) make additional rules consistent with this Act—

(a) in cases in which the communication is to be established by means of a bridge of boats, pontoons or rafts, for regulating the manner in which such bridge shall be constructed and maintained, and

(b) in cases in which the traffic is conveyed in boats, for regulating (1) the number and kinds of such boats and their dimensions, (2) the number of the crew to be kept by the lessee for each boat, (3) the maintenance of such boats continually in good condition, (4) the hours during which, and the intervals within which, the lessee shall be bound to ply, and (5) the number of passengers, carts, carriages and animals, and the quantity of goods, that may be carried in each kind of boat at one trip.

The lessee shall make such returns of traffic as the Commissioner may from time to time require.

12. No person shall, except with the sanction of the officer charged with the management of a public ferry, keep a ferry boat for the purpose of plying for hire to or from any point within a distance of two miles from the limits of a public ferry :

Provided that, in the case of any specified public ferry, the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, reduce the said distance of two miles to such extent as it thinks fit :

Provided also that nothing hereinbefore contained shall prevent persons plying between two places, one of which is without and one within the said limits, when the distance between such two places is not less than three miles, or apply to boats which the Local Government expressly exempts from the operation of this section.

13. No person shall use the approach to, or landing-place of, a public ferry, unless he has paid the toll payable for crossing such ferrv.

Using approaches, &c., without payment.

III.—TOLLS.

14. Tolls, according to such rates as are from time to time fixed by the Local Government, shall be levied on all persons, animals and other things crossing any river by a public ferry :

Provided that the Local Government may, from time to time, declare what persons, animals or other things shall, when employed or transmitted on the public service, or for other sufficient reason, be exempt from payment of such tolls.

Where the tolls of a ferry have been let under section eight, any such declaration, if made after the date of the auction, shall entitle the lessee to such abatement of the rent payable in respect of the tolls as may be fixed by the Commissioner of the Division with the concurrence of the Local Government.

15. The lessee or other person authorized to collect the tolls of any public ferry, shall affix a table of such tolls, legibly written or printed in the vernacular language, in some conspicuous place near the ferry, and shall be bound to produce, on demand, a list of the tolls, signed by the Magistrate of the District or such other officer as he appoints on this behalf.

16. Except as provided by section seven, all tolls or rents received under this Act, after defraying thereout all charges incurred in carrying out this Act in the Province in which they are so received, shall be disposed of as follows, that is to say, (a) in the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, such tolls and rents shall be credited to the Fund constituted for those Provinces by the North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1878: (b) in the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, such tolls and rents shall be credited to the Fund constituted for that Province by the Oudh Local Rates Act, 1878; and (c) in the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb, such tolls and rents shall be credited to the Local Government and applied at its discretion in any portion of such territories to any of the purposes specified in the second clause of section 7 of the Panjáb Local Rates Act, 1878.

17. Any person may compound for the tolls payable for the use of a public ferry at such rates as may, from time to time, be fixed by the Commissioner of the Division, with the previous sanction of the Local Government.

IV.—PRIVATE FERRIES.

18. The Commissioner of the Division may with the previous sanction of the Local Government, from time to time, make rules for the maintenance of order and for the safety of passengers and property at ferries other than those which may have been declared to be public ferries.

19. The tolls charged at such ferries shall not exceed the highest rates for the time being fixed under section fourteen for similar public ferries.

V.—PENALTIES.

20. Every lessee or other person authorized to collect the tolls of a public ferry, who neglects to affix and keep in good order and repair the table of tolls mentioned in section fifteen, or who wilfully removes, alters or defaces such table, or allows it to become illegible, or who fails to produce, on demand, the list of the tolls mentioned in section fifteen, shall be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

21. Every such lessee or other person as aforesaid and any person in possession of a private ferry taking or taking other than the lawful toll, or without due cause delaying any person, animal or other thing, shall be punished with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees.

22. Every lessee of the tolls of a public ferry breaking any rule for the management of such ferry made under section eleven, and every person in possession of a private ferry breaking any rule for the management of such ferry made under section eighteen, shall be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with both.

23. When any lessee of the tolls of a public ferry has been convicted of an offence under section twenty-two, or, having been convicted of an offence under section twenty or section twenty-one, is again convicted of an offence under either of those sections, the Magistrate of the District may, with the sanction of the Commissioner of the Division, cancel the lease of the tolls of such ferry, and make other arrangements for its management during the whole or any part of the term for which the tolls were let.

24. Every person crossing any river by a public ferry, or using the approach to, or landing-place thereof, who refuses to pay the proper toll, or who, with intent of avoiding payment of such toll, fraudulently or forcibly crosses any ferry-station without paying the toll, or who obstructs any toll-collector or lessee of the tolls of a public ferry, or any of his assistants, in any way in the execution of their duty under this Act, shall be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees over and above the value of the damage, if any, which he has done to the ferry concerned.

25. Whoever conveys for hire any passenger, animal, cart, carriage or other vehicle or any goods or merchandise to or from any point within a distance of two miles from the limits of any public ferry in contravention of the provisions hereinbefore contained, shall be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

Where the tolls of such ferry have been let under the provisions hereinbefore contained, the whole or any portion of any fine realized under this section or section twenty-four may, at the discretion of the convicting Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates, be paid to the lessee.

26. All offences against this Act shall be heard and determined by any Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates, and any Magistrate having summary jurisdiction under chapter XVIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure shall try such offences in manner provided by that chapter.

27. Every Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates trying offences under this Act, ^{Magistrate may assess damage done by offender.} may enquire into and assess the value of the damage (if any) done by the offender to the ferry concerned, and shall order the amount of such value to be paid by him in addition to any fine imposed upon him under this Act; and the amount so ordered to be paid shall be leviable as if it were a fine.

28. All matters determined, orders issued, acts ^{Validation of proceedings since repeal of Regulation VI of 1819 in Panjáb.} done, penalties imposed and proceedings held in the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb after the repeal of Bengal Regulation VI of 1819 by the Panjáb Laws Act, 1872, section 4, and before this Act comes into force in such territories shall, whenever such determinations, orders, acts, penalties or proceedings would have been lawful if the said Regulation had been in force, be deemed to have been lawfully determined, issued, done, imposed and held respectively.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

An Act for the regulation of ferries in the Panjáb is much needed. Up to the 1st June 1872, when Act No. IV of 1872 (The Panjáb Laws Act) came into force, ferries in the Panjáb were governed by Bengal Regulation VI of 1819; but by the Panjáb Laws Act that Regulation was inadvertently repealed, and, no other law being substituted for it, there has from that date been no law for the control of ferries in the Panjáb. Another result is that, as the law now stands, it would be difficult for the Local Government to prevent an unlicensed person from setting up a rival ferry alongside of a Government ferry, and thus materially reducing the income of the latter ferry and the funds available for its maintenance.

To remedy this state of things, and at the same time to provide generally for the regulation of Government ferries, a Bill to regulate ferries in the Panjáb was prepared. About the same time the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh submitted a draft Bill for the regulation of ferries in the territories under his administration. The Bill so submitted, and the Bill for the Panjáb, as modified and supplemented in accordance with communications subsequently received from the Panjáb, were found to differ so little, that it was thought advisable to amalgamate the two Bills, and accordingly the present Bill, extending to the Panjáb, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, has been prepared.

The Bill is based upon the Burma Ferries Act, II of 1873, and the provisions of that Act have been followed as closely as the different circumstances and requirements of the provinces with which this Bill deals would permit.

In section 3 it has been thought desirable to declare that the term 'ferry' includes boat-bridges, as they often take the place of ferries in Northern India, and are managed in the same way as ferries properly so called.

There appear to be no recognized private ferries in the Panjáb, but they exist in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. A clause has, therefore, been introduced in section 4, in accordance with the wishes of the Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Commissioner, giving the Local Government power to take possession of private ferries and make them public, and in section 5 the manner in which claims for compensation made by persons whose ferries are so taken by the Government are to be dealt with, is laid down. This section follows the provisions of section 6 of Regulation VI of 1819.

In cases in which an alteration in the course of a public ferry is rendered necessary by changes in the bed of the river, power has been given to the Commissioner (section 4) to make such alteration as is necessary without referring to the Local Government.

Section 9 provides that arrears due by the lessee of a public ferry on account of his lease may be recovered as if they were arrears of land-revenue.

By section 13 it is provided that any person using the approach to, or landing-place of, a ferry shall pay toll.

By section 17 power is given to any person to compound for ferry-tolls. This seems a reasonable provision for people living in the neighbourhood of the ferry, who have constantly to cross it for purposes of business or otherwise.

Sections 18 and 19 deal with private ferries: the former empowers the Commissioner, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, to make rules for the maintenance of order and the safety of passengers and property: the latter declares that the tolls chargeable at such ferries shall not exceed the highest rates fixed for similar public ferries.

The penalties generally have been increased in accordance with the wishes of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh.

RESOLUTION.—The old system of salaries in the Survey Department, based on a combination of military pay and allowances with staff salaries, having proved inconvenient, inasmuch as it resulted in some instances of junior officers drawing larger salaries than their seniors, while the civil members of the Department were placed at great disadvantage compared with their military colleagues, a scheme of consolidated salaries was substituted for it. This scheme came into operation from the commencement of 1874.

2. It was in force for a little more than a year and a half when the Government of India found it necessary, in consideration of the other demands on the public revenues, to reduce the annual cost of the Department to Rs. 20,00,000 or by over 4 lakhs of rupees.

3. The carrying out of this reduction in the expenditure of the Department has involved the absorption of a number of survey parties, and of several appointments in the different grades of the Department, and has also necessitated the stoppage of all promotion.

4. As the cost of the Department has now been brought down almost to the limit decided on, the Governor-General in Council is of opinion that the Department should be placed on a definite basis in view of the reductions that have been effected and in modification of the orders re-organising it.

5. His Excellency in Council has accordingly determined that the offices of Deputy Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents in the Topographical, Revenue, and Trigonometrical Branches shall be amalgamated into one list.

6. There are in the three branches 31 parties actually at work, requiring at least one officer to each party, and there are 7 officers employed at the two head-quarters offices at Calcutta and Dehra. These are not at present susceptible of reduction. Thus the number of officers required on duty cannot be less than 38. Some of the parties need more than one officer for the proper carrying on of the work, e.g., for a cadastral survey party two officers are absolutely necessary. It is estimated that on the average there should be 10 officers on duty in excess of the 38, making an effective strength of 48. Adding one-fourth for absentees, the entire strength of the Department is 60. The Governor-General in Council is pleased to distribute this number as follows:—

4 Deputy Superintendents, 1st grade.
10	"	"	2nd "
12	"	"	3rd "
11 Assistant Superintendents, 1st grade.
11	"	"	2nd "
12	"	"	3rd "

7. No officer shall be brought in to officiate unless the number of effective officers available is less than 48.

8. The nominal list attached to this Resolution has been arranged on a strict calculation of the seniority of each officer taken on the mean of his length of service in the above grades and of the period since his last promotion. The only exceptions are in the cases in which this calculation would reverse the present relative position of officers in the same branch of the department, and in those of Mr. James and Captain Waterhouse who, in accordance with paragraph 7 of the orders in this Department, No. 731, dated the 31st October 1873, are placed next below Captain C. Strahan and Captain Holdich respectively.

9. In every Survey party in either of the three branches which may hereafter be reduced, the above scale shall be reduced by the complement of officers for each such party and by a corresponding proportion of the 12 extra officers. Any officers in excess of the sanctioned scale shall be held to be supernumeraries.

10. The Governor-General in Council has further resolved that the maximum salary to be drawn by a Deputy Superintendent shall be Rs. 1,600 per mensem, by whomsoever the office may be held.

11. All officers who may have received temporary promotion shall revert to their substantive rank whenever they become supernumeraries.

12. Temporary or officiating promotions shall be granted under the existing rules from grade to grade in a class and from class to class.

13. Should the salary of any officer be reduced under these orders below the substantive pay (including personal allowance, if any) to which he is at present entitled, the difference shall be made up to him by a personal allowance.

14. The number of absentees on furlough shall not exceed 20 per cent. of the entire strength.

15. The Surveyor-General shall perform, in addition to the duties hitherto attaching to the appointment, those of Superintendent in the Great Trigonometrical Survey, the separate post being abolished.

16. These orders shall take effect from the 1st January 1878.

ORDER.—Ordered, that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the Surveyor-General of India, with the request that he will be good enough to take the necessary steps at once for carrying out its provisions.

Ordered also, that a copy be forwarded to the Financial Department.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, ASSEMBLED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING LAWS AND REGULATIONS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT 24 & 25 VIC., CAP. 67.

The Council met at Government House on Saturday, the 23rd February, 1878.

PRESENT :

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, G.M.S.I., presiding.

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, C.S.I.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, G.C.B.

The Hon'ble Sir E. C. Bayley, K.C.S.I.

The Hon'ble Sir A. J. Arbuthnot, K.C.S.I.

The Hon'ble Sir J. Strachey, K.C.S.I.

Lieutenant-General the Hon'ble Sir E. B. Johnson, K.C.B.

The Hon'ble Whitley Stokes, C.S.I.

The Hon'ble B. W. Colvin.

The Hon'ble Mahárájá Jotíndra Mohan Tagore.

The Hon'ble T. C. Hope, C.S.I.

The Hon'ble T. H. Thornton, D.C.L., C.S.I.

The Hon'ble G. H. P. Evans.

The Hon'ble E. C. Morgan.

The Hon'ble F. R. Cockerell.

FERRIES (PANJÁB, NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES AND OUDH) BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STOKES introduced the Bill to regulate Ferries in the Panjáb, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Sir Andrew Clarke, the Hon'ble Messrs. Colvin and Thornton and the Mover. He said that he had already explained the circumstances under which the Local Governments of the Panjáb, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh considered legislation on the subject of Ferries to be necessary for the first of those Provinces and expedient for the others. The Bill which he now introduced was based upon the Burma Ferries Act, II of 1873, and the provisions of that Act had been followed as closely as the different circumstances and requirements of the Provinces with which this Bill dealt would permit.

Section 3 declared that the term 'ferry' included bridges of boats, as they often took the place of ferries in Northern India, and were managed in the same way as ferries properly so called.

There appeared to be no recognized private ferries in the Panjáb, but they existed in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. A clause had therefore been introduced in section 4, in accordance with the wishes of the Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Commissioner, giving the Local Government power to take possession of private ferries and make them public; and section 5 prescribed the manner in which claims for compensation made by persons whose ferries were so taken by the Government were to be dealt with. This section followed the provisions of section 6 of Bengal Regulation VI of 1819.

Section 9 provided that arrears due by the lessee of a public ferry on account of his lease might be recovered as if they were arrears of land-revenue.

Section 13 provided that no person should use the approach to, or landing-place of, a public ferry without having paid the toll payable for crossing it.

By section 17 power was given to any person to compound for the tolls payable for the use of public ferries.

Sections 18 and 19 dealt with private ferries: the former empowered the Commissioner of the Division, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, to make rules for the maintenance of order and the safety of passengers and property: the latter declared that the tolls chargeable at such ferries should not exceed the highest rates fixed for similar public ferries.

The penalties generally had been increased in accordance with the wishes of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. STOKES also moved that the Bill be published in the Government Gazette, Panjáb, and the Government Gazette, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, in English and in such other languages as the Local Governments direct.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

PANJÁB LAWS ACT, 1872, AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. STOKES also moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Thornton be added to the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Panjáb Laws Act, 1872.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

SEA CUSTOMS BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. HOPE presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the levy of Sea Customs-duties.

INDIAN FOREST BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. HOPE also presented the final Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to the management and preservation of Government forests, to the transit of forest-produce, and to the duty leviable on timber.

The Council adjourned to Wednesday, the 6th March 1878.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS
FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 26th FEBRUARY 1878.

GENERAL REMARKS.—In Madras no rain is reported; the harvest continues, with a poor outturn in most districts, but the condition of the standing crops is better; there has been a general rise in the price of rice and dry grains. The number on relief works is 140,006, and on gratuitous relief 142,564; the former is more by 7,944 and the latter less by 3,775 than last week. In Mysore the wet crops are generally in good condition; the number on works for the week ending the 16th ultimo was 46,968, and on gratuitous relief 3,585: the former is more by 765 and the latter less by 63 than in the previous week. From Bombay general showers in Sind are reported, but no rain elsewhere: the reaping of the rabi is progressing. In the Central Provinces the weather is now clear; the reaping of the rabi has begun; the crops have been injured by blight and frost in some districts, but prospects are generally fair; large exports to the North-Western Provinces and Bombay are reported. In Berar the reaping of the rabi continues; the crops are good. In Central India there has been no rain; scarcity of water is said to be severely felt. In Rajputana it is cloudy in the north: the cattle are suffering much from want of fodder in Ajmere and Jeypore; the rabi generally promises well. In Bengal there has been slight rain in a few of the Delta and Eastern districts; the prospects of the cold-weather crops are on the whole good; but the poppy crop has been damaged by blight in Sarun, and in parts of Chota Nagpore and the Sonthal Pergunnahs hail has injured the prospects of the makua and mango crops. In Assam prospects appear to be good. In Burma the harvest is over: the outturn has been everywhere excellent. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh cloudy weather still continues, to the injury of the crops: in Meerut slight rain has fallen; in Barilly the hail in the early part of February did serious damage; prospects are however still generally good; reaping has begun in the Eastern districts. In the Punjab there has been general rain in all districts except Delhi and Hissar, with hail in Amritsar; prospects are however still fairly good, except in the Pesháwar district.

Midnapore ...	Nil	Weather getting very warm; state and prospects of the crops are fair, but rain is said in some places to be required for the standing crops.
Howrah ...	0·005	Weather warmer than usual at this time of year; there is no crop on the ground; land is under preparation for the coming cultivation.
Hooghly ...	Nil	Weather unseasonably warm; the rabi crops are fast ripening; public health is normal; no fresh case of cattle disease has been reported.
Burdwan ...	Nil	The winter crops are being reaped and gathered, and the sugarcane is being cut in many places; the spring crops are being sown; cholera is still prevalent in the Bood-Bood, Culna, and Jehanabad sub-divisions; no reports have been received from Ranecogunge and Cutwa.
Bankoora ...	Nil	Weather cool in the beginning of the week; cool mornings, hot days, and foggy one day; prospects of the crops are the same as reported last week.
Beerbhoom ...	Nil	Weather getting warm; the winter crops are doing well; sugarcane is being harvested.
Sonthal Pergunnahs ...	Nil	Weather windy and changeable; a good deal of damage has been done to mohwa and mango trees by the hail of last week; small-pox and cholera are bad in Deoghur.
Bhāgalpur ...	Nil	Weather hot and windy by day; nights are cool; prospects of the rabi crops are excellent; no material alteration in the prices, which were reported last week to have a downward tendency; health is good.
Monghyr ...	Nil	Weather warm; west wind blowing; state and prospects of the crops are very good.
Purneah ...	Nil	High west wind is prevailing; prospects continue fair; sugarcane is being cut in Kiseengunge; tobacco in Arraich is excellent.
Maldah ...	Nil	Weather fair and getting hot; state and prospects of the crops are generally satisfactory; price of common rice is rising, there having been much exportation; the average price now is just over 16 seers per rupee; public health is satisfactory; a few cases of cholera and small-pox have been reported, but no deaths.
Durbhanga ...	Nil	Weather warm, with west wind; prospects of the crops are good; prices continue high; health of the people is generally good.
Mozufferpore ...	Nil	Weather getting warm, west wind is prevailing; state and prospects of the rabi crops are satisfactory; the prices of food-grains remain stationary.
Saran ...	Nil	Weather clear during the first part of the week, but since the 20th instant the mornings are cloudy; the sun is getting gradually hot; west wind is prevailing; the rabi crops are doing well throughout the district, specially those along the banks of the Gogra; peas, mustard, and masoor are being harvested; wheat and barley are ripening; in some places slight injury has been done to the rahur by frost; poppy is in flower, and is giving out pods; the Sub-Deputy Opium Agent of Sevan has reported that about one-third of the entire poppy cultivation, or about 15,000 beghas, was destroyed by blight; ryots are engaged in sowing chena and planting sugarcane; mango is in blossom; new peas and masoor are coming into the market; prices are stationary; public health is good.
Chumparan ...	Nil	Sky is now and then overcast; there is every probability of rain; weather is getting hotter daily; prospects of the rabi crops are the same as before; the average outturn is estimated at 10 annas.
Patna ...	Nil	Weather seasonable; strong west wind blowing since the last two days; prospects of the crops on the whole are good, but in many places caterpillars have completely destroyed kearas (peas), khesari , and masoor .
Gya ...	Nil	Weather unusually hot; high wind on the 23rd instant; maximum thermometer in the shade 92·4°; prospects of the rabi crops continue on the whole good, though in parts of the district insects continue their attacks; masoor has been a failure in the Sadar sub-division, cut and given as fodder to cattle, it is reported to have caused death in many instances; prices have risen since last report, and there are murmurs of distress; the rabi harvest will bring relief.
Shahabad ...	Nil	Weather generally clear, but occasionally cloudy; peas and masoor are generally being reaped; other rabi crops continue promising; fields are being prepared for sugarcane; public health is good.
Hazáribágh ...	Nil	Weather much warmer; the Deputy Commissioner on tour writes that the rain and hail last week damaged the rabi crops in the west of the district; ploughing is being pushed on.
Lohardugga ...	Nil	Weather seasonable and getting warm; the rabi crops have been below the average in the Sadar sub-division, and considerably so in the Palamow sub-division; the export of food-grains has been very great, and has forced up prices so exceedingly that some hardship is beginning to be felt among the labouring classes in parts of the district; a good mohwa crop will avert distress; the high prices of food-grains has given a great impetus to emigration.
Manbhoom ...	Nil	Weather favourable; nothing fresh to report; if the weather keep up, we ought to have a good mohwa crop, which shall prove a relief; as matters are, there is scarcity of food for the poorer class owing to high prices in the north, north-west, west, and south-west of the district, and to a less extent in some other parganas.

Presidency or Province and District.	Rainfall for week preceding.	State of agricultural prospects.
Bengal—concluded.
Singbhoom ...	Nil	Weather seasonable; nothing to report about the crops; the mohwa and mango have up to this shewn very indifferently, and the jungle fruits are also reported not as plentiful as usual; coarse rice now sells at 20 seers for the rupee, and labourers and non-cultivators are emigrating to the tea districts in greater number than has hitherto been noticed by the Deputy Commissioner; the district is healthy.
Balasore ...	Nil	Weather fine; prospects of the crops are satisfactory; a good many deaths, both from sporadic cholera and small-pox, have been reported.
Cuttack ...	Nil	Weather fine and hot; no change in the state of the crops and public health since last report.
Pooree ...	Nil	Weather warm for the season; sarad rice, kulthi , and mandia crops are being harvested; dalu rice is progressing well on low land; moong and kalai promise well; common rice is selling at 14½ to 18½ seers for the rupee; export of rice to the Madras Presidency continues; public health is good.
N. W. P. and Oudh— (Feb. 27th)		General Remarks. —There has been slight rain in some districts during the week; the weather is in most places getting warm; cholera still prevails in places in the districts of Burdwan, 24-Pergunnahs and Moorshedabad; and a few cases of cholera and small-pox are reported from some other districts; the reports of the crops are much the same as in last week; the prospects of the cold-weather crops in Nuddea and of the spring rice in Jessore are not good; in Patna and Gaya the prospects of the crops are on the whole good, although insects have caused some damage; in the Sewan sub-division of Sarun about one-third of the poppy crop has been destroyed by blight; in the Sonthal Pergunnahs and in Hazaribagh the mohwa and mango crops have been much spoiled by the hail of last week, and in Singbhoom these crops are very indifferent; in Lohardugga the cold-weather crops have been much below the average; prices continue very high in several districts, and in Gaya, Lohardugga, Singbhoom and Manbhoom, it is reported, some pressure is beginning to be felt among the poorer classes of the people, but the approaching rabi and mohwa harvest, it is hoped, will bring relief.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.*Fort William, the 8th March 1878.APPOINTMENTS AND PROMOTIONS.*No. 204.—ROYAL WARRANTS—

The Governor General in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following extract of a Military letter from the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for India, No. 16 of the 31st January 1878:—

"Para. 1. I forward herewith copies of two Royal Warrants, dated 31st December 1877 and 28th January 1878 respectively, the former providing for the superannuation of General Officers of Her Majesty's Indian forces, the other providing for the promotion of the Officers of those forces."

VICTORIA by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, Empress of India.

Whereas it has been represented to Us that it is expedient to provide for the retirement of General Officers of Our Indian Forces who shall have attained or shall attain the age of seventy years, Our will and pleasure is, that every General Officer who shall have attained or shall attain the age of seventy years by or after the first day of October one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven, shall be permanently removed from the establishment of Effective General Officers to the Retired List, unless in any special case it shall be represented to Us by Our Secretary of State for India in Council that a relaxation of this rule would be for the good of Our service. In case such General Officer shall have been holding a Staff appointment on the first day of October one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven, he may continue to hold it until the expiration of the term for which he was appointed, unless it appear to Our Secretary of State for India in Council to be expedient that he should sooner be removed to the Retired List.

Given at Our Court at Osborne, this thirty-first day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven, and in the forty-first year of Our reign.

By Her Majesty's command.

(Signed) SALISBURY.

VICTORIA by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, Empress of India.

Whereas it has been represented to Us that it is expedient to make further Regulations for governing the Promotion in the Army of the Officers of Our Indian Forces, Our will and pleasure is, that the following Regulations be established, and be the sole Regulations under which the Promotion in the Army of such Officers shall be effected, viz.:—

*Regulations.1. A Captain may attain the rank of Major—

(a) By regimental seniority;

(b) By 20 years' service in the Army in the case of Officers whose appointment to Our Indian Forces was made subject to the conditions prescribed in the General Order of Our Governor General of India in Council, dated the 9th of December 1859, No. 1637;

(c) By brevet, after 20 years' service in the Army, so long as there remain any Captains on the list of Cavalry and Infantry in Our Indian Forces;

(d) By brevet, in succession to a vacancy on the establishment of General Officers, provided such vacancy occur before 1st October 1880, or thereafter for so long as there remain any Captains on the list of Cavalry and Infantry who are not subject to the conditions prescribed in the General Order of Our Governor General of India in Council, dated the 9th December 1859, No. 1637;

(e) By brevet, for distinguished service in the field;

(f) By brevet, for distinguished service of an exceptional nature other than in the field.

2. A Major may attain the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel—

(a) By regimental seniority;

(b) By 26 years' service in the Army in the case of Officers whose appointment to Our Indian Forces was made subject to the conditions prescribed in the General Order of Our Governor General of India in Council, dated the 9th of December 1859, No. 1637;

(c) By brevet, after 26 years' service in the Army, so long as there remain any Majors on the list of Cavalry and Infantry in Our Indian Forces;

(d) By brevet, in succession to a vacancy on the establishment of General Officers, provided such vacancy occur before 1st October 1880, or thereafter for so long as there remain any Majors on the list of Cavalry and Infantry who are not subject to the conditions prescribed in the General Order of Our Governor General of India in Council, dated the 9th December 1859, No. 1637;

(e) By brevet, for distinguished service in the field;

(f) By brevet, for distinguished service of an exceptional nature other than in the field.

3. A Lieutenant-Colonel may attain the rank of Colonel—

(a) By 12 years' service in the substantive grade of Lieutenant-Colonel;

(b) By brevet, after 31 years' service in the Army, five of which shall have been in the grade of Lieutenant-Colonel;

(c) By brevet, on appointment to be one of Our Aides-de-Camp;

(d) By brevet, as a reward for distinguished service in the field;

(e) By brevet, for distinguished service of an exceptional nature other than in the field;

(f) By brevet, after five years' satisfactory service with the rank, whether substantive or brevet, of Lieutenant-Colonel—

(1) In any military appointment, except as commanding a company or as Equerry or extra Equerry;

(2) In any civil situation approved by Our Secretary of State for India in Council upon the recommendation of Our Governor General in Council and Commander-in-Chief in India, provided it be of a nature to afford practical experience likely to be afterwards of advantage in military service.

(g) By brevet after eight years' satisfactory service as a substantive Lieutenant-Colonel or substantive Major, with the brevet rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, as Equerry or extra Equerry to the Sovereign or the Prince of Wales.

No period of acting staff service less than six months' duration shall reckon towards the rank of Colonel, unless it be converted into actual staff service by subsequent confirmation.

4. The rank of Brigadier-General shall be local or temporary only.

5. The names of General Officers shall be borne upon three separate lists. The first shall contain the names of those on the fixed establishment, and of those who having been promoted out of their regular turn shall be supernumerary to the fixed establishment; the second, those of Officers retired under Our Royal Warrant of the 31st day of December 1877; and the third, those who shall have retired from the service with the honorary rank of Major-General, Lieutenant-General, or General.

6. The names of the Colonels and General Officers of the Staff Corps now borne on the Indian List to regulate promotion shall remain on that list, and the names of the Officers of the Staff Corps henceforth promoted to the rank of Colonel shall be placed on that list, to be thereon retained in italics, until their death or retirement for the purpose of regulating the promotion of the Officers below them.

7. The fixed establishment of General Officers (including the names of Officers of the Staff Corps) shall be the following:—

Generals	23
Lieutenant-Generals...	35
Major-Generals	59
		Total	117

8. Every vacancy on the establishment of General Officers shall be filled by the promotion of the senior Colonel of the Indian Army; or by the moving up of the name of the senior Officer of the Staff Corps borne on the list to regulate promotion; or by the transfer of a General Officer from the supernumerary list as provided in Art. 12.

9. Every vacancy on the establishment in the rank of Lieutenant-General or in that of General shall be filled up in like manner by the promotion of the Senior Officer of the Indian Army in the grade next below, or by the moving up of the name of the Senior Officer of the Staff Corps borne on the list of that grade.

10. Temporary rank and command as Major-General, Lieutenant-General, or General may, for the convenience of Our Service, be conferred, without regard to seniority, on Colonels, Major-Generals, or Lieutenant-Generals respectively; and if the Officer during the continuance of such temporary rank and command shall have conducted himself to Our satisfaction, the rank so held may, upon the recommendation of Our Governor General in Council, be converted into permanent rank after having been held for five years in time of peace, or for any shorter period in the field during war. A Colonel who shall vacate an appointment as temporary Major-General, and whose temporary rank shall not have been made permanent, may, upon the recommendation of Our Governor General in Council, be made an honorary Major-General, and shall retain that rank until he succeeds to the establishment in virtue of his seniority on the list of Colonels.

11. Promotion may be conferred upon a Colonel, Major-General, or Lieutenant-General, without regard to seniority for distinguished service in the field, and in such case the recommendation of Our Governor General in Council, detailing the services for which the Officer is promoted, shall be published in the General Orders of Our Indian Military Forces, and in the London Gazette.

12. An Officer not below the rank of Colonel, promoted after temporary service in a higher rank, or for distinguished service in the field, shall be borne as supernumerary, and shall not be placed on the establishment in his new rank until the time when he would have attained such rank by seniority; that is to say, when the surviving Officer who stood next senior on the list to the Officer promoted under Art. 9 or 10, shall have attained the same rank on the establishment, the next vacancy shall be filled by the transfer of the supernumerary General Officer to the establishment.

13. A supernumerary Major-General, who has been promoted after temporary service and absorbed, under Art. 12, into the establishment, shall have seniority according to the date of his permanent rank as Major-General, and shall rise to be Lieutenant-General, whether before or after his absorption into the establishment, in accordance with that seniority. A supernumerary General Officer promoted for distinguished service in the field, and absorbed under Art. 12, shall take his seniority from the date of his promotion as published in the "London Gazette".

14. Field Marshals shall be appointed at the will of the Sovereign, and the rank shall be conferred without reference to seniority. A General Officer, retired under Our Warrant of the 31st day of December 1877, shall remain eligible for promotion to the rank of Field Marshal.

15. A Major-General or a Lieutenant-General, retired under Our Warrant of the 31st day of December 1877, shall be promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-General or General when the Officer on the establishment, who was next junior to him as a Colonel, shall obtain such promotion.

16. Every Officer permitted to retire on full pay may be granted a step of honorary rank on retirement.

Given at Our Court at Osborne, this 28th day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, and in the forty-first year of Our Reign.

By Her Majesty's Command.

(Signed) SALISBURY.

2. With reference to the above, His Excellency in Council is pleased to notify that, although removed from the army, the General Officers thus superannuated are not otherwise affected. They retain their Colonelcies of Cavalry and Infantry and their Colonel's allowances, they must continue to subscribe to the various military funds, and their widows retain their claims on the fund formerly called Lord Clive's.

POST OFFICE.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Calcutta, the 28th February 1878.

Consequent on the admission of Persia into the General Postal Union, the following revised postage rates will have effect from the 1st March 1878:—

	EACH LETTER.		Each News- paper.	EACH PACKET OR NEWS- PAPER, PRINTED PAPER, &c.
	Per 1 oz.	Registration Fee.	Per 4 ozs.	Per 2 ozs.

NOTICE.

Sealed Tenders are invited by the Superintendent of Marine, at the Calcutta Dockyard, up to 12 o'clock noon on Monday, the 18th March 1878, for the supply, by contract, of the articles specified in the several classes entered in the Schedule, for one year from 1st April 1878 to 31st March 1879, or until the date of sanction by Government of new contracts for the year 1879-80.

2. Forms of Tender, with copies of the Schedule, will be supplied by the undersigned and none others will be received. Tenderers must also distinctly understand that any alteration or erasure in the figures, &c., once entered in the three last columns of the Schedule, viz., "Tendered Rates," "Per" and "Amount of the Tendered Rates," also omission of totals, will render their Tender informal and lead to its rejection.

3. Tenders to be superscribed "Tenders for the supply of Miscellaneous Articles."

4. Tenders will not be received after the hour named.

5. Parties may tender for one or as many complete classes as they please, but not for a portion of class.

6. Parties must show in the Schedule the rate, &c., at which they tender to supply each and every article comprised in one or as many complete classes as they intend to tender.

7. Each Tender, before being opened, must be accompanied with the requisite deposit in cash.

8. Each Tenderer must be prepared to supply all articles equal to the samples produced at the Office of the Superintendent of Marine, which are sealed and kept at his Office for their inspection, and to abide by the conditions specified in the Form of Tender.

9. No reason will be assigned by the Superintendent of Marine for rejection of any Tender, and he does not bind himself to accept the lowest tender.

10. Persons desirous of undertaking the contract can obtain, on application at the Office of the undersigned, printed Forms of Tender and Schedule of the Articles to be supplied, and any other information that may be required connected with the contract, and the conditions the Tenderers must abide by, to prevent their tenders being treated as informal.

G. T. ROBINSON, Comdr., I. N.,
Superintendent of Marine.

OFFICE OF THE SUPDT. OF MARINE, KIDDERPORE;
The 25th February 1878.

NOTICE.

Scaled Tenders are invited by the Superintendent of Marine, at the Calcutta Dockyard, up to 12 o'clock, noon, on Monday, the 18th March 1878, for the supply by contract of the articles of provisions specified in the below Schedule for one year from 1st April 1878 to 31st March 1879, or until the date of sanction by Government of new contracts for the year 1879-80.

Tenders to be superscribed "Tender for the supply of Provisions to the Marine Department."

Tenders will not be received after the hour above named.

Tenders must show a rate for each article, and the provisions must be delivered at the Dockyard free of all contingent charges.

A deposit of (500) five hundred Rupees in Bank of Bengal Receipt only must accompany each Tender, returnable in the cases of parties whose tenders are not entertained except in case of the successful tenderer, from whom a further sum of (1,000) one thousand Rupees will be taken, and who will have to sign a contract deed within three days from the receipt of the notice of acceptance, and who shall commence to supply provisions, failing which his deposit will be confiscated.

Bills will be paid monthly for the supply of provisions, duly supported by receipts from the Marine Storekeeper.

Samples of each article of provisions are to be submitted along with tenders.

No reason will be assigned for the rejection of any Tender, nor does the undersigned bind himself to accept the lowest Tender.

G. T. ROBINSON, Comdr., I. N.,
Superintendent of Marine.

NOTICE.

The monuments of the persons named in the list appended in the Karnal Cemeteries are in want of repairs. The friends of the deceased, who desire their maintenance, are requested to communicate with the Deputy Commissioner, Karnal, Panjab, within two months.

This notice is given with reference to the following Rule XII of the rules for the care and use of Government Cemeteries, promulgated with Government of India's Notification (Home Department) No. 421, dated 12th December 1877:—

RULE XII (1). The Chaplain should communicate with the friends of the deceased when a monument needs repairing, or when such communication is not possible, advertise three times in the Gazette of India and the Gazette of the Province. If it falls into a ruinous condition, and no party will undertake to restore it, the ruined monument must be made level with the ground during the next repairs, and any slab it contained must be placed over the grave in simple masonry, or be inserted in the wall."

THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

PUBLISHED UNDER AUTHORITY.

The "Indian Law Reports," published under the authority of the Governor General in Council, will appear in monthly parts, published as soon as possible after the first of each month at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, and will comprise four series,—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court. The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court will be reported in the Series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court will be reported in the Calcutta Series. The Parts of each Series can be had separately, or all four Parts can be had stitched into one wrapper at the option of subscribers and purchasers. It will be observed from the following statement of the terms of subscription and sale, that a considerable reduction is allowed to persons taking the complete set:

Terms of subscription, payable annually

SCHEDULE.

An Act to amend the law relating to Forests, the transit of forest-produce, and the duty leviable on timber.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to Forests, the transit of forest-produce and the duty leviable on timber; It hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Forest Act, 1878:"

It shall come into force at once in the territories respectively administered by the Governor of Bombay in Council, the Lieutenant-Governors of the Lower Provinces, the North-Western Provinces, and the Panjáb, (except the District of Hazára), and the Chief Commissioners of Oudh, the Central Provinces and Assam.

And any other Local Government may from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, extend, by notification in the local official Gazette, this Act to all or any of the territories for the time being under its administration.

On and from the date on which this Act comes into force in any of the said territories, the enactments mentioned in the schedule hereto annexed shall be repealed in such territories. But all rules made under or validated by any of the said enactments and in force at the date of such repeal shall, so far as they are consistent with this Act, be deemed to have been made and published hereunder.

2. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context,—

"Forest-officer" means any person whom the Governor General in Council, or the Local Government or any officer empowered by the Governor General in Council or the Local Government in this behalf, may from time to time appoint by name, or as holding an office, to carry out all or any of the purposes of this Act, or to do anything required by this Act or any rule made under this Act to be done by a Forest-officer:

"Tree." "Tree" includes bamboos, stumps and brushwood:

"Timber" includes trees and bamboos when they have fallen or have been felled, and all wood, whether cut up, or fashioned or hollowed-out for cart-wheels, mortars, canoes or other purposes or not:

"Forest-produce" includes the following when found in, or brought from, a forest, that is to say,— minerals (including limestone and laterite), surface-soil, trees, timber, grass, peat, canes, creepers, reeds, leaves, moss, flowers, fruits, roots, juice, catechu, bark, honey, wax, lac, caoutchouc, gum, wood-oil, grass-oil, resin, varnish, silk-worms and cocoons, shells, skins, tusks, bones and horns:

"Forest-offence" means an offence punishable under this Act, or under any rule made under this Act:

"Cattle" includes elephants, camels, buffaloes, horses, mares, geldings, ponies, colts, fillies, mules, asses, pigs, rams, ewes, sheep, lambs, goats and kids:

"River" includes streams, canals, creeks and other channels, natural or artificial.

CHAPTER II.

OF RESERVED FORESTS.

3. The Local Government may from time to time constitute any forest-land waste-land which is the property of Government, or over which the Government has proprietary rights, or to the whole or any part of the forest-produce of which the Government is entitled, a Reserved Forest in the manner hereinafter provided.

4. Whenever it is proposed to constitute any land a Reserved Forest, the Local Government may publish a notification in the local official Gazette—

(a) declaring that it is proposed to constitute such land a reserved forest;

(b) specifying the limits of such forest; and

(c) appointing an officer (hereinafter called "the Forest Settlement Officer") to inquire into and determine the existence, nature and extent of any rights alleged to exist in favour of any person in or over any land comprised within such limits, or in or over any forest-produce, and to deal with the same as provided in this chapter.

Explanation 1.—For the purpose of clause (b) of this section, it shall be sufficient to describe the limits of the forest by roads, rivers, ridges or other well-known or readily intelligible boundaries.

The officer appointed under clause (c) of this section shall ordinarily be a person not holding any forest-office except that of Forest Settlement Officer.

Nothing in this section shall prevent the Local Government from appointing any number of officers not exceeding three, not more than one of whom shall be a person holding any forest-office except as aforesaid, to perform the duties of a Forest Settlement Officer under this Act.

5. During the interval between the publication of such notification and the date fixed by the notification under section nineteen, no right shall be acquired in or over the land comprised in such notification, except by succession or under a grant or contract in writing made or entered into by or on behalf of Government or some person in whom such right was vested when the former notification was issued; and no fresh clearings for cultivation or for any other purpose shall be made in such land.

6. When a notification has been issued under section four, the Forest Settlement Officer shall publish in the language of the country, in every town and village in the neighbourhood of the land comprised therein, a proclamation—

(a) specifying the limits of the proposed forest;

(b) explaining the consequences which, as herein-after provided, will ensue on the reservation of such forest; and

(c) fixing a period of not less than three months from the date of such proclamation, and requiring every person claiming any right mentioned in section four or five either to present to such officer within such period a written notice specifying, or to appear before him and state, the nature of such right and the amount and particulars of the compensation (if any) claimed in respect thereof.

7. The Forest Settlement Officer shall take down in writing all statements made under section six, and shall, at some convenient place, enquire into all claims duly preferred under that section, and the existence of any rights mentioned in section four or five and not claimed under section six, so far as the same may be ascertainable from the records of Government and the evidence of any persons likely to be acquainted with the same.

8. For the purposes of such enquiry, the Forest Settlement Officer may exercise the following powers, that is to say:—

(a) power to enter, by himself or any officer authorized by him for the purpose, upon any land, and to survey, demarcate, and make a map of the same; and

(b) the powers of a Civil Court in the trial of suits.

9. Rights in respect of which no claim has been preferred under section six, and of the existence of which no knowledge has been acquired by enquiry under section seven, shall be extinguished, unless before the notification under section nineteen is published the person claiming them satisfies the Forest Settlement Officer that he had sufficient cause for not preferring such claim within the period fixed under section six.

10. In the case of a claim to a right in or over any land, other than a right of way or pasture or to forest-produce or a watercourse, the Forest Settlement Officer shall pass an order admitting or rejecting the same in whole or in part.

If such claim is admitted in whole or in part, the Forest Settlement Officer shall either (1) exclude such land from the limits of the proposed Forest; or (2) come to an agreement with the owner thereof for the surrender of his rights; or (3) proceed to acquire such land in the manner provided by the Land Acquisition Act, 1870.

For the purpose of so acquiring such land—

(a) the Forest Settlement Officer shall be deemed to be a Collector proceeding under the Land Acquisition Act, 1870;

(b) the claimant shall be deemed to be a person interested and appearing before him in pursuance of a notice given under section nine of that Act;

(c) the provisions of the preceding sections of that Act shall be deemed to have been complied with; and

(d) the Collector, with the consent of the claimant, or the Court, with the consent of both parties, may award compensation in land, or partly in land and partly in money.

11. In the case of a claim to rights of pasture or to forest-produce, the Forest Settlement Officer shall pass an order admitting or rejecting the same in whole or in part.

12. The Forest Settlement Officer, when passing any order under section eleven, shall record, so far as may be practicable,—

(a) the name, father's name, caste, residence and occupation of the person claiming the right;

(b) the designation, position and area of all fields or groups of fields (if any), and the designation and position of all buildings (if any), in respect of which the exercise of such rights is claimed.

13. If the Forest Settlement Officer admits in whole or in part any claim under section eleven, he shall also record the extent to which the claim is so admitted, specifying the number and description of the cattle which the claimant is from time to time entitled to graze in the forest, the season during which such pasture is permitted, the quantity of timber and other forest-produce which he is from time to time authorised to take or receive, or such other particulars as the case may require. He shall also record whether the timber or other forest-produce obtained by the exercise of the rights claimed may be sold or bartered.

14. After making such record, the Forest Settlement Officer shall, to the best of his ability, and having due regard to the maintenance of the Reserved Forest in respect of which the claim is made, pass such orders as will ensure the continued exercise of the rights so admitted. For this purpose, the Forest Settlement Officer may—

(a) set out some other forest-tract of sufficient extent, and in a locality reasonably convenient for the purposes of such claimants, and record an order conferring upon them a right of pasture or to forest-produce (as the case may be) to the extent so admitted; or

(b) so alter the limits of the proposed Forest as to exclude forest-land of sufficient extent, and in a locality reasonably convenient, for the purposes of the claimants; or

(c) record an order, continuing to such claimants a right of pasture or to forest-produce (as the case may be), to the extent so admitted, at such seasons, within such portions of the proposed Forest and under such rules as may from time to time be prescribed by the Local Government.

15. In case the Forest Settlement Officer finds it impossible, having due regard to the maintenance of the Reserved Forest, to make such settlement under section fourteen as shall ensure the continued exercise of the said rights to the extent so admitted, he shall (subject to such rules as the Local Government may from time to time prescribe in this behalf) commute such rights, either by the payment to such persons of a sum of money in lieu thereof, or by the grant of land, or in such other manner as he thinks fit.

16. Any person who has made a claim under this Act, or any Forest-officer or other person generally or specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, may, within three months from the date of the order passed on such claim by the Forest Settlement Officer under section ten, eleven, fourteen or fifteen, present an appeal from such order to such officer of the Revenue Department, of rank not lower than that of a Collector or Deputy Commissioner, as the Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, appoint by name, or as holding an office, to hear appeals from such orders :

Provided that if the Local Government establishes (as it is hereby empowered to do) a Court (hereinafter called the Forest Court) composed of three persons to be appointed by the Local Government, such appeals shall be presented to such Court.

17. Every appeal under section sixteen shall be made by petition in writing, and may be delivered to the Forest Settlement Officer, who shall forward it without delay to the authority competent to hear the same.

If the appeal be to an officer appointed under section sixteen, it shall be heard in the manner prescribed for the time being for the hearing of appeals in matters relating to land-revenue.

If the appeal be to the Forest-court, the Court shall fix a day and a convenient place in the neighbourhood of the proposed forest for hearing the appeal, and shall give notice thereof to the parties, and shall hear such appeal accordingly.

The order passed thereon by such officer or Court, or by the majority of the members of such Court, shall be final, subject to revision by the Local Government.

18. The Local Government, or any person who has made a claim under this Act, may appoint any person to appear, plead and act on its or his behalf before the Forest Settlement Officer, or the appellate officer or Court, in the course of any inquiry or appeal under this Act.

19. When the following events have occurred (namely),—

(a) the period fixed under section six for preferring claims has elapsed, and all claims (if any) made within such period have been disposed of by the Forest Settlement Officer ; and

(b) if such claims have been made, and the period limited by section sixteen for appealing from the orders passed on such claims has elapsed, and all appeals (if any) presented within such period have been disposed of by the appellate officer or Court ; and

(c) all lands (if any) to be included in the proposed forest, which the Forest Settlement Officer has, under section ten, elected to acquire under the Land Acquisition Act, 1870, have become vested in the Government under section sixteen of that Act, the Local Government may publish a notification in the local official Gazette, specifying definitely, according to boundary-marks erected or otherwise, the limits of the forest which it is intended to reserve, and declaring the same to be reserved from a date fixed by such notification.

From the date so fixed, such forest shall be deemed to be a Reserved Forest.

20. The Forest-officer shall, before the date fixed by such notification, cause a translation thereof into the language of the country to be published in every town and village in the neighbourhood of the forest.

21. The Local Government may, within five years from the publication of any notification under section nineteen, revise any arrangement made under section fourteen or seventeen, and may, for this purpose, rescind or modify any order made under section fourteen or seventeen, and direct that any one of the proceedings specified in section fourteen be taken in lieu of any other of such proceedings, or that the rights admitted under section eleven be commuted under section fifteen.

22. No right of any description shall be acquired in or over a Reserved Forest, except by succession or under a grant or contract in writing made by or on behalf of the Government or of some person in whom such right was vested when the notification under section nineteen was issued.

23. Notwithstanding anything contained in section twenty-two, no right continued under section fourteen, clause (c), shall be alienated by way of grant, sale, lease, mortgage or otherwise, without the sanction of the Local Government : provided that when any such right is appendant to any land or house, it may be sold or otherwise alienated with such land or house.

No timber or other forest-produce obtained in exercise of any such right shall be sold or bartered except to such extent as may have been admitted in the order recorded under section thirteen.

24. The Forest-officer may from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Local Government or of any officer duly authorized in that behalf, stop any public or private way or water-course in a Reserved Forest ; provided, that a substitute for the way or water-course so stopped, which the Local Government deems to be reasonably convenient, already exists, or has been provided or constructed by the Forest-officer in lieu thereof.

25. Any person who—

(a) makes any fresh clearing prohibited by section five, or

(b) sets fire to a Reserved Forest, or kindles any fire in such manner as to endanger the same ; or who, in a Reserved Forest,

(c) kindles, keeps or carries any fire except at such seasons as the Forest-officer may from time to time notify in this behalf ;

(d) trespasses or pastures cattle or permits cattle to trespass ;

(e) causes any damage by negligence in felling any tree or cutting or dragging any timber ;

(f) fells, girdles, lops, taps or burns any tree, or strips-off the bark or leaves from, or otherwise damages, the same ;

(g) quarries stone, burns lime or charcoal, or collects, subjects to any manufacturing process or removes, any forest-produce ;

(4) clears or breaks up any land for cultivation, or any other purpose ; or,

(5) in contravention of any rules which the Local Government may from time to time prescribe, kills or catches elephants, hunts, shoots, fishes, poisons water, or sets traps or snares ; shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine not exceeding five hundred rupees, or with both, in addition to such compensation for damage done to the forest as the convicting Court may direct to be paid.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prohibit (a) any act done by permission in writing of the Forest-officer, or under any rule made by the Local Government ; or (b) the exercise of any right continued under section fourteen, clause (c), or created by grant or contract in writing made by or on behalf of Government under section twenty-two.

Whenever fire is caused wilfully or by gross negligence in a Reserved Forest, the Local Government may (notwithstanding that any penalty has been inflicted under this section) direct that in such forest or any portion thereof the exercise of all rights of pasture or to forest-produce shall be suspended for such period as it thinks fit.

26. The Local Government may, with the Power to declare forest no longer reserved. previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, by notification in the local official Gazette, direct that, from a date fixed by such notification, any forest or any portion thereof reserved under this Act shall cease to be a Reserved Forest.

From the date so fixed, such forest or portion shall cease to be reserved ; but the rights (if any) which have been extinguished therein shall not revive in consequence of such cessation.

CHAPTER III.

OF VILLAGE-FORESTS.

27. The Local Government may from time to time assign to any village-
Formation of village forests. community the rights of Government to or over any land which has been constituted a Reserved Forest, and may cancel such assignment. All forests so assigned shall be called Village-forests.

The Local Government may from time to time make rules for regulating the management of Village-forests, prescribing the conditions under which the community to which any such assignment is made may be provided with timber or other forest-produce, or pasture, and their duties for the protection and improvement of such forest.

All provisions of this Act relating to Reserved Forests shall (so far as they are consistent with the rules so made) apply to Village-forests.

CHAPTER IV.

OF PROTECTED FORESTS.

28. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the "Protected Forests." local official Gazette, declare the provisions of this chapter applicable to any forest-land or waste-land which is not included in a Reserved Forest, but which is the property of Government, or over which the Government has proprietary rights, or to the whole or any part of the forest-produce of which the Government is entitled.

The forest-land and waste-lands comprised in any such notification shall be called a "Protected Forest."

No such notification shall be made unless the nature and extent of the rights of Government and of private persons in or over the forest-land or waste-land comprised therein have been enquired into and recorded at a survey or settlement, or in such other manner as the Local Government thinks sufficient.

Every such record shall be presumed to be correct until the contrary is proved.

Provided that, if in the case of any forest-land or waste-land, the Local Government thinks that such enquiry and record are necessary, but that they will occupy such length of time as that the rights of Government will in the meantime be endangered, the Local Government may (pending such enquiry and record) declare such land to be a protected forest, but so as not to abridge or affect any existing rights of individuals or communities.

29. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in Power to issue notification— the local official Gazette,—

(a) declare any class of trees in a protected forest, or any trees in any such forest, to be reserved from a date fixed by such notification ;

(b) declare that a portion of such forest be closed for such term not exceeding twenty years as the Local Government thinks fit, and that the rights of private persons (if any) over such portion shall be suspended during such term : provided that the remainder of such forest be sufficient, and in a locality reasonably convenient, for the due exercise of the rights suspended in the portion so closed ;

(c) prohibit, from a date fixed as aforesaid, the quarrying of stone, or the burning of lime or charcoal, or the collection or subjection to any manufacturing process, or removal, of any forest-produce, in any such forest, and the breaking up or clearing for cultivation, for building, for herding cattle or for any other purpose, any land in any such forest : and

(d) alter or cancel such declaration or prohibition.

30. The Collector or Deputy Commissioner of the district shall cause a Publication of translation of such notification in neighbourhood. translation into the language of the district, of every notification issued under section twenty-nine, to be affixed in a conspicuous place in every town and village in the neighbourhood of the forest comprised in the notification.

31. The Local Government may from time to time make rules to regulate the following matters:—

Power to make rules for protected forests.

(a) the cutting, sawing, conversion and removal of trees and timber, and the collection, manufacture and removal of forest-produce, from protected forests;

(b) the granting of licenses to the inhabitants of towns and villages in the vicinity of protected forests to take trees, timber or other forest-produce for their own use, and the production and return of such licenses by such persons;

(c) the granting of licenses to persons felling or removing trees or timber or other forest-produce from such forests for the purposes of trade, and the production and return of such licenses by such persons;

(d) the payments (if any) to be made by the persons mentioned in clauses (b) and (c) of this section, for permission to cut such trees, or to collect and remove such timber or other forest-produce;

(e) the other payments, if any, to be made by them in respect of such trees, timber and produce, and the places where such payments shall be made;

(f) the examination of forest-produce passing out of such forests;

(g) the clearing and breaking up of land for cultivation or other purposes in such forests;

(h) the protection from fire of timber lying in such forests and of trees reserved under section twenty-nine;

(i) the cutting of grass and pasturing of cattle in such forests;

(j) killing or catching elephants, hunting, shooting, fishing, poisoning water, and setting traps or snares in such forests;

(k) the protection and management of any portion of a forest closed under section twenty-nine;

(l) the exercise of rights referred to in section twenty-eight.

Penalties for acts in contravention of notification under section 29.

32. Any person who commits any of the following offences:—

(a) fells, girdles, lops, taps or burns any tree reserved under section twenty-nine, or strips off the bark or leaves from, or otherwise damages, any such tree;

(b) contrary to any prohibition under section twenty-nine, quarries any stone, or burns any lime or charcoal, or collects, subjects to any manufacturing process, or removes, any forest-produce;

(c) contrary to any prohibition under section twenty-nine, breaks up or clears for cultivation or any other purpose any land in any protected forest;

(d) sets fire to such forest, or kindles a fire without taking all reasonable precautions to prevent its spreading to any trees reserved under section twenty-nine, whether standing, fallen or felled, or to any closed portion of such forest;

(e) leaves burning any fire kindled by him in the vicinity of any such trees or closed portion;

(f) fells any tree or drags any timber so as to damage any tree reserved as aforesaid;

(g) permits cattle to damage any such tree;

(h) infringes any rule made under section thirty-one, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

33. Nothing in this chapter shall be deemed to prohibit any act done with the permission in writing of the Forest-officer, or in accordance with rules made under section thirty-one, or (except as regards any portion of a forest closed under section twenty-nine) in the exercise of any right recorded under section twenty-eight.

CHAPTER V.

FORESTS UNDER CONSERVANCY ADMINISTRATION WHEN THIS ACT COMES INTO FORCE.

34. Within twelve months from the date on which this Act comes into force in the territories administered by any Local Government, such Government shall, after consideration of the rights of the Government and private persons in all forest-lands or waste-lands then under its executive control for purposes of Forest Conservancy, determine which of such lands (if any) can, according to justice, equity and good conscience, be classed as Reserved Forests or Protected Forests under this Act, and declare, by notification in the local official Gazette, any lands so classed to be Reserved or Protected Forests, as the case may be:

Provided that such declaration shall not affect any rights of the Government or private persons to or over any land or forest-produce in any such forest, which have, previous to the date of such declaration, been enquired into, settled and recorded in a manner which the Local Government thinks sufficient:

Provided also that if any such rights have not on such date been so enquired into, settled and recorded, the Local Government shall direct that the same shall be enquired into, settled and recorded in the manner provided by this Act for Reserved or Protected Forests, as the case may be; and until such enquiry, settlement and record have been completed, no such declaration shall abridge or affect such rights.

CHAPTER VI.

OF THE CONTROL OVER FORESTS AND LANDS NOT BEING THE PROPERTY OF GOVERNMENT.

35. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, regulate or prohibit in any forest or waste-land—

(a) the breaking up or clearing of land for cultivation;

(b) the pasturing of cattle;

(c) the firing or clearing of the vegetation;

when such regulation or prohibition appears necessary for any of the following purposes:—

First.—For protection against storms, winds, rolling stones, floods and avalanches;

Second.—For the preservation of the soil on the ridges and slopes, and in the valleys, of hilly tracts, the prevention of landslips and of the formation of ravines and torrents, and the protection of land against erosion, or the deposit thereon of sand, stones or gravel;

Third.—For the maintenance of a water-supply in springs, rivers and tanks;

Fourth.—For the protection of roads, bridges, railways and other lines of communication;

Fifth.—For the preservation of the public health; and may alter or cancel such notification.

The Local Government may, for any such purpose, construct at its own expense, in or upon any forest or waste-land, such work as it thinks fit:

Provided that no such notification shall be made or work begun until after the issue of a notice to the owner of such forest or land, calling on him to shew cause, within a reasonable period to be specified in such notice, why such notification should not be made or work constructed, and until his objections (if any) and any evidence he may produce in support of the same have been heard by an officer duly appointed in that behalf, and have been considered by the Local Government.

36. In case of neglect of, or wilful disobedience

Power to assume management of forests. to, any regulation or prohibition under section thirty-five, or if the purposes of any work to be constructed under that section so require, the Local Government may, after notice in writing to the owner of such forest or land, and after considering his objections (if any), place the same under the control of a Forest-officer, and may declare that all or any of the provisions of this Act relating to Reserved Forests shall apply to such forest or land.

The nett profits (if any) arising from the management of such forest or land shall be paid to the said proprietor.

37. In any case under this chapter in which Expropriation of forests in certain cases. the Local Government considers that, in lieu of placing the forest or land under the control of a Forest-officer, the same should be acquired for public purposes, the Local Government may proceed to acquire it in the manner prescribed by the Land Acquisition Act, 1870.

The owner of any forest or land comprised in any notification under section thirty-five may, at any time not less than three or more than twelve years from the date thereof, require that such forest or land shall be acquired for public purposes, and the Local Government shall acquire such forest or land accordingly.

38. The owner of any land or, if there be more

Protection of forests at request of owners. than one owner thereof, the owners of shares therein amounting in the aggregate to at least two-thirds thereof may, with a view to the formation or conservation of forests thereon, represent in writing to the Collector or Deputy Commissioner their desire—

(a) that such land be managed on their behalf by the Forest-officer as a Reserved or a Protected Forest on such terms as may be mutually agreed upon; or

(b) that all or any of the provisions of this Act be applied to such land.

In either case, the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, apply to such land such provisions of this Act as it thinks suitable to the circumstances thereof and as may be desired by the applicants.

Any such notification may be altered or cancelled by a like notification.

CHAPTER VII.

OF THE DUTY ON TIMBER.

39. The Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may levy a duty in such manner, at such places, and at such rates, as it may from time to time prescribe by notification in the local official Gazette on all timber—

(a) which is produced in British India, and in respect of which the Government has any right;

(b) which is brought from any place beyond the frontier of British India.

In every case in which such duty is directed to be levied ad valorem, the Local Government may, with the like sanction, from time to time fix, by like notification, the value on which such duty shall be assessed.

All duties on timber, which, at the time when this Act comes into force in any territory, are levied therein under the authority of the Local Government, shall be deemed to be and to have been duly levied under the provisions of this Act.

40. Nothing in this chapter shall be deemed to Limit not to apply to purchase-money or royalty. limit the amount (if any) chargeable as purchase-money or royalty on any timber or other forest-produce, although the same is levied on such timber or produce while in transit, in the same manner as duty is levied.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF THE CONTROL OF TIMBER AND OTHER FOREST-PRODUCE IN TRANSIT.

41. The control of all rivers and their banks as regards the floating of timber, as well as the control of all timber and other forest-produce in transit by land or water, is vested in the Local Government, and it may from time to time make rules to regulate the transit of all timber and other forest-produce.

Such rules may (among other matters)—

(a) prescribe the routes by which alone timber and other forest-produce may be imported, exported or moved, into, from, or within, British India;

(b) prohibit the import and export or moving of such timber or other produce without a pass from an officer duly authorized to issue the same, or otherwise than in accordance with the conditions of such pass;

(c) provide for the issue, production and return of such passes and for the payment of fees therefor;

(d) provide for the stoppage, reporting, examination and marking of timber or other forest-produce in transit, in respect of which there is reason to believe that any money is payable to Government on account of the price thereof, or on account of any duty, fee, royalty or charge due thereon, or to which it is desirable for the purposes of this Act to affix a mark;

(e) provide for the establishment and regulation of depôts to which such timber or other produce shall be taken by those in charge of it for examination, or for the payment of such money, or in order that such marks may be affixed to it; and the conditions under which such timber or other produce shall be brought to, stored at, and removed from, such depôt;

(f) prohibit the closing up or obstructing of the channel or banks of any river used for the transit of timber or other forest-produce, and the throwing of grass, brushwood, branches and leaves into any such river, or any act which may cause such river to be closed or obstructed;

(g) provide for the prevention and removal of any obstruction of the channel or banks of any such river, and for recovering the cost of such prevention or removal from the person whose acts or negligence necessitated the same;

(h) prohibit absolutely or subject to conditions, within specified local limits, the establishment of saw-pits, the converting, cutting, burning, concealing or marking of timber, the altering or effacing of any marks on the same, and the possession or carrying of marking-hammers or other implements used for marking timber;

(i) regulate the use of property-marks for timber, and the registration of such marks; prescribe the time for which such registration shall hold good; limit the number of such marks that may be registered by any one person, and provide for the levy of fees for such registration.

42. The Local Government may by such rules prescribe as penalties for the infringement thereof imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or both.

Double penalties may be inflicted in cases where the offence is committed after sunset and before sunrise, or after preparation for resistance to lawful authority, or if the offender has been previously convicted of a like offence.

43. The Government shall not be responsible for any loss or damage which may occur in respect of any timber or other forest-produce while at a depôt established under a rule made under section forty-one, or while detained elsewhere for the purposes of this Act; and no Forest-officer shall be responsible for any such loss or damage unless he causes such loss or damage negligently, maliciously or fraudulently.

44. In case of any accident or emergency involving danger to any property at any such depôt, every person employed at such depôt, whether by the Government or by any private person, shall render assistance to any Forest-officer or Police-officer demanding his aid in averting such danger and securing such property from damage or loss.

CHAPTER IX.

OF THE COLLECTION OF DRIFT AND STRANDED TIMBER.

45. All timber found adrift, beached, stranded, or sunk;

Certain kinds of timber to be deemed property of Government until title thereto proved, and may be collected accordingly.

all wood or timber bearing marks which have not been registered under section forty-one, or on which the marks have been obliterated, altered or defaced by fire or otherwise, and in such areas as the Local Government directs, all unmarked wood and timber, shall be deemed to be the property of Government unless and until any person establishes his right and title thereto, as provided in this chapter.

Such timber may be collected by any Forest-officer or other person entitled to collect the same by virtue of any rule made under section fifty-one, and may be brought to such depôts as the Forest-officer may from time to time notify as depôts for the reception of drift-timber.

The Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, exempt any class of timber from the provisions of this section, and withdraw such exemption.

46. Public notice shall from time to time be given by the Forest-officer, of timber collected under section forty-five. Such notice shall contain a description of the timber, and shall require any person claiming the same to present to such officer, within a period not less than two months from the date of such notice, a written statement of such claim.

47. When any such statement is presented as aforesaid, the Forest-officer may, after making such enquiry as he thinks fit, either reject the claim after recording his reasons for so doing, or deliver the timber to the claimant.

If such timber is claimed by more than one person, the Forest-officer may either deliver the same to any of such persons whom he deems entitled thereto, or may refer the claimants to the Civil Courts, and retain the timber pending the receipt of an order from any such Court for its disposal.

Any person whose claim has been rejected under this section may, within two months from the date of such rejection, institute a suit to recover possession of the timber claimed by him; but no person shall recover any compensation or costs against the Government, or against any Forest-officer, on account of such rejection, or the detention or removal of any timber, or the delivery thereof to any other person under this section.

No such timber shall be subject to process of any Civil, Criminal, or Revenue Court until it has been delivered, or a suit has been brought, as provided in this section.

48. If no such statement is presented as aforesaid, or if the claimant omits to prefer his claim in the manner and within the period prescribed by the notice issued under section forty-six, or, on such claim having been so preferred by him and having been rejected, omits to institute a suit to recover possession of such timber within the further period limited by section forty-seven, the ownership of such timber shall vest in the Government, or when such timber has been delivered to another person under section forty-seven, in such other person, free from all encumbrances.

49. The Government shall not be responsible for any loss or damage which may occur in respect of any timber collected under this section.

Government and its officers not liable for damage to such timber.

section forty-five, and no Forest-officer shall be responsible for any such loss or damage, unless he causes such loss or damage negligently, maliciously or fraudulently.

50. No person shall be entitled to recover possession of any timber collected or delivered as aforesaid until he has paid to the Forest-officer or other person entitled to receive it such sum on account thereof as may be due under any rule made in pursuance of section fifty-one.

Payments to be made by claimant before timber is delivered to him.

51. The Local Government may from time to time make rules to regulate the following matters (namely) —

Power to make rules and prescribe penalties.

(a) the salving, collection and disposal of all timber mentioned in section forty-five;

(b) the use and registration of boats used in salving and collecting timber;

(c) the amounts to be paid for salving, collecting, moving, storing and disposing of such timber;

(d) the use and registration of hammers and other instruments to be used for marking such timber.

The Local Government may from time to time prescribe, as penalties for the infringement of any rules made under this section, imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or both.

CHAPTER X.

PENALTIES AND PROCEDURE.

52. When there is reason to believe that a forest-offence has been committed in respect of any forest-produce, such produce, together with all tools, boats, carts and cattle used in committing any such offence, may be seized by any Forest-officer or Police-officer.

Seizure of property liable to confiscation.

Every officer seizing any property under this section shall place on such property a mark indicating that the same has been so seized, and shall, as soon as may be, make a report of such seizure to the Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the offence on account of which the seizure has been made:

Application for confiscation.

Provided that when the forest-produce with respect to which such offence is believed to have been committed is the property of Government and the offender is unknown, it shall be sufficient if the officer makes, as soon as may be, a report of the circumstances to his official superior.

53. Upon the receipt of any such report the Magistrate shall, with all convenient dispatch, take such measures as may be necessary for the arrest and trial of the offender and the disposal of the property according to law.

Procedure thereupon.

54. All timber or forest-produce which is not the property of Government and in respect of which a forest-offence has been committed, and all tools, boats, carts and cattle used in committing any forest-offence, shall be liable to confiscation.

Forest-produce, tools, &c., when liable to confiscation.

Such confiscation may be in addition to any other punishment prescribed for such offence.

55. When the trial of any forest-offence is concluded, any forest-produce in respect of which such offence has been committed shall, if it is the property of Government or has been confiscated, be taken charge of by a Forest-officer, and in any other case may be disposed of in such manner as the Court may direct.

Disposal, on conclusion of trial for forest-offence, of produce in respect of which it was committed.

56. When the offender is not known, or cannot be found, the Magistrate may, if he finds that an offence has been committed, order the property in respect of which the offence has been committed to be confiscated and taken charge of by the Forest-officer, or to be made over to the person whom he deems to be entitled to the same:

Procedure when offender not known, or cannot be found.

Provided that no such order shall be made until the expiration of one month from the date of seizing such property, or without hearing the person (if any) claiming any right thereto, and the evidence (if any) which he may produce in support of his claim.

57. The Magistrate may, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, direct the sale of any property seized under section fifty-two and subject to speedy and natural decay, and may deal with the proceeds as he would have dealt with such property if it had not been sold.

Procedure as to perishable property seized under section 52.

58. The officer who made the seizure under section fifty-two or any of his official superiors, or any person claiming to be interested in the property so seized, may, within one month from the date of any order passed under section fifty-four, fifty-five or fifty-six, appeal therefrom to the Court to which orders made by such Magistrate are ordinarily appealable, and the order passed on such appeal shall be final.

Appeal from orders under sections 54, 55 and 56.

59. When an order for the confiscation of any property has been passed under section fifty-four or fifty-six, as the case may be, and the period limited by section fifty-eight for an appeal from such order has elapsed and no such appeal has been preferred, or when, on such an appeal being preferred, the Appellate Court confirms such order in respect of the whole or a portion of such property, such property or such portion thereof, as the case may be, shall vest in the Government free from all incumbrances.

Property when to vest in Government.

60. Nothing hereinbefore contained shall be deemed to prevent any officer empowered in this behalf by the Local Government from directing at any time the immediate release of any property seized under section fifty-two.

Saving of power to release property seized.

61. Any Forest-officer or Police-officer who vexatiously and unnecessarily seizes any property on pretence of seizing property liable to confiscation under this Act, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Punishment for wrongful seizure.

62. Whoever, with intent to cause damage or injury to the public or to any person, or to cause wrongful gain as defined in the Indian Penal Code,—

Penalty for counterfeiting or defacing marks on trees and timber and for altering boundary-marks.

(a) knowingly counterfeits upon any timber or standing tree a mark used by Forest-officers to indicate that such timber or tree is the property of the Government or of some person, or that it may lawfully be cut or removed by some person; or

(b) alters, defaces or obliterates any such mark placed on a tree or on timber by or under the authority of a Forest-officer; or

(c) alters, moves, destroys or defaces any boundary-mark of any forest or wasteland to which the provisions of this Act are applied, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

63. Any Forest-officer or Police-officer may, without orders from a Magistrate and without a warrant, arrest any person against whom a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been concerned in any forest-offence punishable with imprisonment for one month or upwards.

Every officer making an arrest under this section shall without unnecessary delay take or send the person arrested before the Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize such arrest for any act which is an offence under chapter IV of this Act, unless such act has been prohibited under section twenty-nine, clause (c).

64. Every Forest-officer and Police-officer shall prevent, and may interfere for the purpose of preventing, the commission of any forest-offence.

Power to prevent commission of offence.

65. The Magistrate of the District, and any Magistrate of the first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, may try summarily, under the Code of Criminal Procedure, any forest-offence punishable only with imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or fine not exceeding five hundred rupees, or both.

Power to try offences summarily.

66. Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to prevent any person from being prosecuted under any other law for any act or omission which constitutes an offence against this Act or the rules made under it, or from being liable under such other law to any higher punishment or penalty than that provided by the rules made under this Act: Provided that no person shall be punished twice for the same offence.

67. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, empower any Forest-officer by name, or as holding an office, to accept from any person against whom a reasonable suspicion exists that he has committed any forest-offence other than an offence under section sixty-one or section sixty-two a sum of money by way of compensation for any damage which may have been committed, and to release any property which has been seized as liable to confiscation on payment of the value thereof as estimated by such officer.

On the payment of such sum of money or such value or both as the case may be to such officer, the accused person, if in custody, shall be discharged the property seized shall be released, and no further proceedings shall be taken under this Act against such person or property; but nothing herein contained shall exempt such person from prosecution on the same facts under any other law for the time being in force.

68. When in any proceedings taken under this Act, or in consequence of anything done under this Act, a question arises as to whether any forest-produce is the property of the Government, such produce shall be presumed to be the property of the Government until the contrary is proved Presumption that forest-produce belongs to Government.

CHAPTER XI.

CATTLE-TRESPASS.

69. Cattle trespassing in a Reserved Forest, or in any portion of a Protected Forest which has been lawfully closed to grazing, shall be deemed to be cattle doing damage to a public plantation within the meaning of the eleventh section of the Cattle-trespass Act, 1871, and may be seized and impounded as such by any Forest-officer or Police-officer.

Cattle-trespass Act, 1871, to apply.

70. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, direct that, in lieu of the fines fixed by the twelfth section of the Act last aforesaid, there shall be levied for each head of cattle impounded under section sixty-nine of this Act, such fines as it thinks fit, but not exceeding the following, that is to say:—

For each elephant	...	ten rupees.
For each buffalo or camel	...	two "
For each horse, mare, gelding, pony, colt, filly, mule, bull, bullock, cow or heifer	...	one rupee.
For each calf, ass, pig, ram, ewe, sheep, lamb, goat or kid	...	eight annas.

CHAPTER XII.

OF FOREST-OFFICERS.

71. The Local Government may invest any Forest-officer by name, or as holding an office, with the following powers, that is to say:—

Local Government may invest Forest-officers with certain powers.

(a) power to enter upon any land and to survey, demarcate, and make a map of the same;

(b) the powers of a Civil Court to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents;

(c) power to issue a search-warrant under the Code of Criminal Procedure;

(d) power to hold an enquiry into forest-offences, and, in the course of such enquiry, to receive and record evidence.

Any evidence recorded under clause (d) of this section shall be admissible in any subsequent trial before a Magistrate, provided that it has been taken in the presence of the accused person.

72. All Forest-officers shall be deemed to be public servants within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code.

Forest-officers deemed public servants.

73. No suit shall lie against any public servant for anything done by him in good faith under this Act.

Indemnity for acts done in good faith.

74. Except with the permission in writing of the Local Government, no Forest-officer shall, as principal or agent, trade in timber or other forest-produce, or be or become interested in any lease of any forest or in any contract for working any forest, whether in British or Foreign territory.

Forest-officers not to trade.

CHAPTER XIII.

SUBSIDIARY RULES.

75. The Local Government may from time to time make rules—

Additional powers to make rules.

(a) to prescribe and limit the powers and duties of any Forest-officer under this Act;

(b) to regulate the rewards to be paid to officers and informers out of the proceeds of fines and confiscations under this Act;

(c) for the preservation, reproduction and disposal of trees and timber belonging to Government, but grown on lands belonging to or in the occupation of private persons; and

(d) generally to carry out the provisions of this Act.

76. Any person breaking any rule under this Act, for the breach of which no special penalty is provided, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or both.

Penalties for breach of rules.

77. All rules made by the Local Government under this Act shall be published in the local official Gazette, and shall thereupon, so far as they are consistent with this Act, have the force of law:

Rules when to have force of law.

Provided that no rule made under section twenty-seven, thirty-one or forty-one shall be so published without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.

CHAPTER XIV.

MISCELLANEOUS.

78. Every person who exercises any right in a Reserved or Protected Forest, or who is permitted to take any forest-produce from, or to cut and remove timber or to pasture cattle in, such forest, and every person who is employed by any such person in such forest, and Persons bound to assist Forest-officer and Police-officers.

every person in any village contiguous to such forest who is employed by the Government, or who receives emoluments from the Government for services to be performed to the community, shall be bound to furnish without unnecessary delay to the nearest Forest-officer or Police-officer any information he may possess respecting the commission of, or intention to commit, any forest-offence, and shall assist any Forest-officer or Police-officer demanding his aid

(a) in extinguishing any fire occurring in such forest;

(b) in preventing any fire which may occur in the vicinity of such forest from spreading to such forest;

(c) in preventing the commission in such forest of any forest-offence; and

(d) when there is reason to believe that any such offence has been committed in such forest, in discovering and arresting the offender.

79. If the Government and any person be jointly interested in any forest or waste-land, or in the whole or any part of the produce thereof, the Local Government may from time to time either Management of forests the joint property of Government and other persons.

(a) undertake the management of such forest, waste-land or produce, accounting to such person for his interest in the same; or

(b) issue such regulations for the management of the forest, waste-land or produce by the person so jointly interested as it deems necessary for the management thereof and the interests of all parties therein.

When the Local Government undertakes, under clause (a) of this section, the management of any forest, waste-land or produce, it may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, declare that any of the provisions contained in chapters II and IV of this Act shall apply to such forest, waste land or produce, and thereupon such provisions shall apply accordingly.

80. If any person be entitled to a share in the produce of any forest which is the property of Government or over which the Government has proprietary rights, or to any part of the forest-produce of which the Government is entitled, upon the condition of duly performing any service connected with such forest, such share shall be liable to confiscation in the event of the fact being established to the satisfaction of the Local Government that such service is no longer so performed: Provided that no such share shall be confiscated until the person entitled thereto, and the evidence (if any) which he may produce in proof of the due performance of such service, have been heard by an officer duly appointed in that behalf by the Local Government.

Failure to perform service for which a share in produce of Government forest is enjoyed.

81. All money payable to the Government under this Act, or under any rule made under this Act, or on account of the price of any forest-produce, or of expenses incurred in the execution of this Act in respect of such produce, may, if not paid when due, be recovered under the law for the time being in force as if it were an arrear of land-revenue.

Recovery of money due to Government.

82. When any such money is payable for or in respect of any forest-produce, the amount thereof shall be deemed to be a first charge on such produce, and such produce may be taken possession of by a Forest-officer until such amount has been paid.

If such amount is not paid when due, the Forest-officer may sell such produce by public auction, and the proceeds of the sale shall be applied first in discharging such amount.

The surplus (if any), if not claimed within two months from the date of the sale by the person entitled thereto, shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

83. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any land is required for any of the purposes of this Act, such land shall be deemed to be needed for a public purpose within the meaning of the Land Acquisition Act, 1870, section four.

(a) goods imported or exported by sea into or from any Customs-port from or to any Foreign Port;

(b) opium, salt or salted fish imported by sea from any Customs-port into any other Customs-port;

(c) goods brought from any Foreign Port to any Customs-port, and without payment of duty, there transhipped for, or thence carried to, and imported at any other Customs-port; and

(d) goods brought in bond from one Customs-port to another:

Provided that no such duties shall be levied on goods belonging to the Government.

21. Except as otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, goods whereof any article liable to duty under this Act forms a part or ingredient shall be chargeable with the full duty which would be payable on such goods if they were entirely composed of such article, or if composed of more than one article liable to duty then with the full duty which would be payable on such goods if they were entirely composed of the article charged with the highest rate of duty.

22. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, fix, for the purpose of levying duties, tariff-values of any goods exported or imported by sea on which Customs-duties are by law imposed, and alter any such values fixed by any Tariff Act for the time being in force.

23. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, exempt any goods imported into, or exported from, British India, or into or from any specified Port therein, from the whole or any part of the Customs-duties leviable on such goods.

The Local Government may, by special order in each case, exempt from the payment of duty, under circumstances of an exceptional nature, to be stated in such order, any goods on which Customs-duties are leviable.

24. The Customs-collector may, subject to any general rules relating to the landing and shipping of passengers' baggage and the passing of the same through the Custom-house, which may be made under section 75, pass free of duty any baggage in actual use, and for this purpose may determine, subject to any such rules, whether any goods shall be treated as baggage in actual use, or as goods subject to duty.

25. If goods produced or manufactured in British India be imported into any Customs-port from any Foreign Port, such goods shall be liable to all the duties, conditions and restrictions (if any) to which goods of the like kind and value not so produced or manufactured are liable on the first importation thereof:

Provided that, if such importation takes place within three years after the exportation of such goods, and it is proved to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector that the property in such goods has continued in the person by whom, or on whose account, they were exported, the goods may be admitted without payment of duty.

26. Any goods produced or manufactured in British India which have been exported therefrom, and on the exportation of which any drawback of excise has been received shall, on being imported into any Customs-port, be subjected, unless the Chief Customs-Authority in any particular case otherwise directs by special order, to payment of excise duty, at the rate to which goods of the like kind and quality are liable at such port.

27. All goods derelict, jetsam, flotsam and wreck, brought or coming into any place in British India shall be subject to the same duties, if any, to which goods of the like kind are for the time being subject on importation at any Customs-port and shall in other respects be dealt with as if they were imported from a foreign port, unless it be shown to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector that such goods are the produce or manufacture of any place, from which they are entitled to be admitted duty-free.

28. Provisions and stores produced or manufactured in British India, required for use on board of any vessel proceeding to any Foreign Port, may be shipped free of duty, whether of customs or excise, in such quantities as the Customs-collector determines with reference to the tonnage of the vessel, the numbers of the crew and passengers, and the length of the voyage on which the vessel is about to depart:

Provided that no rum shall be so shipped on any vessel going on a voyage of less than thirty days' probable duration.

29. On the importation into, or exportation from, any Customs-port of any goods, whether liable to duty or not, the owner of such goods shall, in his bill of entry or shipping-bill, as the case may be, state the real value, quantity, and description of such goods to the best of his knowledge and belief, and shall subscribe a declaration of the truth of such statement at the foot of such bill.

In case of doubt, the Customs-collector may require any such owner or any other person in possession of any invoice, broker's note, policy of insurance or other document, whereby the real value, quantity, or description of any such goods can be ascertained, to produce the same, and to furnish any information relating to such value, quantity, or description which it is in his power to furnish. And thereupon such person shall produce such document and furnish such information:

Provided that, if the owner makes and subscribes a declaration before the Customs-collector to the effect that he is unable, from want of full information, to state the real value or contents of any case, package or parcel of goods, then the Customs-collector shall permit him, previous to the entry thereof, (1) to open such case, package or parcel, and examine the contents in presence of an officer of Customs, or (2) to deposit such case, package or parcel in a public warehouse appointed under section 15 without warehousing the same, pending the production of such information.

30. For the purposes of this Act the real value shall be deemed to be—

(a) the wholesale cash-price, less trade-discount, for which goods of the like kind and quality are sold, or are capable of being sold, at the time and place of importation or exportation as the case may be, without any abatement or deduction whatever, except (in the case of goods imported) of the amount of the duties payable on the importation thereof: or,

(b) where such price is not ascertainable, the cost at which goods of the like kind and quality could be delivered at such place without any abatement or deduction except as aforesaid.

31. Goods chargeable with duty upon the Examination of ad-value thereof, but for which valorem goods. a specific value is not fixed by law for the purpose of levying duties thereon, shall, without unnecessary delay, be examined by an officer of Customs. If it appears that the real value of such goods is correctly stated in the bill-of-entry or shipping-bill, the goods shall be assessed in accordance therewith.

32. If it appears that such goods are properly chargeable with a higher rate or amount of duty than that to which they would be subject according to the value thereof as stated in the bill-of-entry or shipping-bill, such officer may detain such goods.

In every such case the detaining officer shall forthwith give notice in writing to the owner of the goods of their detention, and of the value thereof as estimated by him; and the Customs-collector shall, within two clear working days after such detention, or within such reasonable period as may with the consent of the parties be arranged, determine either to deliver such goods on payment of duty charged according to the entry of such owner, or to retain the same for the use of Government.

If the goods be retained for the use of Government, the Customs-collector shall cause the full amount stated in the bill as their real value to be paid to the owner in full satisfaction for such goods, in the same manner as if they had been transferred by ordinary sale, and shall, after due notice in the local official Gazette, or some local newspaper and without unnecessary delay, cause them to be put up to public auction in wholesale lots for cash on delivery.

If the Customs-collector deems the highest offer made at such sale to be inadequate, he may either adjourn the sale to some other day, to be notified as aforesaid, or buy in the goods, and without unnecessary delay dispose of them for the benefit of Government.

If the proceeds arising from such sale exceed the sum paid to the owner, together with (in the case of goods imported) the duty to which the goods are liable and all charges incurred by Government in connection with them, a portion not exceeding one-half of the overplus shall, at the discretion of the Chief Officer of Customs, be payable to the officer who detected the under-valuation of the goods.

Nothing in this section shall prevent the Chief Officer of Customs, when he has reason to believe that any such under-valuation was solely the result of accident or error, from permitting the owner of the goods, on his application for that purpose, to amend such entry, on payment of such increased rate of duties on the excess of the amended over the original valuation, or on such other terms as the Chief Officer of Customs may determine.

33. If, on the first examination of any such goods under section 31, the owner thereof states in writing that such goods are, in consequence of damage sustained before delivery of the bill of entry, of value less than that stated in such bill, the Customs-collector, on being satisfied of the fact, may allow abatement of duty accordingly.

The reduced duty to be levied on such goods may be ascertained by either of the following methods, at the option of the owner—

(a) the real value of such goods may be fixed on appraisal by an officer of Customs and the duty may be assessed on the value so fixed; or

(b) the goods may, after due notice in the local official Gazette or some local newspaper, be sold by public auction at such time (within thirty days from the date of delivery of the bill of entry), and at such place, as the Customs-collector appoints; and the duty may be assessed on the gross amount realized by such sale, without any abatement or deduction, except (in the case of goods imported) of so much as represents the duties payable on the importation thereof.

34. When any goods, the value of which has been fixed by law for the purpose of levying duties thereon, have, before delivery of the bill-of-entry, deteriorated to the extent of more than one-tenth of their value, the duty on such goods shall if the owner thereof so desires be assessed ad valorem.

The real value of such goods shall be ascertained as provided in section 33, and the duty shall be assessed thereon.

35. No abatement of duty on account of damage shall be allowed on wines, spirit or beer, or on any other articles on which duties are levied on quantity and not on value.

36. Except as provided in section 34, no amendment of a bill of entry or shipping-bill relating to goods assessed for duty on the declared value, quantity, or description thereof shall be allowed after such goods have been removed from the Custom-house.

37. The rate of duty and the tariff valuation (if any) applicable to any goods imported shall be the rate and valuation in force on the date on which the bill of entry thereof is delivered to the Customs-collector under section 86:

Provided that when such rate or valuation has been raised after the grant of port-clearance at the port of shipment, the rate and valuation applicable to such goods shall be the rate and valuation in force on the date of such grant.

Provided also that if such goods are warehoused and re-assessed under section 115 of this Act, the rate and valuation applicable thereto shall be the rate and valuation in force at the time when application is made to clear such goods for home consumption.

Explanation.—A bill of entry shall for the purposes of this section be deemed to be delivered when it is first presented to the proper officer of Customs.

38. The rate of duty and tariff valuation (if any) applicable to any goods exported shall be the rate and valuation in force when a shipping-bill of such goods is delivered under section 137.

39. When Customs-duties or charges have been short-levied through inadvertence, error, collusion or misconstruction on the part of the officers of Customs, or through mis-statement as to real value, quantity, or description on the part of the owner, or when any such duty, or charge after having been levied, has been owing to any such cause erroneously refunded, the person chargeable with the duty or charge so short-levied, or to whom such refund has erroneously been made, shall pay the deficiency or repay the amount paid to him in excess, on demand being made within three months from the date of the first assessment or making of the refund; and the Customs-collector may refuse to pass any goods belonging to such person until the said deficiency or excess be paid or repaid.

40. No Customs-duties or charges which have been paid, and of which repayment, wholly or in part, is claimed in consequence of the same having been paid through inadvertence, error or misconception, shall be returned, unless such claim is made within three months from the date of such payment.

41. The Customs-collector may, if he thinks fit, instead of requiring payment of Customs-duties and charges due from any mercantile firm or public body, at the time such duties and charges are payable under this Act, keep with such firm or body an account current of such duties and charges. Such account shall be settled at intervals not exceeding one month, and such firm or body shall make a deposit or furnish security sufficient in the opinion of the Customs-collector to cover the amount which may at any time be due from them in respect of such duties and charges.

CHAPTER VI.

DRAWBACK.

42. When any goods, capable of being easily identified, which have been imported by sea into any Customs-port from any Foreign Port, and upon which duties of Customs have been paid on importation, are re-exported by sea from such Customs-port to any Foreign Port, or as provisions or stores for use on board a ship proceeding to a Foreign Port, seven-eighths of such duties shall, except as otherwise hereinafter, provided be repaid as drawback:

Provided that, in every such case, the goods be identified to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector at such Customs-port, and that the re-export be made within two years from the date of importation, as shown by the records of the Custom-house, or within such extended term as the Chief Customs-Authority, on sufficient cause being shown, in any case determines.

43. When any goods having been charged with import-duty at one Customs-port and thence exported to another, are re-exported by sea as aforesaid, drawback shall be allowed on such goods as if they had been so re-exported from the former port.

Provided that, in every such case, the goods be identified to the satisfaction of the officer in charge of the Custom-house at the Port of final exportation, and that such final exportation be made within three years from the date on which they were first imported into British India.

44. A drawback of the whole of the Customs-duties shall be allowed on wine and spirit intended for the consumption of any officer of Her Majesty's Navy, on board of any of Her Majesty's ships in actual service, unless such wine and spirit have been warehoused without payment of duty on the first entry thereof.

The quantity of wine and spirit on which drawback may be so allowed in any one year for the use of such officers shall not exceed the quantities hereinafter allowed for each such officer respectively; that is to say—

	Gals.
For every Admiral ...	1,260
Vice-Admiral ...	1,050
Rear-Admiral ...	840
Captain of 1st and 2nd rate ...	630
Captain of 3rd, 4th and 5th rate ...	420
Captain of an inferior rate ...	210
Lieutenant or other Commanding Officer, Marine-officer, Master, Purser or Surgeon ...	105

45. Every person clearing and claiming drawback for wine or spirit, as provided in section 44, shall state in the shipping bill the name of the officer for whose use such wine or spirit is intended, and of the ship in which he serves, as well as the place and date of the last supply for which drawback was allowed.

All such wine and spirit shall be delivered into the charge of the proper officers of Customs at the Port of shipment, to be shipped under their care; and when the officer commanding the ship has certified the receipt of such wine and spirit into his charge, and any such officer of Customs has certified the shipment, the drawback shall be paid to the person entitled to receive the same.

46. The Customs-collector may permit the transfer of any such wine or spirit from one Naval officer to another. to another Naval officer on board of the same, or of any other such vessel, as part of his authorized quantity; or may permit the transshipment of any such wine or spirit from one vessel to another for the use of the same Naval officer; or the re-landing and warehousing of any such wine or spirit for future re-shipment.

The Customs-collector may also receive back the duties for any such wine or spirit, and allow the same to be cleared for home-consumption.

47. Provisions and stores for the use of Her Majesty's Navy or of any officer thereof which are subject to duty may, in like manner, be transferred, transhipped or relanded and warehoused, free of duty; and where duties have been paid on any such provisions or stores required for shipment, drawback of such duties, whether of customs or excise, shall be allowed on receipt of an application in writing from the officer commanding the ship for which they are intended, or from some other officer duly authorized to make such application.

48. The provisions of sections 44, 45, 46 and 47 as to officers of Her Majesty's Navy apply also to officers of Her Majesty's Indian Marine and Marine-survey on board of any of the ships of such Marine or Survey proceeding to any port out of India, and the rules prescribed by section 47 as to provisions and stores for the use of Her Majesty's Navy apply also to provisions and stores for the use of such Marine or Survey.

49. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India,

(a) declare what goods shall, for the purpose of this chapter, be deemed to be capable of being easily identified; and

(b) prohibit the payment of drawback upon the re-exportation of goods to any specified Foreign Port in India.

50. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, no drawback shall be allowed—

(a) upon goods not included in the export-manifest, or

(b) where the goods to be exported are of less value than the amount of drawback claimed, or

(c) where the claim is for drawback amounting, in respect of any single shipment, to less than five rupees, and the Customs-collector thinks fit to reject it, or

(d) on salt, salted fish, or opium.

51. No drawback shall be allowed unless the claim to receive such drawback be made and established at the time of re-export.

No such payment of drawback shall be made until the vessel carrying the goods has put out to sea, or unless payment be demanded within six months from the date of entry for shipment.

52. Every person, or his duly authorized agent, claiming drawback on any goods duly exported, shall make and subscribe a declaration that such goods have been actually exported, and have not been re-landed and are not intended to be re-landed at any Customs-port; and that such person was at the time of entry, outwards and shipment, and continues to be, entitled to drawback thereon.

CHAPTER VII.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF VESSELS.

Arrival and entry of vessel inwards.

53. The Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, fix a place in any river or Port, beyond which no vessel arriving shall pass until a manifest has been delivered to the Pilot, officer of Customs or other person duly authorized to receive the same.

If, in any river or Port wherein a place has been fixed by the Local Government under this section, the Master of any vessel arriving remains outside or below the place so fixed, such Master shall, nevertheless, within twenty-four hours after the vessel anchors, deliver a manifest to the Pilot, officer of Customs or other person authorized to receive the same.

54. If any vessel arrives at any Customs-port in which a place has not been so fixed, the Master of such vessel shall, within twenty-four hours after such vessel has anchored within the limits of the Port, deliver a manifest to the Pilot, officer of Customs or other person authorized to receive the same.

55. Every manifest shall be signed by the Master, shall specify all goods imported in such vessel, showing separately all goods (if any) intended to be landed, transhipped or taken on to another Port, and all ships' stores intended for consumption in Port or on the homeward voyage, and shall contain such further particulars, and be made out in such form, as the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time direct.

The Customs-collector shall permit the Master to amend any obvious error in the manifest, or to supply any omission which in the opinion of such Collector results from accident or inadvertence, by furnishing an amended or supplementary manifest, and may, if he thinks fit, levy thereon such fee as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time directs.

Except as herein provided no import manifest shall be amended.

56. The person receiving a manifest under section 53 or 54 shall counter-sign the same and enter thereon such particulars as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time directs in this behalf.

57. No vessel arriving in any Customs-port shall be allowed to break bulk until a manifest has been delivered as hereinbefore provided; nor until a copy of such manifest, together with an application for entry of such vessel inwards, has been presented by the Master to the Customs-collector, and an order has been given thereon for such entry.

58. The Master shall, if required so to do by the Customs-collector at the time of presenting such application, deliver to the Customs-collector the bill of lading or a copy thereof for every part of the cargo laden on board, and any port-clearance, cockett or other paper granted in respect of such vessel at the place from which she is stated to have come, and shall answer all such questions relating to the vessel, cargo, crew and voyage as are put to him by such officer.

The Customs-collector may, if any requisition or question made or put by him under this section is not complied with or answered, refuse to grant such application.

59. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 57, the Customs-collector may grant, prior to receipt of the manifest, and to the entry inwards of the vessel, a special pass permitting bulk to be broken.

The granting of such pass shall be subject to such rules as may from time to time be made by the Chief Customs-Authority.

60. Notwithstanding anything contained in Manifest, &c., may be section 53, 54, 57 or 58, delivered by ship's agent. the Customs-collector may accept from the ship's agent in lieu of the Master delivery of the manifest or of any other document required by those sections to be delivered by the Master.

Entry outwards, port-clearance and departure of vessels.

61. No vessel shall take on board any part of her export-cargo, until a written application for entry of such vessel outwards subscribed by the Master of such vessel, has been made to the Customs-collector or before an order has been given thereon by such officer for such entry.

Every application made under this section shall specify the name, tonnage, and national character of the vessel, the name of the Master, and the name of every place for which cargo is to be shipped.

62. No vessel, whether laden or in ballast, shall depart from any Customs-port until a port-clearance has been granted by the Customs-collector or other officer duly authorized to grant the same.

And no Pilot shall take charge of any vessel proceeding to sea, unless the Master of such vessel produces a port-clearance.

63. Every application for port-clearance shall be made by the Master at least twenty-four hours before the intended departure of the vessel.

The Master shall, at the time of applying for port-clearance—

(a) deliver to the Customs-collector a manifest in duplicate in such form as may from time to time be prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority, signed by such Master, specifying all goods to be exported in the vessel, and showing separately all goods and stores entered in the import-manifest, and not landed or consumed on board or transhipped :

(b) deliver to the Customs-collector such shipping bills or other documents as such Customs-collector acting under the general instructions of such Chief Customs-Authority, requires ; and

(c) answer to the proper officer of Customs such questions touching the departure and destination of the vessel as are demanded of him.

The provisions of section 55 relating to the amendment of import-manifests shall mutatis mutandis apply also to export manifests delivered under this section.

64. The Customs-collector may refuse port-clearance to any vessel until (a) the provisions of section 63 are complied with ;

(b) all Port-dues and other charges and penalties due by such vessel, or by the owner or Master thereof, and all duties payable in respect of any goods shipped therein have been duly paid, or their payment secured by such guarantee, or by a deposit at such rate as such Customs-collector directs ;

(c) the ship's agent (if any) delivers to the Customs-collector a declaration in writing to the effect that he will be liable for any penalty imposed under section 167, No. 17, and furnishes security for the discharge of the same ;

(d) the ship's agent (if any) delivers to the Customs-collector a declaration in writing to the effect that such agent is answerable for the discharge of all claims for damage or short delivery which may be established by the owner of any goods comprised in the import-cargo in respect of such goods.

A ship's agent delivering a declaration under clause (c) of this section shall be liable to all penalties which might be imposed on the Master under section 167, No. 17, and a ship's agent delivering a declaration under clause (d) of this section shall be bound to discharge all claims referred to in such declaration.

65. When the Customs-collector is satisfied that the provisions of section 63 and if necessary of clauses (b) and (c) and (d) of section 64 have been complied with, he shall grant a port-clearance to the Master, and shall return at the same time to such Master one copy of the manifest duly countersigned by the proper officer of Customs.

66. Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 64 and 65, the Customs-collector may (subject to such rules as the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time prescribe) grant a port-clearance to the Master when the ship's agent furnishes such security as the Customs-collector deems sufficient for duly delivering, within five days from the date of such grant, the manifest and other documents specified in section 63.

CHAPTER VIII.

GENERAL PROVISIONS AFFECTING VESSELS IN PORT.

67. The Customs-collector at any Customs-port may at any time depute an officer to board his discretion one or more officers of Customs to board any vessel in or arriving at such Port.

Every officer of Customs so sent shall remain on board of such vessel by day and by night unless or until the Customs-collector otherwise orders.

68. Whenever an officer of Customs is so Officer and servant to be received. deputed on board of any vessel, the Master of such vessel shall be bound to receive on board such officer, and one servant of such officer, and to provide such officer and servant with suitable Accommodation of shelter and accommodation, officer and servant. and likewise with a due allowance of fresh water, and with the means of cooking on board.

69. Every officer of Customs so deputed shall have free access to every part of the vessel, and may fasten down any hatchway or entrance to the hold, and mark any goods before landing, and lock up, seal, mark, or otherwise secure any goods on board of such vessel.

If any box, place or closed receptacle in any such vessel be locked, and search and opening of the key be withheld, such locks. officer shall report the same to the Customs-collector, who may thereupon issue to the officer on board, or to any other officer under his authority, a written order to search.

On production of such order, the officer bearing the same may require that any such box, place or closed receptacle be opened in his presence; and, if it be not opened upon his requisition, he may break open the same.

70. Unless with the written permission of the Goods not to be shipped, discharged or water-borne except in presence of officer. Customs-collector or in accordance with a general permission granted under section 74, no goods, other than passengers' baggage, or ballast urgently required to be shipped for the vessel's safety, shall be shipped or waterborne to be shipped or discharged from any vessel in any Customs-port, except in the presence of an officer of Customs.

71. When an officer of Customs is deputed

Period allowed for discharge and shipment of cargo. under section 67 to remain on board a vessel, the tonnage of which does not exceed six hundred tons, a period of thirty working days, reckoned from the date on which he boards such vessel, or such additional period as the Customs-collector directs, shall be allowed for the discharge of import-cargo and the shipment of export-cargo on board of such vessel.

One additional day shall, in like manner, be allowed for every fifty tons in excess of six hundred.

No charge shall be made for the services of a single officer of Customs for such allowed number of working days, or for the services of several such officers (if available) for respective periods not exceeding in the aggregate such allowed number of working days.

If the period occupied in the discharge and shipment of cargo be in excess of thirty working days, together with the additional period (if any) allowed under this section, the vessel shall be charged with the expense of the officer of Customs at a rate not exceeding five rupees per diem (Sundays and holidays excepted) for such excess period.

In calculating any period allowed, or any charge made, under this section, the allowance for period during which vessel is laid up. period (if any) during which a vessel after the completion of the discharge of import-cargo, and before commencing the shipment of export-cargo, is laid up by the withdrawal of the officer of Customs upon application from the Master, shall be deducted.

72. Except with the written permission of the Goods not to be landed, &c., on Sundays or holidays, without permission, nor except within fixed hours. Customs-collector, no goods, other than passengers' baggage, shall in any Customs-port be discharged from any vessel, or be shipped or water-borne to be shipped—

(a) on any Sunday or on any holiday or day in which the discharge or shipping of cargo, as the case may be, is prohibited by the Chief Customs-Authority;

(b) on any day, except between such hours as such authority from time to time appoints by notification in the official Gazette.

73. No goods shall in any Customs-port be

Goods not to be shipped, &c. except at wharfs. landed at any place other than a wharf or other place duly appointed for that purpose, and unless with the written permission of the Customs-collector or when a general permission has been granted under section 74, no goods shall in any Customs-port be shipped or water-borne to be shipped from any place other than a wharf or other place duly appointed for that purpose.

74. Notwithstanding anything contained in Power to exempt from sections 70 and 73. section 70 or 73, the Chief Customs-Authority may, by notification in the local official Gazette, give general permission for goods to be shipped or water-borne to be shipped in any Customs-port from all or any places not duly appointed as wharves, and without the presence or authority of an officer of Customs.

75. The Chief Customs-Authority may from

Power to make rules regarding baggage and mails. time to time make rules for the landing and shipping of passengers' baggage and the passing of the same through the Customs-house; and for the landing, shipping and clearing of parcels forwarded by Her Majesty's or other mails, or by other regular packets and passenger vessels.

When any baggage or parcels is or are made over to an officer of customs for the purpose of being landed a fee of such amount as the Local Government from time to time directs shall be chargeable thereon, as compensation for the expense and trouble incurred in landing and depositing the same in the Custom-house.

76. When any goods are water-borne for the Boat-note. purpose of being landed from any vessel and warehoused or cleared for home-consumption, or of being shipped for exportation on board of any vessel, there shall be sent, with each boat-load or other separate despatch, a boat-note specifying the number of packages so sent and the marks and numbers or other description thereof.

Each boat-note for goods to be landed shall be signed by an officer of the vessel, and likewise by the officer of Customs on board, if any such officer be on board, and shall be delivered on arrival to any officer of Customs authorized to receive the same.

Each boat-note for goods to be shipped shall be signed by the proper officer of Customs, and, if an officer of Customs is on board of the vessel on which such goods are to be shipped, shall be delivered to such officer. If no such officer be on board, every such boat-note shall be delivered to the Master of the vessel, or to an officer of the vessel appointed by him to receive it.

The officer of Customs who receives any boat-note of goods landed, and the officer of Customs, Master, or other officer, as the case may be, who receives any boat-note of goods shipped, shall sign the same and note thereon such particulars as the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time, direct.

The Local Government may from time to time by notification in the local official Gazette, suspend the operation of this section in any Customs-port or part thereof.

77. All goods water-borne for the purpose of being landed or shipped shall be landed or shipped without any unnecessary delay.

Goods water-borne to be forthwith landed or shipped.

78. Except in cases of imminent danger no goods shall be discharged into or loaded in any boat for the purpose of being landed or shipped shall be transhipped into any other boat without the permission of an officer of Customs.

Such goods not to be transhipped without permission.

79. The Local Government may declare with regard to any Customs-port, by notification in the local official Gazette, that after a date therein specified, no boat not duly licensed and registered shall be allowed to ply as a cargo-boat for the landing and shipping of merchandize within the limits of such Port.

Power to prohibit plying of unlicensed cargo-boats.

In any Port with regard to which such notification has been issued, the Chief Officer of Customs or other officer whom the Local Government appoints in this behalf, may, subject to such rules and on payment of such fees as the Local Government from time to time prescribes by notification in the local official Gazette, issue licenses for, and register, cargo boats. Such officer may also, subject to rules so prescribed, cancel any license so issued.

Issue of licenses and registration of cargo-boats.

80. The Customs-collector may, whenever he thinks fit, require that goods stowed in bulk, and brought by sea or intended for exportation, shall be weighed or measured on board-ship before landing or after shipment, and may levy duty according to the result of such weighing or measurement.

Power to require goods to be weighed or measured on board before landing or after shipment.

CHAPTER IX.

OF DISCHARGE OF CARGO AND ENTRY INWARDS OF GOODS.

81. When an order for entry inwards of any vessel which has arrived in any Customs-port, or a special pass permitting such vessel to break bulk, has been given, the discharge of the cargo of such vessel may be proceeded with.

Discharge of cargo may commence on receipt of due permission.

82. Except as otherwise provided in this Act, no goods shall be allowed to leave any such vessel, unless they are entered in the original manifest of such vessel, or in an amended or supplementary manifest received under section 55.

Goods not to leave ship unless entered in manifest.

83. If the owner of any goods (except such as have been shown in the import-manifest as not to be landed) does not land such goods within such period as is specified in the bill of landing of such goods, or if no period is so specified within such number of working days, not exceeding fifteen, after the entry

Procedure in respect of goods not landed within time allowed.

of the vessel importing the same, as the Local Government from time to time appoints by notification in the official Gazette, or if the cargo of any vessel, with the exception of only a small quantity of goods, has been discharged previously to the expiration of the period so specified or appointed, as the case may be,— the Master of such vessel or, on his application, the proper officer of Customs, may then carry such goods to the Custom-house, there to remain for entry.

The Customs-collector shall thereupon take charge of and grant receipts for such goods; and if notice in writing has been given by the Master that the goods are to remain subject to a lien for freight, primage, general average, or other charges of a stated amount, the Customs-collector shall hold such goods until he receives notice in writing that the said charges are paid.

84. At any time after the arrival of any vessel, the Customs-collector may, with the consent of the Master of such vessel, cause any small package or parcel of goods to be carried to the Custom-house, there to remain for entry, in charge of the officers of Customs, during the remainder of the working days allowed under this Act for the landing of such package or parcel.

Power to land small parcels.

If any package or parcel so carried to the Custom-house remains unclaimed on the expiration of the number of working days so allowed for its landing, or at the time of the clearance outwards of the vessel from which it was landed, the Master may give such notice as is provided in section 83, and the officer in charge of the Custom-house shall thereupon hold such package or parcel as provided in that section.

Notice regarding unclaimed packages.

85. Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 83 and 84 the Customs-collector in any Customs-port to which the Local Government declares this section to be applicable, may permit the Master of any vessel immediately on receipt of an order under section 57 or special pass under section 59, to discharge the cargo of such vessel or any portion thereof into the custody of the ship's agents if willing to receive the same, for the purpose of landing the same forthwith—

(a) at the Custom-house or any specified landing-place or wharf or

(b) at any landing-place or wharf belonging to any Port Commissioners, Port Trust or other public body or company;

Any ship's agent so receiving such cargo or portion shall be bound to discharge all claims for damage or short delivery which may be established in respect of the same by the owner thereof, and shall be entitled to recover from such owner his charges for service rendered, but not for commission or the like, where any agent for the landing of such cargo or portion has been previously appointed by the owner and such appointment is unrevoked.

The Customs-collector shall take charge of all goods discharged under clause (a) of this section, and otherwise proceed in relation thereto as provided in sections 83 and 88.

A public body or company at whose landing place or wharf any goods are discharged under clause (b) of this section, shall not permit the same to be removed without an order in writing from the Customs-collector.

86. The owner of any goods imported shall on the landing thereof from the importing ship make entry of such goods for home consumption or warehousing by delivering to the Customs-collector a bill of entry thereof in duplicate, in such form and containing such particulars, in addition to the particulars specified in section 29, as may, from time to time, be prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority.

The particulars of such entry shall correspond with the particulars given of the same goods in the manifest of the ship.

87. On the delivery of such bill the duty (if any) leviable on such goods shall be assessed, and the owner of such goods may then proceed to clear the same for home-consumption, or warehouse them, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained.

88. If any goods are not entered and cleared for home-consumption, or warehoused, within four months from the date of entry of the vessel, such goods may, after due notice to the owner, if his address can be ascertained, and in the Local official Gazette, be sold by public auction, and the proceeds thereof shall be applied, first, to the payment of freight, primage and general average, if the goods are held by the Customs-collector subject to such charges under notice given under section 83, 84 or 85; next, to the payment of the duties which would be leviable on such goods if they were then cleared for home-consumption, and next to the payment of the other charges (if any) payable to the Customs-collector in respect of the same.

The surplus, if any, shall be paid to the owner of the goods, on his application for the same; provided that such application be made within one year from the sale of the goods, or that sufficient cause be shown for not making it within such period.

If any goods of which the Customs-collector has taken charge under section 83, 84 or 85 be of a perishable nature, the Customs-collector may at any time direct the sale thereof, and shall apply the proceeds in like manner:

Power to direct sale of perishable goods. has taken charge under section 83, 84 or 85 be of a perishable nature, the Customs-collector may at any time direct the sale thereof, and shall apply the proceeds in like manner:

Provided that, where any goods liable to be sold under this section are arms, ammunition or military stores, they may be sold or otherwise disposed of at such place (whether within or without British India), and in such manner, as the Local Government may from time to time direct:

Provided also, that nothing in this section shall authorize the removal for home-consumption of any dutiable goods without payment of duties of customs thereon.

CHAPTER X.

OF CLEARANCE OF GOODS FOR HOME-CONSUMPTION.

89. When the owner of any goods entered for home-consumption, and (if such goods be liable to duty) assessed under section 87, has paid the import-duty (if any) assessed on such goods and any charges payable under this Act in respect of the same, the Customs-officer may make an order clearing the same; and such order shall be sufficient authority for the removal of such goods by the owner.

CHAPTER XI.

WAREHOUSING.

Of the admission of goods into a warehouse.

90. When any dutiable goods have been entered for warehousing and assessed under section 87, the owner of such goods may apply for leave to deposit the same in any warehouse appointed or licensed under this Act.

91. Every such application shall be in writing signed by the applicant, and shall be in such form as is from time to time prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority.

92. When any such application has been made in respect of any goods, the owner of the goods to which it relates shall execute a bond, binding himself, in a penalty of twice the amount of duty assessed under section 87 on such goods,

(a) to observe all rules prescribed by this Act in respect of such goods;

(b) to pay, on demand, all duties, rent and charges claimable on account of such goods under this Act, together with interest on the same from the date of demand, at such rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum as is for the time being fixed by the Chief Customs-Authority; and

(c) to discharge all penalties incurred for violation of the provisions of this Act in respect of such goods.

Every such bond shall be in the Form marked A hereto annexed, or, when such form is inapplicable or insufficient, in such other form as is from time to time prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority, and shall relate to the cargo or portion of the cargo of one vessel only.

93. When the provisions of sections 91 and 92 have been complied with in respect of any goods, such goods shall be forwarded in charge of an officer of customs to the warehouse in which they are to be deposited.

A pass shall be sent with the goods specifying the name of the importing vessel and of the bond, the marks, numbers and contents of each package, and the warehouse or place in the warehouse wherein they are to be deposited.

94. On receipt of the goods, the pass shall be examined by the warehouse-keeper, and shall be returned to the Customs-collector.

No package, butt, cask or hogshead shall be admitted into any warehouse unless it bear the marks and numbers specified in, and otherwise correspond with, the pass for its admission.

If the goods be found to correspond with the pass, the warehouse-keeper shall certify to that effect on the pass, and the warehousing of such goods shall be deemed to have been completed.

If the goods do not so correspond, the fact shall be reported by the warehouse-keeper for the orders of the Customs-collector, and the goods shall either be returned to the Custom-house in charge of an officer of Customs or kept in deposit pending such orders, as the warehouse-keeper deems most convenient.

If the quantity or value of any goods has been erroneously stated in the bill of entry, the error may be rectified at any time before the warehousing of the goods is completed, and not subsequently.

95. Except as provided in section 100, all goods shall be warehoused in the packages, butts, casks or hogsheads in which they have been imported.

96. Whenever any goods are lodged in a public warehouse or a licensed private warehouse, the warehouse-keeper, or, in the case of the Bengal Bonded Warrant to be given when goods are warehoused.

Warehouse Association, the Secretary of the said Association, shall deliver a warrant signed by him as such to the person lodging the goods.

Such warrant shall be in the Form B hereto annexed, and shall be transferable by endorsement; and the endorsee shall be entitled to receive the goods specified in such warrant on the same terms as those on which the person who originally lodged the goods would have been entitled to receive the same.

The Local Government may by notification in the local official Gazette exempt salt and salted fish from the operation of this section and may in like manner cancel such exemption.

Rules relating to goods in a warehouse.

97. The Customs-collector or any officer deputed by him for the purpose, shall have access to any private warehouse licensed under this Act.

Access of Customs-officer to private warehouse.

98. The Customs-collector may at any time by order in writing direct that any goods or packages lodged in any warehouse shall be opened, weighed or otherwise examined; and after any goods have been so opened or examined, may cause the same to be sealed or marked in such manner as he thinks fit.

Power to cause packages lodged in warehouse to be opened and examined.

When any goods have been so sealed and marked after examination, they shall not be again opened without the permission of the Customs-collector; and when any such goods have been opened with such permission, the packages shall, if he thinks fit, be again sealed or marked as before.

99. Any owner of goods lodged in a warehouse shall, at any time within the hours of business, have access to his goods in presence of an officer of Customs, and an officer of Customs shall, upon application for the purpose being made in writing to the Customs-collector, be deputed to accompany such owner.

When an officer of Customs is specially employed to accompany such owner, a sum sufficient to meet the expense thereby incurred shall, if the Customs-collector so require, be paid by such owner to the Customs-collector, and such sum shall, if the Customs-collector so direct, be paid in advance.

100. With the sanction of the Customs-collector, and after such notice given, and under such rules and conditions as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time prescribes, any owner of goods may, either before or after warehousing the same,—

Owner's power to deal with warehoused goods.

(a) sort, separate, pack and repack the goods and make such alterations therein as may be necessary for the preservation, sale, shipment or disposal thereof (such goods to be repacked in the packages in which they were imported, or in such other packages as the Customs-collector permits);

(b) fill up any casks of wine, spirit or beer from any casks of the same secured in the same warehouse;

(c) mix any wines or spirit of the same sort secured in the same warehouse, erasing from the cask all import-brands, unless the whole of the wine or spirit so mixed be of the same brand;

(d) bottle off wine or spirit from any casks;

(e) take such samples of goods as may be allowed by the Customs-collector with or without entry for home consumption, and with or without payment of duty, except such as may eventually become payable on a deficiency of the original quantity.

After any such goods have been so separated and repacked in proper or approved packages, the Customs-collector may, at the request of the owner of such goods, cause or permit any refuse, damaged, or surplus goods remaining after such separation or repacking (or, at the like request, any goods which may not be worth the duty) to be destroyed, and may remit the duty payable thereon.

101. If goods be lodged in a public warehouse, the owner shall pay monthly, on receiving a bill or written demand for the same from the Customs-collector or other officer deputed by him in that behalf, rent and warehouse-dues at such rates as the Chief Customs-Authority or such officer of customs as such Authority from time to time appoints in this behalf may fix.

A table of the rates of rent and warehouse, dues so fixed shall be placed in a conspicuous part of such warehouse.

If any bill for rent or warehouse-dues presented under this section is not discharged within ten days from the date of presentation, the Customs-collector may, in the discharge of such demand (any transfer or assignment of the goods notwithstanding) cause to be sold by public auction, after due notice in the local official Gazette, such sufficient portion of the goods as he may select.

Out of the proceeds of such sale the Customs-collector shall first satisfy the demand for the discharge of which the sale was ordered, and shall then pay over the surplus (if any) to the owner of the goods:

Provided that the application for such surplus be made within one year from the date of the sale of the goods, or that sufficient cause be shown for not making it within such period.

102. No warehoused goods shall be taken out of any warehouse, except on clearance for home-consumption or shipment, or for removal to another warehouse or as otherwise provided by this Act.

Goods not to be taken out of warehouse, except as provided by this Act.

103. Any goods warehoused may be left in the warehouse in which they are deposited or in any warehouse to which they may in manner hereinafter provided be removed till the expiry of three years after the date of the bond executed in relation to such goods under section 92. The owner of any goods remaining in a warehouse on the expiry of such period shall clear the same for home-consumption or shipment in manner hereinafter provided:

Period for which goods may remain warehoused under bond.

Provided that when the license for any private warehouse is cancelled, and the Customs-collector gives notice of such cancellation to the owner of any goods deposited in such warehouse, such owner shall in manner hereinafter provided, and within seven days from the date on which such notice is given, remove such goods to another warehouse or clear them for home-consumption or shipment.

Goods in private warehouse on cancellation of license.

Of the removal of goods from one warehouse to another.

104. Any owner of goods warehoused under this Act may, at any time within three years from the date of the bond executed in respect of such goods under section 92, and with the permission of the Chief Customs-Officer, and on such conditions and after giving such security (if any) as such officer directs, remove goods from one warehouse to another warehouse in the same Port.

Power to remove goods from one warehouse to another in same Port.

When any owner desires so to remove any goods, he shall apply for permission to do so in such form as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time prescribes.

105. Any owner of goods warehoused at any warehousing Port may, from time to time, within the said period of three years remove the same by sea or by inland carriage, in order to be re-warehoused at any other warehousing Port.

Power to remove goods from one port to another.

When any owner desires so to remove any goods for such purpose, he shall apply to the Chief Customs-Officer, stating the particulars of the goods to be removed, and the name of the Port to which it is intended that they shall be removed, together with such other particulars, and in such manner and form, as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time prescribes.

Procedure.

106. When permission is granted for the removal of any goods from one warehousing Port to another under section 105, an account containing the particulars thereof shall be transmitted by the proper officer of the Port of removal to the proper officer of the Port of destination; and the person requiring the removal shall before such removal enter into a bond, with one sufficient surety, in a sum equal at least to the duty Transmission of account of goods to officers at Port of destination.

Bond for due arrival and rewarehousing.

chargeable on such goods, for the due arrival and rewarehousing thereof at the Port of destination within such time as the Chief Customs-Authority directs.

Such bond may be taken by the proper officer, either at the Port of removal or at the Port of destination, as best suits the convenience of the owner.

If such bond is taken at the Port of destination, a certificate thereof, signed by the proper officer of such Port, shall, at the time of the removal of such goods, be produced to the proper officer at the Port of removal; and such bond shall not be discharged unless such goods are produced to the proper officer, and duly re-warehoused at the Port of destination within the time allowed for such removal, or are otherwise accounted for to the satisfaction of such officer; nor until the full duty due upon any deficiency of such goods, not so accounted for, has been paid.

107. The Chief Customs-Authority may permit any person desirous of removing warehoused goods to enter into a general bond, with such sureties, in such amount, and under such conditions, as the Chief Customs-Authority approves, for the removal, from time to time, of any goods from one warehouse to another, either in the same or in a different Port, and for the due arrival and re-warehousing of such goods at the Port of destination within such time as such Authority directs.

Remover may enter into a general bond.

108. Upon the arrival of warehoused goods at the Port of destination, they shall be entered and warehoused in like manner as goods are entered and warehoused on the first importation thereof, and under the laws and rules, in so far as such laws and rules are applicable, which regulate the entry and warehousing of such last-mentioned goods.

Goods on arrival at Port of destination to be subject to same laws as goods on first importation.

109. Every bond executed under section 92 in respect of any goods shall, unless the Chief Officer of Customs in any case deems a fresh bond to be necessary, continue in force, notwithstanding the subsequent removal of such goods to another warehouse or warehousing port.

Bond under section 92 to continue in force notwithstanding removal.

Clearance for home-consumption or shipment.

110. Any owner of goods warehoused may, at any time within three years from the date of the bond executed under section 92, in respect of such goods, clear such goods for home-consumption by paying (a) the duty assessed on such goods under section 87, or where the duty on such goods is altered under the provisions herein-after contained, such altered duty; and (b) all rent, penalties, interest and other charges payable to the Customs-collector in respect of such goods.

Clearance of bonded goods for home-consumption.

111. Any owner of goods warehoused may, at any time within three years from the date of the bond executed under section 92, in respect of such goods clear such goods for shipment to a Foreign Port on payment of all rent, penalties, Clearance of same for shipment to Foreign Port.

interest and other charges payable as aforesaid and without payment of import duty on the same :

Provided that the Governor General in Council may prohibit the shipment for exportation to any specified foreign port of warehoused goods in respect of which payment of drawback or transshipment has been prohibited under section 49 or 134 respectively.

112. Provisions and stores warehoused at the time of importation may within the said period of three years be shipped without payment of duty for use on board of any vessel proceeding to a Foreign Port.

(Clearance of same for shipment as provisions, &c., on vessels proceeding to Foreign Ports.)

113. Application to clear goods from any warehouse for home-consumption or for shipment shall be made in such form as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time prescribes.

Form of application for clearance of goods.

Such application shall ordinarily be made to the Customs-collector at least twenty-four hours before it is intended so to clear such goods.

Application when to be made.

114. If any goods upon which duties are leviable ad valorem or on a tariff valuation receive damage through unavoidable accident after they have been entered for warehousing and assessed under section 87, and before they are cleared for home-consumption, they shall, if the owner so desires, be re-assessed for duty according to their actual value, and a new bond for the same may, at the option of the owner, be executed for the unexpired term of warehousing.

Re-assessment of warehoused goods when damaged.

115. If after any goods entered for warehousing have been assessed under section 87, any alteration is made in the duty leviable upon such goods or in the tariff valuation (if any) applicable thereto, such goods shall be re-assessed in accordance with the second proviso to section 37.

Re-assessment on alteration of duty or tariff valuation.

116. If it appear at the time of clearing any wine, spirit, beer or salt from any warehouse for home consumption that there exists a deficiency not otherwise accounted for to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector, an allowance on account of ullage and wastage shall be made in adjusting the duties thereon, as follows (namely),

Allowance in case of wine, spirit, beer or salt.

(a) upon wine, spirit and beer in cask to an extent not exceeding the rates specified below, or such other rates as may from time to time be prescribed in this behalf by the Local Government and notified in the official Gazette :

For any time not exceeding 6 months	...	3½ per cent.
Exceeding 6 months and not exceeding 12 "	...	5 "
Exceeding 12 months and not exceeding 18 "	...	7½ "
Exceeding 18 months and not exceeding 2 years	...	10 "
Exceeding 2 years and not exceeding 3 "	...	12 "

(b) in the case of salt warehoused in a public ware house, only the amount actually cleared shall be charged with Customs-duties ;

(c) in the case of salt warehoused in a private ware house, wastage shall be allowed at such rate as may be prescribed from time to time by the Local Government and notified in the local official Gazette.

117. When any wine, spirit, beer or salt lodged in a warehouse is found to be deficient at the time of the delivery therefrom, and such deficiency is proved to be due solely to ullage or wastage, the Chief Customs-Authority may direct, in respect of any such article, that allowance be made in any special case for a rate of ullage or wastage exceeding that contemplated in section 116.

Of the forfeiture and discharge of the bond.

118. If any warehoused goods are removed from the warehouse in contravention of section 102 ; or if any such goods have not been removed from the warehouse at the expiration of the time during which such goods are permitted by section 103 to remain in such warehouse ; or

When goods are improperly removed from warehouses or allowed to remain beyond time fixed.

if any goods in respect of which a bond has been executed under section 92 and which have not been cleared for home-consumption, or shipment or removed under this Act, are lost or destroyed otherwise than as provided in section 100 or as mentioned in section 122, or are not accounted for to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector, or or lost or destroyed.

if any such goods have been taken under section 100 as samples without payment of duty, the Customs-collector may thereupon demand, and the owner of such goods shall forthwith pay, the full amount of duty chargeable on account of such goods, together with all rent, penalties, interest and other charges payable to the Customs-collector on account of the same.

Collector may demand duty, &c.

119. If any owner fails to pay any sum so demanded, the Customs-collector may forthwith either proceed upon the bond executed under section 92, or cause such portion as he thinks fit of the goods (if any) in the warehouse on account of which the amount is due, to be detained with a view to the recovery of the demand ;

Procedure on failure to pay duty, &c.

and if the demand be not discharged within ten days from the date of such detention (due notice thereof being given to the owner), the goods so detained may be sold by public auction duly advertised in the local official Gazette.

The net proceeds of any sale so made of goods so detained shall be written off upon the bond in discharge thereof to the amount received, and if any surplus be obtained from such sale, beyond the amount of the demand, such surplus shall be paid to the owner of the goods : Provided that application for the same be made within one year from the sale, or that sufficient cause be shown for not making the application within such period.

No transfer or assignment of the goods shall prevent the Customs-collector from proceeding against such goods in the manner above provided, for any amount due thereon.

120. When any warehoused goods are taken out of any warehouse, the Customs-collector shall cause the fact to be noted on the back of the bond.

Noting removal of goods.

Every note so made shall specify the quantity and description of such goods, the purposes for which they have been removed, the date of removal, the name of the person removing them, the number and date of the shipping bill under which they have been taken away if removed for exportation by sea, or of the bill of entry if removed for home-consumption, and the amount of duty paid (if any).

121. A register shall be kept of all bonds entered into for Customs-duties on warehoused goods, and entry shall be made in such register of all particulars required by section 120 to be specified.

When such register shows that the whole of the goods covered by any bond have been cleared for home-consumption or shipment, or otherwise duly accounted for, and when all amounts due on account of such goods have been paid, the Customs-collector shall cancel such bond as discharged in full, and shall on demand deliver it, so cancelled, to the person who has executed or who is entitled to receive it.

Miscellaneous.

122. If any goods in respect of which a bond has been executed under section 92 and which have not been cleared for home consumption are lost or destroyed by unavoidable accident or delay, the Chief Customs-Authority may in its discretion remit the duties due thereon.

Provided that, if any such goods be so lost or destroyed in a private warehouse, notice thereof be given to the Customs-collector within forty-eight hours after the discovery of such loss or destruction.

123. The warehouse-keeper in respect of goods lodged in a public warehouse, and the licensee in respect of goods lodged in a private warehouse, shall be responsible for their due reception therein and delivery therefrom, and for their safe custody while deposited therein, according to the quantity, weight or gauge reported by the Custom-house officer who has assessed such goods, allowance being made, if necessary, for ullage and wastage as provided in sections 116 and 117.

Provided that no owner of goods shall be entitled to claim from the Customs-collector, or from any keeper of a public warehouse, compensation for any loss or damage occurring to such goods while they are being passed into or out of such warehouse, or while they remain therein, unless it be proved that such loss or damage was occasioned by the wilful act or neglect of the warehouse-keeper or of an officer of Customs.

124. Every public warehouse shall be under the lock and key of a warehouse-keeper appointed by the Chief Officer of Customs.

125. The Chief Customs-Authority, or such officer of customs as such Authority from time to time appoints in this behalf, may from time to time determine in what division of any public warehouse, and in what manner, and on what terms, any goods may be deposited, and what sort of goods may be deposited in any such warehouse.

126. The expenses of carriage, packing and stowage of goods on their reception into or removal from a public warehouse shall, if paid by the Customs-collector or by the warehouse-keeper, be chargeable on the goods, and be defrayed by, and recoverable from, the owner, in the manner provided in section 119.

127. All the provisions of this Act, relating to private warehouses, shall be applicable to the warehouses wherein the Bengal Bonded Warehouse Association receives bonded goods.

CHAPTER XII.

TRANSHIPMENT.

128. In the Ports of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Kárwár, Karáchi, Aden, Rangoon, Maulmain, Akyab, Chittagong, and such other ports as the Governor or General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct in this behalf, the Customs-collector may, on application by the owner of any goods imported into such Port, and specially and distinctly manifested at the time of importation as for transshipment to some other Customs or Foreign Port, grant leave to tranship the same without payment of the duty, (if any) leviable, at the Port of transshipment, and without any security or bond for the due arrival and entry of the goods at the Port of destination.

In any Customs-port other than a Port in which the preceding clause may for the time being be in force, the Customs-collector may, on application by the owner of any goods so imported and manifested, grant leave for transshipment without payment of the duty (if any) leviable at such Port; provided that, where the goods so transhipped are dutiable, and are to be removed to some other Customs-port, the applicant shall enter into a bond, with such security as may be required of him, in a sum equal at least to the duty chargeable on such goods, for the due arrival and entry thereof at the Port of destination within such time as such Customs-collector directs.

129. An officer of Customs shall, in every case, be deputed free of charge to superintend the removal of transhipped goods from vessel to vessel.

130. The powers conferred on the Customs-collector by section 128 shall be exercised, and the transshipment shall be performed, subject to such rules as may from time to time be made by the Local Government.

No rules made under this section shall come into force until after the expiry of such reasonable time from the date of the publication of the same as the Local Government may in each case appoint in this behalf.

131. All goods transhipped under the second clause of section 128 for removal to a Customs-port shall on their arrival at such Port be entered in like manner as goods are entered on the first importation thereof, and under the laws and rules, in so far as such laws and rules can be made applicable, which regulate the entry of such last-mentioned goods.

132. If two or more vessels belonging wholly or in part to the same owner be at any Customs-port at the same time, any provisions and stores in use or ordinarily shipped for use on board may, at the discretion of the Customs-collector, be transhipped from one such vessel to any other such vessel without payment of import-duty.

133. A transhipment-fee on any goods or class of goods transhipped under this Act, may be levied at such rates, on each bale or package, or according to weight, measurement, quantity, or number, and under such rules as the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor or General in Council, may from time to time by notification in the local official Gazette prescribe for each port.

134. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, prohibit, at any specified Port, or at all Ports, the transhipment, of any specified class of goods, generally or when destined for any specified ports, or prescribe any special mode of transhipping any specified class of goods.

No goods to be transhipped except as provided.

135. Except as provided in this Act, no goods shall be transhipped at any Port or place in British India.

CHAPTER XIII.

EXPORTATION OR SHIPMENT, AND RE-LANDING.

136. Except with the written permission of the Customs-collector, no goods other than passengers' baggage, or ballast urgently required for a vessel's safety shall be shipped or water-borne to be shipped in any vessel in a Customs-port until an order has been obtained under section 61 for entry outwards of such vessel.

When such order has been obtained, the export cargo of such vessel may be shipped, subject to the provisions next hereinafter contained.

137. Unless the Chief Customs-Authority shall, in the case of any Customs-port or wharf, or of any class of goods, otherwise direct by notification in the local official Gazette, no goods, except passengers' baggage, shall be shipped or water-borne to be shipped for exportation, until—

(a) the owner has delivered to the Customs-collector, or other proper officer, a shipping-bill of such goods in duplicate in such form and containing such particulars in addition to those specified in section 29 as may from time to time be prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority;

(b) such owner has paid the duties (if any) payable on such goods; and

(c) such bill has been passed by the Customs-collector.

138. Before any warehoused goods or goods subject to excise-duties, or goods entitled to drawback of Customs-duties on exportation, or goods exportable only under particular rules or restrictions, are permitted to be exported, the owner shall, if required so to do, give security by bond in such sum, not exceeding twice the duty leviable on such goods, as the Customs-collector directs, with one sufficient surety, that such goods shall be duly shipped, exported and landed at the place for which they are entered outwards, or shall be otherwise accounted for to the satisfaction of such officer.

139. When goods are cleared for shipment on a shipping-bill presented after port-clearance has been granted, the Customs-collector may, if he thinks fit, levy, in addition to any duty to which such goods are ordinarily liable, a charge not exceeding—

(a) in the case of goods liable to duties on fixed tariff valuations, one per cent. on the tariff value;

(b) in the case of all other goods, one per cent. on the market value.

Nothing in this section shall apply to any shipment of treasure or opium.

140. If any goods mentioned in a shipping-bill or manifest be not shipped, or be shipped and afterwards re-landed, the owner shall, before the expiration of five clear working days after the vessel on which such goods were intended to be shipped, or from which they were re-landed, has left the Port, give information of such short-shipment or re-landing to the Customs-collector.

Upon an application being made to the Customs-collector, any duty levied upon goods not shipped, or upon goods shipped and afterwards re-landed, shall be refunded to the person on whose behalf such duty was paid: Provided that no such refund shall be allowed unless information has been given as above required.

141. If, after having cleared from any Customs-port any vessel, without having discharged her cargo, returns to such Port, or puts into any other Customs-port, any owner of goods in such vessel, if he desires to land or tranship the same or any portion thereof for re-export, may, with the consent of the Master, apply to the Customs-collector in that behalf.

The Customs-collector, if he grant the application, shall thereupon send an officer of Customs to watch the vessel, and to take charge of such goods during such re-landing or transhipment.

Such goods shall not be allowed to be transhipped or re-exported free of duty by reason of the previous settlement of duty at the time of first export, unless they are lodged and remain until the time of re-export, under the custody of an officer of Customs, in a place appointed by the Customs-collector, or are transhipped under such custody.

All expenses attending such custody shall be borne by the owner.

142. In either of the cases mentioned in section 141, the Master of the vessel may enter such vessel inwards, and any owner of goods therein may, with the consent of the Master, land the same under the rules herein contained for the importation of goods.

In every such case, any export-duty levied shall be refunded to, and any amount paid in drawback shall be recovered from, such owner.

143. The Customs-collector may, on application by the Master of any vessel, which is obliged before completing her voyage to put into any Customs-port for repairs, permit him to land the cargo, or any portion thereof, and to place it in the custody of an officer of Customs during such repairs, and to re-ship and export the same free of duty.

All expenses attending such custody shall be borne by the Master.

CHAPTER XIV.

SPIRIT.

Exportation of spirit under bond for excise-duty.

144. The Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time make rules prescribing the conditions on which spirit manufactured in British India may be removed from any licensed distillery for exportation without payment of excise-duty.

The person so removing any such spirit shall execute a bond with one or more sureties, in the form marked C hereto annexed, or (when such form is inapplicable or insufficient) in such other form as the said Authority from time to time prescribes, conditioned that such duty shall be paid on all such spirit as is

(a) not exported within four months from the date of the bond, or

(b) exported to a Customs-port unless the payment of excise-duty as provided by this chapter in respect thereof at the port of destination is within six months from the date of the bond proved to the satisfaction of the proper officer.

The Chief Officer of Customs of the port of exportation may, on sufficient cause shown, extend for a further term not exceeding four months the period allowed for the exportation of any such spirit, or for the production of such proof that duty has been paid.

145. Spirit intended for exportation under bond for the excise-duty shall be taken from the distillery direct to the Custom-house, under passes to be granted for that purpose by the officers of Excise.

146. Spirit brought to the Custom-house for exportation under bond for the excise-duty shall, previous to shipment, be gauged and proved by an officer of Customs, and the quantity of spirit for which credit is to be given in the settlement of any bond shall be determined in the same manner.

147. Excise-duty shall be recoverable previous to shipment upon the excess (if any) of the quantity of spirit passed from a distillery over the quantity ascertained by gauge and proof at the Custom-house, less an allowance for ullage and wastage at such rates as are from time to time prescribed by the Local Government and notified in the local official Gazette.

148. Spirit exported under bond for excise-duty from any Customs-port to any other Customs-port, shall be charged at the Port of importation with excise-duty at the ordinary rate to which spirit of the like kind and strength is liable at such Port.

149. Spirit brought to the Custom-house for exportation under bond for the excise-duty may, on payment of such duty, be removed for local consumption under passes to be granted for that purpose by the officers of Excise.

Credit for every such payment shall be given in discharge of the bond to which it relates.

Drawback of excise duty on export of spirit.

150. A drawback of excise-duty paid on spirit manufactured in British India and exported to any Foreign Port under the provisions of section 138, shall be allowed by the Customs-collector at the Port of exportation:

Provided that the exportation be made within one year from the date of payment of such excise-duty, and that the spirit, when brought to the Custom-house, be accompanied by a pass in which such payment is certified.

Such drawback shall be regulated by the strength and quantity of such spirit as ascertained by gauge and proof by an officer of customs.

Miscellaneous.

151. If spirit manufactured in British India upon which excise-duty has been paid is exported from one Customs port to another, and the rate of local excise-duty at the port of importation is higher than that already paid upon such spirit, a differential duty shall be charged thereon, at such rate as the Local Government at such Port may by notification in the local official Gazette from time to time prescribe.

152. Rum-shrub, cordial, and other such liquor prepared in a licensed distillery under the supervision of the surveyor or officer in charge of the distillery shall be charged with excise-duty under this Act according to the quantity of spirit used in its preparation as ascertained by such surveyor or officer.

The provisions of this Act respecting spirit, except such as relate to gauge and proof, shall apply to such liquor.

153. No drawback shall be allowed for any spirit on which duty has been paid, nor shall the duty due on any spirit under bond be remitted, unless the spirit is shipped from the Custom-house, and in a vessel whereon an officer of Customs has been appointed to superintend the receipt of export-cargo.

154. No spirit shipped for exportation shall be re-landed without a special pass from an officer of Excise, in addition to any permission of an officer of Customs which may be required by the law for the time being in force.

155. When by any law for the time being in force a special duty is imposed on spirit rendered unfit for human consumption, the Local Government may from time to time make rules for ascertaining and determining what spirit imported into British India shall be deemed to have been effectually and permanently so rendered unfit and for causing such spirit to be so rendered, if necessary, by their own officers, and at the expense of the person importing the same, before the Customs-duties leviable thereon are levied.

In the absence of any such rules, or if any dispute arises as to their applicability, the Chief Customs-Officer shall decide what spirit is subject only to the said special duty, and such decision shall be final.

Decision where no rules, or their applicability, disputed.

CHAPTER XV. COASTING TRADE.

156. Except as hereinafter provided, nothing in Chapters VII, IX, X, and part of XIII inapplicable to coasting trade. sections 136, 139 and 141 to 143 inclusive of this Act shall apply to coasting vessels or to goods imported or exported in such vessels.

157. The Local Government may, from time to time, make rules consistent with the provisions of this Chapter,

(a) extending any provision of the Chapters and Sections mentioned in section 156 with or without modification to any coasting vessels or to any goods imported or exported in such vessels;

(b) exempting any such vessels or goods from any of the other provisions of this Act except those contained in this Chapter;

(c) prescribing the conditions on which goods, or any specified class of goods, may be (1) carried in a coasting vessel, whether shipped at a Foreign Port, or at a Customs-port, or at a place declared under section 12 to be a port; (2) shipped in a coasting vessel before all dutiable goods and goods brought in such vessel from a Foreign Port have been unladen;

(d) prohibiting the conveyance of any specified class of goods generally, or to or between specified Ports in a coasting vessel;

158. Before any coasting vessel departs from the port of lading or when there are more ports of lading than one, the first port of lading, the Master shall fill in, sign and deliver to the

Customs-collector a manifest in duplicate containing a true specification of all goods to be carried in such vessel, in such form, and accompanied by such shipping-bills or other documents as may from time to time be prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority

If the Customs-collector sees no objection to the departure of the vessel, he shall retain the duplicate and return the original manifest dated and signed by him together with its accompaniments; and such manifest shall be the port-clearance of the vessel unless, under the general orders of the Chief Customs-Authority, a separate port-clearance be prescribed.

159. Within twenty-four hours after the arrival of any coasting vessel at any Customs-port, whether intermediate or final, and before any goods are there discharged, the manifest, together with the other documents referred to in section 158, shall be delivered to the Customs-collector, who shall note on the manifest the date of delivery.

If the vessel has touched at any Foreign Port between such Port of arrival and her last preceding Customs-port of departure, the Master shall append to the manifest a declaration to that effect, and shall also indicate on the manifest the portions (if any) of the cargo therein described which have been discharged, and subjoin thereto a true specification of all goods shipped at such Port.

If the Customs-port of arrival be an intermediate Port, and a portion only of the cargo is to be discharged thereat, the Master shall likewise so deliver an extract from the manifest signed by him, relating to such portion, and the Customs-collector shall, after verifying such extract, return to him the original manifest and all documents accompanying it except those relating to such portion.

If in any case the cargo actually on board any coasting vessel on her arrival at any Customs-port does not, owing to short-shipment, re-landing, or other cause, correspond with the specification thereof in the manifest returned to the Master under the second clause of section 158, such Master shall, before delivery of such manifest under this section, note thereon the particulars of the difference.

The Customs-collector, when satisfied with the manifest and other documents, shall grant an order to break bulk.

160. Before any coasting vessel departs from any Customs-port at which she has touched during her voyage, the Master shall re-deliver the original manifest to the Customs-collector, after indicating thereon the portions (if any) of the cargo therein described which have been discharged, and subjoining thereto a true specification of all goods shipped at such Port. He shall also deliver a duplicate, signed by him, of the specification so subjoined.

If the Customs-collector sees no objection to the departure of the vessel, he shall proceed as prescribed in the second clause of section 158.

161. The Customs-collector may, for sufficient reason, refuse port-clearance to any coasting vessel declared to be bound to, or about to touch at, any Customs-port, unless the owner or Master gives a bond with such security as the Customs-collector deems sufficient for the production to the Customs-collector of a certificate from the proper officer of the Port to which such vessel is said to be bound, of her arrival at such Port within a reasonable time to be prescribed in each case by the Customs-collector.

Power to require bond before port-clearance is granted.

162. When permission has been granted by the Customs-collector for the discharge of cargo from any coasting vessel—

(a) if the vessel has not touched at any intermediate Foreign Port in the course of her voyage, and has not on board any dutiable goods, the cargo may be forthwith landed and removed by the owner, without entry thereof at the Customs-house and clearance for home-consumption, but subject to such general check and control as the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time by rules prescribe;

(b) if the vessel has so touched at any such Port, or has on board any such goods, such vessel shall be subject to all the provisions of Chapter VII of this Act relating to vessels arriving and such goods, and until such goods have been duly discharged all other goods on board shall be subject to the provisions of Chapter IX of this Act relating to goods imported.

163. If any of the goods on board of any coasting vessel be subject to any excise-duty, they shall not be unladen without the permission of the proper officer of Excise.

164. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, the Chief Customs Authority may authorize the Customs-collector to grant a general pass, on any conditions which such Authority thinks expedient, for the lading and clearance, and for the entry and unlading, of any coasting steam-vessel at any Ports of despatch or destination, or at any intermediate Ports at which she touches for the purpose of receiving goods or passengers.

Such pass shall be valid throughout British India, or for such Ports only as may be specified therein.

Any such general pass may be revoked by order of the Chief Customs-Authority by whom the grant thereof was authorized, by notice in writing under the hand of such Authority, delivered to the Master or to the owner of such steam-vessel, or to any of the crew on board.

165. The Chief Customs-Authority may direct that the Master of any coasting vessel which is square-rigged or propelled by steam shall keep, or cause to be kept, a cargo-book, stating the name of the Master, the vessel, the Port to which she belongs, and the Port to which on each voyage she is bound.

At every Port of lading such Master shall enter, or cause to be entered, in such book the name of such Port, and an account of all goods there taken on board of such vessel, with a description of the packages, and the quantities and descriptions of the goods contained therein or stowed loose, and the names of the respective shippers and consignees, in so far as such particulars are known to him.

At every Port of discharge of any such goods such Master shall enter, or cause to be entered, in such book the respective days on which such goods or any of them are delivered out of such vessel.

The respective times of departure from every Port of lading, and of arrival at every Port of discharge, shall in like manner be duly entered.

Every such Master shall, on demand, produce his cargo-book for the inspection of any officer of Customs, and such officer shall be at liberty to make any note or remark therein.

The Chief Customs-Authority may, in the case of any vessel the Master whereof has been directed to keep a cargo-book under this section, dispense with the manifest required under sections 158, 159 and 160.

166. Any duly empowered officer of Customs may go on board of any coasting vessel in any Port or place in British India, and may at any period of a voyage search any such vessel and examine all goods on board, and all goods then lading or unlading, and may demand the production of any document, which ought to be on board of any such vessel.

The Customs-collector may further require that any such document belonging to any coasting vessel then in Port shall be brought to him for inspection.

CHAPTER XVI.

section 76, or if any Master or officer of a vessel receiving the same fails to deliver it when required so to do by any officer of Customs authorized to make such requisition,
31.—If any goods are, without permission, shipped or water-borne to be shipped or are landed except from or at a wharf or other place duly appointed for the purpose; or if any goods water-borne for the purpose of being landed or shipped are not landed or shipped without unnecessary delay; or if the boat containing such goods be found out of the proper track between the vessel and the wharf or other proper place of landing or shipping, and such deviation be not accounted for to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector; or	73	such goods shall be liable to confiscation; and the person by whose authority the goods are shipped, landed water-borne or transhipped and the person in charge of the vessel employed conveying them, shall each be liable to a penalty not exceeding twice the amount of the duty (if any) leviable on such goods.
if any goods are transhipped contrary to the provisions of section 78,	78
32.—If, after the issue of a notification under section 79 with regard to any Port, any goods are found within the limits of such Port on board of any boat not duly licensed and registered,	79	such goods, unless they are covered by a special permit from the Customs-collector, shall be liable to confiscation, and the owner or the person in charge of the boat shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one hundred rupees.
33.—If any Master of a vessel discharges or suffers to be discharged any goods not duly entered in the manifest of such vessel,	55 & 82	such Master shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees.
34.—If any goods are found concealed in any place, box or closed receptacle in any vessel, and are not duly accounted for to the satisfaction of the officer in charge of the Custom-house,	General	such goods shall be liable to confiscation,
35.—If any goods are found on board in excess of those entered in the manifest, or not corresponding with the specification therein contained,	55 & 82	such goods shall be liable to confiscation, or to be charged with such increased rates of duty as the chief officer of Customs directs.
36.—If, after any goods have been landed and before they have been passed through the Custom-house, the owner removes or attempts to remove them, with the intention of defrauding the revenue,	86 & 87	such goods shall be liable to confiscation; or if the goods cannot be recovered, the owner shall be liable, in addition to full duty, to a penalty not exceeding twice the amount of such duty, if the goods be dutiable and the duty leviable there on can be ascertained; or, otherwise to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees for every missing or deficient package or separate article.

The Magistrate or Customs-collector before whom any person is so brought shall, if he see no reasonable ground for search, forthwith discharge such person; but if otherwise, shall direct that the search be made.

A female shall not be searched by any but a female.

171. Any duly empowered officer of Customs or other person duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, may stop and search for smuggled goods any vessel, cart or other means of conveyance provided that he has reason to believe that smuggled goods are contained therein.

172. Any Magistrate may, on application by a Customs-collector, stating his belief that dutiable or prohibited goods are secreted in any place within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Magistrate, issue a warrant to search for such goods.

Such warrant shall be executed in the same way, and shall have the same effect, as a search-warrant issued under the law relating to Criminal Procedure.

173. Any person against whom a reasonable suspicion exists that he has been guilty of an offence under this Act, may be arrested in any place, either upon land or water, by any officer of Customs or other person duly employed for the prevention of smuggling.

CHAPTER XVII.

PROCEDURE RELATING TO OFFENCES, APPEALS, &c.

169. Any officer of Customs duly employed in the prevention of smuggling may search any person on board of any vessel in any Port in British India, or any person who has landed from any vessel:

Provided that such officer has reason to believe that such person has dutiable or prohibited goods secreted about his person.

170. When any officer of Customs is about to search any person under the provisions of section 169, such person may require the said officer to take him, previous to search, before the nearest Magistrate or Customs-collector.

If such requisition be made, the officer of Customs may detain the person making it until he a Customs-collector, stating his belief that dutiable or prohibited goods are secreted in any place within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Magistrate, issue a warrant to search for such goods.

Such warrant shall be executed in the same way, and shall have the same effect, as a search-warrant issued under the law relating to Criminal Procedure.

Any person against whom a reasonable suspicion exists that he has been guilty of an offence under this Act, may be arrested in any place, either upon land or water, by any officer of Customs or other person duly employed for the prevention of smuggling.

174. Every person arrested on the ground

Magistrate, such Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, either commit him to gaol or order him to be kept in the custody of the Police for such time as is necessary to enable such Magistrate to communicate with the proper officers of Customs:

Provided that any person so arrested, committed, or kept shall be released on giving security to the satisfaction of the Magistrate to appear at such time and place as such Magistrate appoints in this behalf.

176. If any person liable to be arrested under Person escaping may be afterwards arrested.

this Act, is not arrested at the time of committing the offence for which he is so liable, or after arrest, makes his escape, he may at any time afterwards be arrested and taken before a Magistrate, to be dealt with as if he had been arrested at the time of committing such offence.

177. When any person employed on the crew

Persons in Her Majesty's Navy, when arrested to be secured on board until warrant procured.

of any of the ships of Her Majesty's Navy, Indian Marine or Marine Survey is arrested under this Act, the arresting officer shall forthwith give notice thereof to the commanding officer of the ship, who shall thereupon place such person in security on board of such ship, until the arresting officer has obtained a warrant from a Magistrate for bringing up such person to be dealt with according to law.

The Magistrate shall grant such warrant upon complaint made to him by the arresting officer, stating the offence for which the person is detained.

178. Any thing liable to confiscation under this

Seizure of things liable to confiscation.

Act may be seized in any place, either upon land or water, by any officer of Customs or other person duly employed for the prevention of smuggling.

179. All things seized on the ground that they are liable to confiscation under this Act shall, as soon as conveniently may be, be delivered into the care of any Customs officer authorized to receive the same.

If there be no such officer at hand, all such things shall be carried to and deposited at the Custom-house nearest to the place of seizure.

If there be no Custom-house within a convenient distance, such things shall be deposited at the nearest place appointed by the Chief Customs-Authority for the deposit of things so seized.

180. When any things liable to confiscation

Procedure in respect of things seized on suspicion.

under this Act are seized by any Police-officer on suspicion that they have been stolen, he may carry them to any

Police-station or Court at which a complaint connected with the stealing or receiving of such things has been made, or an enquiry connected with such stealing or receiving is in progress, and there detain such things until the dismissal of such complaint or the conclusion of such enquiry or of any trial thence resulting.

In every such case the Police-officer seizing the things shall send written notice of their seizure and detention to the nearest Custom-house; and immediately after the dismissal of the complaint or the conclusion of the enquiry or trial, he shall cause such things to be conveyed to, and deposited at, the nearest Custom-house, to be there proceeded against according to law.

181. When any thing is or seized, or any person is arrested, under this Act, the officer or other person making such seizure or arrest shall, on demand of the person in charge of the thing so seized, or of the person so arrested, give him a statement in writing of the reason for such seizure or arrest.

182. In every case except the cases mentioned

Adjudication of confiscations and penalties.

in section 167, Nos. 26, 72 and 74 to 76 both inclusive, in which, under this Act, anything is liable to confiscation or to increased rates of duty;

or any person is liable to a penalty;

such confiscation, increased rate of duty or penalty may be adjudged—

(a) without limit, by a Deputy Commissioner or Deputy Collector of Customs, or a Customs-collector;

(b) up to confiscation of goods not exceeding two hundred and fifty rupees in value, and imposition of penalty or increased duty not exceeding one-hundred, rupees by an Assistant Commissioner or Assistant Collector of Customs;

(c) up to confiscation of goods not exceeding fifty rupees in value, and imposition of penalty or increased duty not exceeding ten rupees, by such other subordinate officers of Customs as the Local Government may, from time to time, empower in that behalf in virtue of their office:

Provided that the Local Government may, in the case of any officer, performing the duties of a Customs-collector, limit his powers to those indicated in clause (b) or in clause (c) of this section, and may confer on any officer by name, or in virtue of his office, the powers indicated in clauses (a), (b) or (c) of this section.

183. Whenever confiscation is authorized by Option to pay fine in lieu of confiscation.

this Act, the officer adjudging it shall give the owner of the goods an option to pay in lieu of confiscation such fine as the officer thinks fit.

184. When anything is confiscated under section

On confiscation of vessel or goods, property to vest in Her Majesty.

182, such thing shall thereupon vest in Her Majesty.

The officer adjudging confiscation shall take and hold possession of the thing confiscated, and every officer of Police, on the requisition of such officer, shall assist him in taking and holding such possession.

185. If any vessel actually departs without a port-clearance, or after failing to bring-to when required at any station appointed under section 17, the penalty to which the Master of such vessel is liable may be adjudged by the Chief Customs Officer of any Customs-port to which such vessel proceeds, or in which she is, and in the case of Aden, by such officer as the Governor of Bombay in Council appoints in this behalf.

A certificate of such departure or failure to bring-to when required, purporting to be signed by the Chief Customs Officer of the Port from which the vessel is stated to have so departed, shall be prima facie proof of the fact so certified.

186. The award of any confiscation, penalty or increased rate of duty under this Act by an officer of Customs shall not prevent the infliction of any punishment to which the person affected thereby is liable under any other law.

187. All offences against this Act, other than those cognizable under section 182 by officers of Customs may be tried summarily by a Magistrate.

188. Any person deeming himself aggrieved by any decision or order passed by an officer of customs under this Act may, within three months from the date of such decision or order, appeal therefrom to the Chief Customs-Authority, or, in such cases as the Local Government directs, to any officer of Customs not inferior in rank to a Customs Collector and empowered in that behalf by name or in virtue of his office by the Local Government.

Such authority or officer may thereupon make such further enquiry and pass such order as he thinks fit, confirming, altering or annulling the decision or order appealed against :

Provided that no such order in appeal shall have the effect of subjecting any person to any greater confiscation, penalty or rate of duty than has been adjudged against him in the original decision or order.

Every order passed in appeal under this section shall, subject to the power of revision conferred by section 191, be final.

189. Where the decision or order appealed against relates to any duty or penalty leviable in respect of any goods, the owner of such goods, if desirous of appealing against such decision or order, shall, pending the appeal, deposit in the hands of the Customs-collector at the Port where the dispute arises the amount demanded by the officer passing such decision or order.

When delivery of such goods to the owner thereof is withheld merely by reason of such amount not being paid, the Customs-collector shall upon such deposit being made cause such goods to be delivered to such owner.

If upon any such appeal it is decided that the whole or any portion of such amount was not leviable in respect of such goods, the Customs-collector shall return such amount or portion (as the case may be) to the owner of such goods on demand by such owner.

190. If, upon consideration of the circumstances under which any penalty, increased rate of duty or confiscation has been adjudged under this Act by an officer of Customs, the Chief Customs-Authority is of opinion that such penalty, increased rate or confiscation ought to be remitted in whole or in part, or commuted, such Authority may remit the same or any portion thereof, or may, with the consent of the owner of any goods ordered to be confiscated, commute the order of confiscation to a penalty not exceeding the value of such goods.

191. The Local Government may on the application of any person aggrieved by any decision or order passed under this Act by any officer of Customs or Chief Customs-Authority, and from which no appeal lies, reverse or modify such decision or order.

192. When any fine, penalty or increased rate of duty is leviable under this Act, the goods in respect of which such fine, penalty or rate is leviable shall not be removed by the owner until such fine, penalty or rate is paid.

If any person has become liable to any such fine, penalty or rate in respect of any goods, the Customs-collector may detain any other goods belonging to such person passing through the custom-house until such fine, penalty or rate is paid.

193. When a penalty or increased rate of duty is adjudged against any person under this Act by any officer of Customs, such officer, if such penalty or increased rate be not paid, may levy the same by sale of any goods of the said person which may be in his charge, or in the charge of any other officer of Customs.

When an officer of Customs who has adjudged a penalty or increased rate of duty against any person under this Act is unable to realize the unpaid amount thereof from such goods, such officer may notify in writing to any Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such person or any goods belonging to him may be, the name and residence of the said person and the amount of penalty or increased rate of duty unrecovered ; and such Magistrate shall thereupon proceed to enforce payment of the said amount in like manner as if such penalty or increased rate had been a fine inflicted by himself.

CHAPTER XVIII.

MISCELLANEOUS.

194. Any officer of Customs may open any package, and examine any goods brought by sea to, or shipped or brought for shipment at, any Customs-port.

195. The Customs-collector may, on the entry or clearance of any goods, or at any time while such goods are being passed through the Custom-house, take samples of such goods, for examination or for ascertaining the value thereof on which duties are payable, or for any other necessary purpose.

Every such sample shall, if practicable, be at the option of the owner either restored to him, or sold and the proceeds accounted for to him.

196. The unshipping, carrying, shipping and landing of all goods, and the bringing of them to the proper place for examination or weighing, and the putting of them into and out of the scales, and the opening, unpacking, bulking, sorting, lotting, marking and numbering of goods, where such operations are necessary or permitted, and the removing of goods to, and the placing of them in, the proper place of deposit, shall be performed by or at the expense of the owner of such goods.

197. No owner of goods shall be entitled to claim from any officer of Customs compensation for any loss or damage occurring to such goods at any time while they remain or are lawfully detained in any Custom-house, or on any Custom-house wharf, or under charge of any officer of Customs, unless it be proved that such loss or damage was occasioned by the neglect or wilful act of such officer of Customs.

198. No proceeding other than a suit shall be commenced against any person for anything purporting to be done in pursuance of this Act without giving to such person a month's previous notice in writing of the intended proceeding, and of the cause thereof; or after the expiration of three months from the Limitation, accrual of such cause.

199. The Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time fix the period after the expiration of which goods left on any Custom-house wharf, or other authorized landing place or part of the Custom-house premises, shall be subject to payment of fees, and the amount of such fees.

200. A duplicate of any certificate, manifest, bill or other Custom-house document may, on payment of a fee not exceeding ten rupees, be furnished, at the discretion of the Customs-collector, to any person applying for the same, if the Customs-collector is satisfied that no fraud has been committed or is intended by the applicant.

201. Except in the cases provided for by sections 36, 55, 63 and 94, the Customs-collector may in his discretion, upon payment of one rupee, authorize any document, after it has been entered and recorded in the Custom-house, to be amended.

202. No person authorized to act as an agent for the transaction of any business relating to the entrance or clearance of any vessel, or the import or export of goods or baggage, shall so act in any Custom-house, unless such authorization is approved by the Customs-collector.

Such officer may require any person so authorized to give a bond with sufficient security, in any sum not exceeding five thousand rupees, for his faithful behaviour as regards the Custom-house regulations and officers.

Such officer may, in case of misbehaviour of the person so authorized, suspend or withdraw such approval, but an appeal against every such suspension or withdrawal shall lie to the Chief Customs-Authority, whose decision thereon shall be final.

Every appeal under this section shall be made within one month of the suspension or withdrawal.

203. When any person applies to any officer of Customs for permission to transact any specified business with him on behalf of any other person, such officer may require the applicant to produce a written authority from the person on whose behalf such business is to be transacted, and in default of the production of such authority may refuse such permission.

The clerk, servant, or agent, of any person or mercantile firm, may transact business generally at the Custom-house on behalf of such person or firm: Provided that the Customs-collector may refuse to recognize such clerk, servant or agent unless such person or a member of such firm identifies such clerk, servant or agent to the Customs-collector as empowered to transact such business, and deposits with the Customs-collector an authority in writing duly signed, authorizing such clerk, servant or agent to transact such business on behalf of such person or firm.

204. All rules made under this Act shall be notified in the official Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law.

All such rules for the time being in force shall be collected, arranged and published at intervals not exceeding two years, and shall be sold to the public at a reasonable price.

205. Any notification made by any authority under powers conferred by this Act, may be cancelled in like manner by the same authority.

206. If in any case relating to the removal of goods from a warehouse without payment of duty, the person offending be an officer of Customs not acting in execution of his duty, and be prosecuted to conviction by the owner of such goods, no duty shall be payable in respect of such goods. For any damage so occasioned by such officer, the Customs-collector shall, with the sanction of the Chief Customs-Authority, make due compensation to such owner.

207. Nothing in this Act shall affect any law for the time being in force relating to the Commissioners for making improvements in the Port of Calcutta or the Trustees of the Port of Bombay respectively.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 23rd February 1878, and was referred to a Select Committee :—

No. 3 of 1878.

A Bill to regulate Ferries in the Panjáb, North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

WHEREAS it is expedient to regulate ferries in the Panjáb, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

I.—PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called “ The Northern India Short title. Ferries Act, 1878 :”

It extends only to the territories respectively administered by the Lieutenant-Governors of the Panjáb and the North-Western Provinces and the Chief Commissioner of Oudh ; and

It shall come into force in each of the said territories on such date as the Local Government may by notification in the local official Gazette fix in this behalf.

2. On and from the date on which it shall come into force in the territories respectively administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, Bengal Regulation VI of 1819 shall be repealed therein.

3. In this Act the word “ ferry ” includes a bridge of boats, pontoons or rafts, and also includes the approaches to, and landing-places of, a ferry.

Interpretation-clause.

II.—PUBLIC FERRIES.

Power to declare and establish public ferries. 4. The Local Government may, from time to time,

(a) declare what ferries shall be deemed public ferries, and the respective districts in which, for the purposes of this Act, they shall be deemed to be situate ;

(b) take possession of a private ferry and declare it to be a public ferry ;

(c) establish new public ferries, where, in its opinion, they are needed ;

(d) change the course of any public ferry ;

(e) discontinue any public ferry which it deems unnecessary.

Every such declaration, establishment, change or discontinuance shall be made by notification in the local official Gazette :

Provided that, when a river lies between two Provinces, the powers conferred by this section shall in respect of such river be exercised by the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India and not otherwise :

Provided also that, when any alteration in the course of a public ferry is rendered necessary by changes in the bed of the river, such alteration may be made by the Commissioner of the Division in which such ferry is situate.

5. Claims for compensation for any loss sustained by any person in consequence of a private ferry being taken possession of under section four shall be enquired into by the Magistrate of the District and submitted for the consideration and orders of the Local Government, and shall not be cognizable by the Civil Courts.

Claims for compensation.

6. The immediate superintendence of all public ferries shall, except as provided in section seven, be vested in the Magistrate of

Superintendence of ferries. his District in which such ferries are situate, or such other officer as the Local Government may, from time to time, appoint in this behalf;

and such Magistrate or officer shall make all necessary arrangements for the supply of boats for such ferries, and for the collection of the authorized tolls leviable thereat.

7. The Local Government may direct that any

Management may be vested in local municipality; public ferry situated within the limits of a town be managed by the officer or public body charged with the superintendence of the municipal arrangements of such town;

and may further direct that all or any part of the proceeds from such ferry be paid into the Municipal Fund of such town;

and thereupon such ferry shall be managed, and such proceeds or part thereof shall be paid, accordingly.

8. The tolls at any public ferry may from time

Letting ferry-tolls by auction. to time be let by public auction for such term not exceeding five years as may be deemed expedient by the Commissioner of the Division in which such ferry is situate, and may be let to the highest bidder.

The lessee shall conform to the rules made under this Act for the management and control of such ferry; and may be called upon by the officer conducting the auction, to give such security for his good conduct and for the punctual payment of the rent as such officer thinks fit.

Such officer may, for sufficient reason recorded in writing under his hand, refuse to accept the offer of the highest bidder, and may accept any other bid, or may withdraw the tolls from auction.

9. All arrears due by the lessee of a public ferry

Recovery of arrears from lessee. on account of his lease may be recovered from the lessee or his surety (if any) by the Magistrate of the District in which such ferry is situate, as if they were arrears of land-revenue.

10. The Local Government may cancel the lease

Power to cancel lease. of any public ferry, on the expiration of six months' notice to the lessee of its intention to cancel such lease.

When any lease is cancelled under this section, the Magistrate of the District shall pay to the lessee such compensation as he may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, award.

11. Subject to the revision and confirmation of Power to make rules. the Local Government, the Commissioner of each Division may from time to time make rules consistent with this Act—for the control and the management of all public ferries within his division;

for regulating the time and manner at and in which, and the terms on which, the tolls of such ferries may be let by auction;

for collecting the rents payable for the tolls of such ferries;

and for fixing the limits of such ferries; and, when the tolls of a ferry have been let under section eight, he may from time to time (subject as aforesaid) make additional rules consistent with this Act—

(a) in cases in which the communication is to be established by means of a bridge of boats, pontoons or rafts, for regulating the manner in which such bridge shall be constructed and maintained, and

(b) in cases in which the traffic is conveyed in boats, for regulating (1) the number and kinds of such boats and their dimensions, (2) the number of the crew to be kept by the lessee for each boat, (3) the maintenance of such boats continually in good condition, (4) the hours during which, and the intervals within which, the lessee shall be bound to ply, and (5) the number of passengers, carts, carriages and animals, and the quantity of goods, that may be carried in each kind of boat at one trip.

The lessee shall make such returns of traffic as the Commissioner may from time to time require.

12. No person shall, except with the sanction

Private ferry not to ply within two miles of public ferry without sanction. of the officer charged with the management of a public ferry, keep a ferry boat for the purpose of plying for hire to or from any point within a distance of two miles from the limits of a public ferry:

Provided that, in the case of any specified public ferry, the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, reduce the said distance of two miles to such extent as it thinks fit:

Provided also that nothing hereinbefore contained shall prevent persons plying between two places, one of which is without and one within the said limits, when the distance between such two places is not less than three miles, or apply to boats which the Local Government expressly exempts from the operation of this section.

13. No person shall use the approach to, or Using approaches, &c., without payment. landing-place of, a public ferry, unless he has paid the toll payable for crossing such ferry.

III.—TOLLS.

14. Tolls, according to such rates as are from

Tolls. time to time fixed by the Local Government, shall be levied on all persons, animals and other things crossing any river by a public ferry:

Provided that the Local Government may, from time to time, declare what persons, animals or other things shall, when employed or transmitted on the public service, or for other sufficient reason, be exempt from payment of such tolls.

Where the tolls of a ferry have been let under section eight, any such declaration, if made after the date of the auction, shall entitle the lessee to such abatement of the rent payable in respect of the tolls as may be fixed by the Commissioner of the Division with the concurrence of the Local Government.

15. The lessee or other person authorized to

Table of tolls. collect the tolls of any public ferry, shall affix a table of such tolls, legibly written or printed in the vernacular language, in some conspicuous place near the ferry, and shall be bound to produce, on demand, a list of the tolls, signed by the Magistrate of the District or such other officer as he appoints on this behalf.

16. Except as provided by section seven, all tolls

Tolls or rents to be credited to district fund.

or rents received under this Act, after defraying thereout all charges incurred in carrying out this Act in the Province in which they are so received, shall be disposed of as follows, that is to say, (a) in the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, such tolls and rents shall be credited to the Fund constituted for those Provinces by the North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1878: (b) in the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, such tolls and rents shall be credited to the Fund constituted for that Province by the Oudh Local Rates Act, 1878; and (c) in the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjab, such tolls and rents shall be credited to the Local Government and applied at its discretion in any portion of such territories to any of the purposes specified in the second clause of section 7 of the Panjab Local Rates Act, 1878.

17. Any person may compound for the tolls payable for the use of a public ferry at such rates and determined by any Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates, and any Magistrate having summary jurisdiction under chapter XVIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure shall try such offences in manner provided by that chapter.

27. Every Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates

Magistrate may assess damage done by offender.

trying offences under this Act, may enquire into and assess the value of the damage (if any) done by the offender to the ferry concerned, and shall order the amount of such value to be paid by him in addition to any fine imposed upon him under this Act; and the amount so ordered to be paid shall be leviable as if it were a fine.

28. All matters determined, orders issued, acts done, penalties imposed and proceedings held in the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb after the repeal of Bengal Regulation VI of 1819 by the Panjáb Laws Act, 1872, section 4, and before this Act comes into force in such territories shall, whenever such determinations, orders, acts, penalties or proceedings would have been lawful if the said Regulation had been in force, be deemed to have been lawfully determined, issued, done, imposed and held respectively.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

An Act for the regulation of ferries in the Panjáb is much needed. Up to the 1st June 1872, when Act No. IV of 1872 (The Panjáb Laws Act) came into force, ferries in the Panjáb were governed by Bengal Regulation VI of 1819; but by the Panjáb Laws Act that Regulation was inadvertently repealed, and, no other law being substituted for it, there has from that date been no law for the control of ferries in the Panjáb. Another result is that, as the law now stands, it would be difficult for the Local Government to prevent an unlicensed person from setting up a rival ferry alongside of a Government ferry, and thus materially reducing the income of the latter ferry and the funds available for its maintenance.

To remedy this state of things, and at the same time to provide generally for the regulation of Government ferries, a Bill to regulate ferries in the Panjáb was prepared. About the same time the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh submitted a draft Bill for the regulation of ferries in the territories under his administration. The Bill so submitted, and the Bill for the Panjáb, as modified and supplemented in accordance with communications subsequently received from the Panjáb, were found to differ so little, that it was thought advisable to amalgamate the two Bills, and accordingly the present Bill, extending to the Panjáb, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, has been prepared.

The Bill is based upon the Burma Ferries Act, II of 1873, and the provisions of that Act have been followed as closely as the different circumstances and requirements of the provinces with which this Bill deals would permit.

In section 3 it has been thought desirable to declare that the term 'ferry' includes boat-bridges, as they often take the place of ferries in Northern India, and are managed in the same way as ferries properly so called.

There appear to be no recognized private ferries in the Panjáb, but they exist in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. A clause has, therefore, been introduced in section 4, in accordance with the wishes of the Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Commissioner, giving the Local Government power to take possession of private ferries and make them public, and in section 5 the manner in which claims for compensation made by persons whose ferries are so taken by the Government are to be dealt with, is laid down. This section follows the provisions of section 6 of Regulation VI of 1819.

In cases in which an alteration in the course of a public ferry is rendered necessary by changes in the bed of the river, power has been given to the Commissioner (section 4) to make such alteration as is necessary without referring to the Local Government.

Section 9 provides that arrears due by the lessee of a public ferry on account of his lease may be recovered as if they were arrears of land-revenue.

By section 13 it is provided that any person using the approach to, or landing-place of, a ferry shall pay toll.

By section 17 power is given to any person to compound for ferry-tolls. This seems a reasonable provision for people living in the neighbourhood of the ferry, who have constantly to cross it for purposes of business or otherwise.

Sections 18 and 19 deal with private ferries: the former empowers the Commissioner, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, to make rules for the maintenance of order and the safety of passengers and property: the latter declares that the tolls chargeable at such ferries shall not exceed the highest rates fixed for similar public ferries.

The penalties generally have been increased in accordance with the wishes of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

ANNUAL REPORT ON THE OPERATIONS OF THE POST OFFICE OF INDIA FOR THE YEAR 1876-77.

No. 7000, dated Calcutta, 27th December, 1877.

From—A. M. MONTEATH, Esq., Director General of the Post Office of India,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

I HAVE the honor to submit the annual report on the operations of the Post Office of India during the year 1876-77.

GENERAL POSTAL UNION.

2. British India was admitted into the General Postal Union with effect from the 1st July 1876. Prior to that date the Union comprised, besides European countries, only Egypt and the United States of America; and the communications by which these last-mentioned countries were linked to Europe were not such as to give rise to any special question about the cost of sea transit. That question was started by the application for admission made on behalf of India, and it formed the main subject of discussion at the meeting of delegates which took place at Berne in January 1876, for the purpose of considering the admission of India.

3. The result of the discussion was summarized in my last annual report; and I shall recapitulate it here only to the extent of mentioning that it included the allowance of (1) an additional rate to be levied for sea postage, not exceeding the maximum allowed by the Union Treaty, and (2) an additional rate to be levied for other extraordinary expenses. Thus the

i. e., for the Southampton route, 2½ annas as the "ordinary" rate, plus 2½ annas "additional" for sea-transit = 5 annas per ½ oz.; and for the Brindisi route, involving extraordinary expenses of conveyance by special train across Europe, 5 annas, as above, plus 1 anna "extraordinary" = 6 annas per ½ oz.

rates of postage from India to the United Kingdom became 5* annas per ½ oz. via Southampton, and 6* annas per ½ oz. via Brindisi, instead of 6 annas and 8 annas as before.

4. The French Colonies were admitted to the Union at the same time and under the same conditions.

5. No other admissions took place during the year now under report; and the numerous subsequent admissions, including British, Spanish, Dutch, Portuguese and Danish Colonies, as well as Japan, Brazil and Persia, will more appropriately come under observation in my next report.

6. The reduction of postage rates between India and the United Kingdom was estimated to involve a sacrifice of revenue of about £45,000 per annum, the Indian half share being £22,500. So far as is known from the information as yet available, the sacrifice has been only about £14,000 for the three quarters during which the reduced rates were in operation, which would be equivalent to a loss of £18,666 for a whole year, instead of £22,500 as estimated. But, as no details have yet been received from England of the accounts of the year under report, the figures given above must be regarded as subject to correction.

7. And I may here explain that the communication by sea between India and Europe is a thing which has always been treated as quite separate from the Indian inland post, to which this report refers. The Indian post collects the sea postage, but credits the whole of it to Great Britain, where an account of sea service revenue and expenditure is kept. The net loss on the service is then divided between India and the United Kingdom. This net loss has been as follows:—

			Net loss on the overland mail service charged against India.
			£
1869-70	29,300	These sums show considerable fluctuation in the amounts actually paid in each year: the payments are made on estimate and not on fixed dates, so that a particular quarter's payment sometimes falls in one year and sometimes in another; but the accounts, when adjusted so as to show the amounts properly belonging to each year, exhibit a net loss of £73,000 in the first year (1869-70), and a decreasing sum in the following years down to about £53,000 in 1875-76.
1870-71	132,783
1871-72	30,724
1872-73	61,955
1873-74	60,000
1874-75	46,497
1875-76	48,000	{ The calculation of the sum properly belonging to this year has not been received from London.
1876-77	62,170
TOTAL	471,129
Average per annum	58,928

The increase of the net loss in the year under report is the result of the reduction of the rates of postage which came into operation on the 1st July 1876, when India was admitted to the Union.

8. Further remarks will be made on this point under the head of financial results (see paragraph 72).

9. The statistics of foreign correspondence shew that the reduction of postage rates has had considerable effect upon correspondence with the United Kingdom in the way of transferring a portion of it from the Southampton to the Brindisi route, but very little effect in the way of increasing the aggregate amount of correspondence. This point, however, will come under examination more appropriately in the section headed "Correspondence" (see paragraph 39).

10. There were altogether seven instances of delay in the arrival of the European mail steamer at Bombay, as shewn on the margin. The two most serious cases occurred in January 1877, the one by the 'Aroca' involving a delay of 3½ days, being attributed by the Company to bad weather west of Suez and a heavy north-east monsoon, and the other by the 'Surat,' involving a delay of 2 days, being stated to be due to bad weather experienced by the corresponding vessel on the other side of Suez. Besides these instances there was one in which the Southampton mails of the 6th April 1876 missed the steamer from Suez to Bombay, owing to a break-down near Lisbon of the steamer 'Surat.'

LOCAL STEAM SERVICES.

11. There have been no changes in these services during the year under report, so I give below merely a recapitulation of the statement appertaining to the previous year, viz.—

- (1). Fortnightly communication between Calcutta and Kyauk Phyoo via Chittagong and Akyab, with a four-weekly extension to Sandoway during the fair season.
- (2). Fortnightly communication between Calcutta and Rangoon via Akyab.
- (3). Weekly communication between Calcutta, Rangoon and Moulmein.

BY THE BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

The yearly subsidy for the first nine lines is Rs. 7,25,000. The last-mentioned line is under a separate contract, the consideration given by Government being not in the form of subsidy, but in that of guaranteed rates for the transport of Government stores. The whole of the subsidy mentioned above is paid by the Post Office.

- By OTHER AGENTS—
- (1). By the Irrawaddy Flotilla Company, a weekly communication between Rangoon, Mandalay and intermediate ports, with a monthly extension to Bhamo, the subsidy being Rs. 5,000 per mensem.
 - (2). By the Irrawaddy Flotilla Company, a semi-weekly communication between Rangoon and Bassein on a monthly subsidy of Rs. 1,500.
 - (3). By the Burmese Steam Tug Company, a fortnightly communication between Moulmein, Tavoy and Mergui on a monthly subsidy of Rs. 1,500.
 - (4). By Jardine, Matheson and Company (of Hong-Kong) and Apear and Company (of Calcutta), a monthly communication between Calcutta, the Straits, and Hong-Kong, the dates of departure being regulated primarily with reference to the Calcutta opium sales (no subsidy).
 - (5). By the Euphrates and Tigris Steam Navigation Company, a communication thrice a month between Busrah and Bagdad, the subsidy being £300 per mensem.

This last-named service, although only thrice a month according to contract, is practically maintained as a fortnightly one. The first three of these services are under the control of the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, and the last under that of Her Majesty's British Government. A portion (Rs. 500 per month) of the subsidy for line No. 2 is paid by the Post Office; the rest of the subsidy, as well as the subsidies for lines Nos. 1 and 3, are paid by the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah. The subsidy for line No. 5 is paid by Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

There is another small service intimately connected with British India maintained by and at the cost of the Ceylon Government, viz., a daily service between Point Calimere on the Indian side and Kankasanturai on the Ceylon side.

12. The services by the British India Steam Navigation Company under the control of the Post Office have been fairly well performed.

13. There was occasional irregularity on the Calcutta and Bombay line owing to detention at intermediate ports mainly in connection with grain shipments during the famine; but, although the detentions interfered with the estimated dates of the completion of the trips (as shewn in the Time Table), they were generally such as were allowable under the terms of the contract. There was, however, one serious detention of seven days caused by an accident to the machinery of the steamer 'Ethiopia' in the trip to Bombay completed on the 6th November 1876.

14. Between Bombay and Karachi there was one serious detention of 4½ days, owing to an accident to the machinery of the steamer 'Pachamba' in December 1876.

15. Between Calcutta and Akyab there was a serious instance of 5 days' delay in May 1876, owing to the steamer 'Kurackee' getting aground near the Chittagong river on her way to Akyab; and another delay of 2 days in July 1876 by the steamer 'Himalaya' on her way to Calcutta, the weather being such as to prevent the vessel from entering the Hooghly.

16. The voyage from Calcutta to Rangoon was prolonged on two occasions by the steamer 'India'; in one case to the extent of 2 days in November 1876, and in the other case to the extent of 1 day in February 1877. The vessel was subsequently removed to another line. The steamer 'Bushoor' also reached Rangoon from Calcutta nearly a day late in March 1877.

NEW POSTAGE LABELS.

17. Two new postage labels, of the values of 6 annas and 12 annas respectively, were introduced. The immediate occasion of their introduction was the adoption of 6 annas as the rate of postage on letters for the United Kingdom via Brindisi; but even without this special reason the labels were useful additions to the previous list. The present list comprises labels for ½, ¾, 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 12 and 16 annas.

RAILWAY INUNDATIONS AND INTERRUPTIONS.

18. Owing to a heavy monsoon in Upper India in 1876, the Sutlej Bridge on the Sind, Punjab and Delhi Railway again failed, two piers being carried away. This happened on the 9th August 1876, and the use of the bridge was not restored till December, a delay of 4 hours in crossing being caused during that interval.

19. In July 1876, the Punjab State Railway was flooded for a distance of about 25 miles between the Chenab and Jhelum; but the obstruction lasted only for some 4 days, and even during that time all serious harm to the mail service was avoided by the use of trollies.

20. On the south-eastern extension of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, and also on the Madras Railway, there was great irregularity during the time when the carriage of grain into the famine districts gave rise to pressure of traffic and to urgent need of prompt delivery.

IMPERIAL ASSEMBLAGE AT DELHI.

21. The large assemblage at Delhi on the occasion of the proclamation of the Empire of India, including a force of some 16,000 troops, gave rise to special postal arrangements, under the orders of the Post Master General of the Punjab and the Chief Superintendent of the Railway Travelling Post Office. Five temporary Post Offices were opened in the Camp, and the Railway Travelling Post Office staff was concentrated as much as possible upon the lines of greatest pressure. The work was of a specially difficult character, but was well performed; and the names of those deserving of special mention in connection therewith will be mentioned in the usual place at the close of this report.

FINANCIAL PRESSURE.

22. The financial pressure resulting in the early part of the year from the depression of the relative value of silver was increased later on by the prospect of considerable famine outlay, and this pressure had no small effect upon the Post Office. The ordinary expansion of the Department, though by no means stopped, was curtailed, measures involving loss of revenue or increase of cost, which were not of a pressing character, being necessarily postponed; and thus the year under report is one with comparatively little in the way of new measures to record, and with only a moderate progress in the way of ordinary extension.

PARTIAL ABOLITION OF RE-DIRECTION POSTAGE.

23. The additional charge levied in cases of re-direction was made the subject of partial abolition. The first step in this direction had reference to foreign correspondence. The regulations of the General Postal Union forbade any additional charge for re-direction in the case of correspondence with Union countries, and the exemption was made generally applicable to all foreign correspondence. Towards the close of the year the exemption was extended with effect from the 1st April 1877 to newspapers, books and registered letters; and in the current year will be chronicled the order for the entire abolition of re-direction postage in respect of the remaining articles, viz., ordinary letters and parcels. The only reason for carrying out this measure piece-meal has been the financial pressure.

24. The restriction placed upon measures involving increased expenditure left all the more room for measures of a different character, and consequently the year under report was marked by many departmental changes of system which new circumstances or prolonged experience shewed to be advisable. The purely departmental character of these changes makes it out of place to attempt to describe them here, further than by stating their general object to have been that of saving, in the every-day business of post offices, all work which could without material change or inconvenience be saved, and of simplifying as much as possible what was retained. In fact, the reduction of work effected in the year under report goes far to provide without increase of cost for many of the new measures introduced or under introduction in the current year.

SECTION I.—POST OFFICES, LETTER BOXES, AND RURAL MESSENGERS.

25. In Appendix I will be found a statement of the number of post offices, letter

	Number at close of 1875-76.	Number at close of 1876-77.	Increase.
Post Offices	3,661	3,852	191

boxes, and rural messengers at the close of the year under review, as compared with similar statistics for the preceding year. The marginal abstract shews the results. Under the principal head, viz., that of post offices, the increase is less than usual owing to the financial restriction already referred to.

26. There is a large and increasing field for the extension of the Indian Post Office, and but for financial considerations the progress would be greater. In many parts of the country the Post Office is coming to be viewed by the people as a thing in which they have a special interest.

27. As an instance of this, I may mention a case in which the transfer of the post office from one town (Sripore) to another town one mile distant (Balágarh) in the Hooghly district of Bengal has been made the subject of great local agitation resulting in appeals to the Magistrate and Commissioner, to the Post Master General of Bengal, as well as to this office and eventually to the Government of India. The local excitement went so far that the post office peon, being a native of Sripore, was charged with destroying letters posted in the Balágarh letter box with the view of exhibiting like correspondence returns in a less favorable light.

28. As another evidence of like character, I may quote the following description given by Sir W. Herschel, while officiating as Commissioner of Orissa, of a visit paid by him to a village in the interior:—

"Stopping at a village about 30 miles from Cuttack and 6 from Kendrapára, I enquired about the working of the post office in this thoroughly rural point of the Bengal Presidency. Having so constantly seen strong reason to complain of what seemed to me the practical inability of the rural delivery system, I was greatly pleased to find here that these common Oriya villagers were well acquainted with the post office and used it with avowed satisfaction and something like patriotic pride. There were three men in the score who gathered around me in a few minutes, who actually used the post office two miles off (a pillar post I understood it to be) several not read or write. The men who used the post were two of them Oriya Brahmins, and the third a trader. They were all in service."

29. Referring to the extension of postal facilities to the villages of the interior, the Officiating Post Master General of Bombay makes the following remarks:—

"It is singular to notice how eagerly postal facilities are seized by the people when offered them. In several cases when the value of the correspondence to and from an important village was below Rs. 2 a month, it has been found that by employing a special messenger for that village the correspondence has at once risen to Rs. 8 or Rs. 10. * * * * *. The people themselves often petition to have their villages better and more frequently served, and point out the way in which it can be done."

Mr. James, from whose report the quotation is made, has taken much interest in the development and improvement of measures for bringing postal facilities nearer to the homes of the people of the country.

30. The growing wants of the rural population are referred to by the Post Master General of the Punjab in the following terms:—

"The exertions made to open out communication with outlying towns and villages in this Province have certainly given an impetus to correspondence: the rural population are now beginning to appreciate the regular receipt and despatch of their correspondence. The late great export of grain has shewn, not only traders, but cultivators, the benefit of direct postal communication. From all sides—not only from district authorities and from my inspectors, but also from the people themselves—I receive urgent demands to increase the staff of rural messengers, so as to afford a weekly delivery, instead of the fortnightly arrangement at present applicable to the majority of the larger villages."

SECTION II.—POSTAL LINES.

31. In Appendix II will be found statistics respecting postal lines: the statement on the margin shows the results in abstract.

YEAR.	Railway.	Mail cart, horses and carriages.	Runners and boats.	Sea.	TOTAL.
1876-76	6,549	4,176	32,662	13,667	57,054
1870-77	8,038	4,323	33,423	13,687	59,471
Increase	1,489	147	761		2,397

Of the railway mileage, the greater portion (5,342 miles) is served by travelling post offices, under the control of a separate branch of the Department, called the Railway Travelling Post Office. The supervision of the work of sorting mails during transit by rail was at first confided to the ordinary inspecting staff of the Department: but the necessity of separate supervision became gradually apparent: and in 1869-70 the first great step was taken by the appointment of a Superintendent of Railway Sorting, with a jurisdiction embracing the lines of the East Indian Railway. This jurisdiction has been gradually extended; it now covers the greater portion of railway mileage throughout the country, reaching from Jhelum to Tuticorin, and from Calcutta to Bombay and Mooltan. The sorting of mails in transit over 5,342 miles of railway is now performed by a staff working under the orders of a single head. The working of this branch of the Department has been much improved of late years.

32. The increase of 359 miles of railway, shewn in the statistics of the year under report, is due partly to a deficiency of 27 miles in the returns of preceding years, and partly to the opening of the following lines, viz., Samastipur to Mozufferpore (Tirhoot State Railway, 32 miles) and Halulia to Parbatipur (Northern Bengal State Railway, worked by trolley, 54 miles) in the Bengal Circle; Madras to Cuddalore (South Indian Railway, 127½ miles) and Tanjore to Mayaveram (South Indian Railway, 43½ miles) in the Madras Circle; Dakor to Pali (Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, 14 miles) in the Bombay Circle; Mhow to Oojein (Neesmuck State Railway, 50 miles) in the circle of the North-Western Provinces; and Wazirabad to Jhelum (Punjab Northern State Railway, 41 miles) in the Punjab Circle. Under the head of Mail Cart, &c., the increase of 147 miles is the net result of reductions (principally owing to the extension of railway) of 311 miles, and of increases aggregating 488 miles, among which the following may be specially mentioned, viz., contract mail cart from Palamcottah to Trevandrum and Tenasey (135 miles) in Madras; contract tonga and horse services from Hubli to Gadag (36 miles) and Yellapur (12 miles) in Bombay; contract horse carriage services from Rohtak to Hissar and Bhiwani (85 miles) in the Punjab, and also in the last-mentioned circle a departmentally organized mail cart service between Khushālgarh and Rāwalpindi. During the year also the Naini Tal mail cart line in the North-Western Provinces was changed from the route via Moradabad to the route via Bareilly. The increase of 790 miles under the head of Runners and Boats is the net result of numerous changes, specially in the Madras Circle, where there was a net increase of 593 miles. The rapid increase in the Madras Circle is due to the same cause as that mentioned in the corresponding remarks last year, viz., the recent transfer of the district post to the management of the Post Master General, and the consequent taking over by the Imperial Post of lines found to carry a remunerative correspondence.

SECTION III.—CORRESPONDENCE.

33. The usual statistics of correspondence will be found in Appendix III, of which an abstract is given on the margin. The percentage of increase is 2'57 as compared with a corresponding percentage of 2'88 in the preceding year. Both years are, however, below the average; and I regard this as probably, due to the cause mentioned last year (which I then stated would probably also affect the returns of this year), viz., the change of system of calculation, the new system, like that of the General Postal Union, being based on the returns for only two weeks in the year. The increase of postal revenue, as will hereafter be seen, shews no signs of a slackened rate of progress; and I am inclined therefore, as stated in my previous report, to regard the smaller rate of progress for the last two years, deduced from the correspondence statistics, as due to the change in the system of calculation. The increase under the head of Parcels is partly due to the increased number of overland parcels, respecting which further remarks will be made in paragraph 35, and partly to the transmission to Bombay of bullion from the famine districts. This last-mentioned cause will affect also the returns of the current year, during which, at one time, extra establishment had to be entertained for the carriage of parcels containing bullion in the shape of ornaments, &c., intended for the Bombay mint.

35. Overland Parcel Post.—The increase already shewn under the head of Parcels is to a considerable extent due to the steady development of the overland parcel post, of which some particulars are given below:—

36. The overland parcel post commenced in March 1873, and the number of parcels conveyed by it has now more than doubled. In July 1875 the rate of charge was reduced to 1 shilling or 8 annas per lb., and exchanges were at the same time commenced with foreign Europe. This year (in the third quarter) the system was extended to Ceylon, and in the fourth quarter the transmission of parcels from the United Kingdom to Aden was begun. Under every head there is an encouraging increase.

37. Registered Periodicals.—The net increase of 11 registered periodicals is the result of 131 discontinued and 142 added. The usual particulars are given in the following table:—

NOTE.—Of the number received back undelivered, some are subsequently delivered under re-issue, the remainder being sent to Dead Letter Offices.

The actual delivery bears a slightly larger proportion (97 per cent.) to the correspondence sent out for delivery than in the corresponding return for last year (96 per cent.)

39. Foreign Correspondence.—The figures given below comprise the statistics of foreign correspondence for three years (instead of the usual two years), because the large fluctuations under some heads during the preceding years may help to account in part for the results of the year under report. Taking the grand totals of correspondence with the United Kingdom, the general result is a large increase in 1875-76 followed by a very small increase in 1876-77. The smallness of this increase is all the more noticeable, because during three quarters of the year under report the reduced rates of postage which followed the admission of India into the Postal Union were in operation. The reduced rates have had the effect of transferring to the Brindisi route a considerable portion of the correspondence previously sent by the Southampton route, but very little if any effect in the direction of developing new correspondence.

The statistics of letters from India via Southampton include soldiers' letters.

42. The increase of only $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. in the sale of ordinary postage stamps, as compared with the 7 per cent. increase of the preceding year, is the result mainly of the reduction of the rates of sea postage on foreign correspondence. The two new stamps of the value of 6 and 12 annas have taken to a large extent the place of the 8-anna stamp: and the $\frac{1}{2}$ -anna labels continue to be supplanted by the $\frac{1}{2}$ -anna envelopes, of which the supply has not yet been sufficient to meet the demand.

SECTION IV.—DISTRICT POST.

44. In the reports for the last two years there was given in some detail an account of the district posts in each of the several postal circles, with special reference to the steps taken in recent years for transferring the management of them to the officers of the Imperial Post. It is not necessary this year to repeat the information so given, but it may be explained generally that the district posts have for their primary object the conveyance of official correspondence between police and revenue stations in the interior of districts, where the general wants of the locality are not such as to call for the provision of postal facilities by the Imperial post. In some cases the expense of such arrangements is met by local cesses, and in other cases by Imperial grants; but in all the control belongs to the local Government or Administration, and is quite distinct from that of the Imperial post. The object of recent changes has been, not to do away with the control belonging to local Governments or Administrations, but to introduce as the executives under these Governments or Administrations the local officers of the Imperial post. Thus while the distinction between the Imperial and district posts is maintained, the advantage of bringing them under the management of one and the same set of officers is obtained.

45. Perhaps no measure has tended more to the improvement and development of postal arrangements in the interior of districts than the steady progress which has been going on in the direction above indicated.

46. The transfer of district posts in Bengal to the management of the local officers of the Imperial post is now complete, the one district (Hazáribágh) remaining untransferred at the close of last year having been transferred in the year under report.

47. In Madras one additional district (Kurnool) was transferred, leaving only three (Ganjam, Vizagapatam and Cuddapah) untransferred at the close of the year.

48. In Assam the one remaining regulation district (Goalpara) and one of the non-regulation districts (Kámrup) have been transferred.

49. Speaking generally, it may be said that in those parts of the country where separate district post organizations exist, the transfer of them to the management of the local officers of the Imperial post has been carried out with the exception of three districts in Madras; but it is not meant by this to suggest that the expectation of improvement in such posts has nearly come to an end. On the contrary, there is an immense field for such improvement, and as soon as financial restrictions may be relaxed, there will be ample room for a class of expenditure which in the course of a few years will be more than met by increased income.

50. The way in which, when there are no special financial restrictions, this class of expenditure is regulated, is that all lines and offices fulfilling certain conditions of estimated self-support are taken over by the Imperial post, the district post funds thus set free being used for the improvement and extension of postal facilities. In this way the district post acts as a sort of pioneer to the Imperial post.

51. In the last report an attempt was made for the first time to bring together in tabular form certain statistics respecting district posts; and I repeat the attempt this year, mentioning, however, what was before explained, that owing to the widely different systems belonging to the numerous different localities, and the absence of any single office of account or control, it is impossible to be sure either of the completeness or accuracy of the figures given. The figures are as follows :—

NAME OF POSTAL CIRCLES.	Number of district post offices and receiving houses.	Number of district post run messengers and peons.	Number of district letter boxes.	Distance in miles of district post lines.	Local cess.	Grant from Imperial Revenue.	Expenditure.	Articles received from the Imperial and district posts for delivery by the district post. As has been explained on previous occasions, the subscribers belonging to the pensionable (a) class subscribe at the rate of one rupee each per half-year, while those belonging to the non-pensionable (b) class subscribe at half that rate. The subscriptions of the former (pensionable class) are returnable on resignation or death, in the proportion borne for each year by the surplus income to the total income, while those of the latter (non-pensionable class) are not returnable at all. The total balances, as well as the portions returnable and non-returnable, for the current and preceding years are shewn below :—

	1875-76.	1876-77.
	Rs.	Rs.
Total balance	57,230	79,734
Returnable portion	27,176	37,448
Non-returnable portion	30,054	42,286

53. In my last report it was mentioned that no steps had been taken for reducing the subscription rates of this yearly increasing fund, because it was in contemplation to make provision for the transmission of currency notes by post under a system of insurance which might give rise to increased liability. The contemplated system, having been expanded into one for the insurance of other articles besides currency notes, was not finally settled till after the close of the year now under review. It is to be introduced on the 1st January 1878. It remains to be seen what effect this measure will have upon the security fund.

54. Complaints from the public.—The statistics of complaints shew a total number of 5,407 (as compared with 4,235 in the preceding year), of which 1,203 were well founded (as compared with 1,200 in the preceding year). The complaints relating to articles of value are analysed in the following statement :—

	Ordinary letters.	Registered letters.	Parcels.	TOTAL.
I.—Cases in which the enquiry showed either that no loss had occurred, or that the loss had not occurred through fault of postal officials	147	150	160	457

III.—Cases in which no definite conclusion was arrived at	661	31	52	744

55. The unfounded no less than the well-founded complaints contain cases of interest. The exculpation of the Post Office hangs sometimes upon the results of a very minute examination of the cover. It may be a question, for instance, whether the gum with which an opened envelope has been reclosed overlies an office stamp or is overlaid by it, and one important case against the Post Office was disproved during the year under review by the Chemical Examiner in this way. Or the issue may rest upon the presence or absence, at the time when an office stamp was impressed, of a piece of paper substituted for a currency note; and this is a matter frequently capable of proof, owing to the fact of an office stamp usually indenting the contents of a letter to an extent discernable under careful examination. Sometimes the exculpation of the Post Office comes long after, as in one of the cases of the year under review, where the contents of letters supposed to have been stolen in transit by post were found after the death of the owner's trusted servant in his box. In Sialkot notes of large value stolen a year before, with a registered letter, were traced back to a Cashmiri Wakil who had charged the theft against the Sialkot Post Office; the Wakil was convicted. But perhaps the most curious result of an investigation into a complaint of the loss of a remittance of postage stamps was the discovery that the sender had affixed them to the outside of his letter instead of putting them inside.

56. The most serious cases of fraud with which the Post Office has to deal are those perpetrated by gangs bribing postal employes to let them have access to correspondence, on which are founded sometimes very extensive fraudulent transactions. During the year under report a whole series of frauds of this kind was exposed, fourteen persons being arrested, of whom thirteen were convicted. One offender was sentenced to transportation for life, two others received sentence of fourteen years' imprisonment and fine of Rs. 5,000 each, whilst the minor offenders were sentenced to terms of imprisonment varying from one to six years. The convictions were important, as it was ascertained that in a period of about three months immediately antecedent to the arrests, frauds directed to the obtainment of Rs. 15,800, and others resulting in the actual obtainment of Rs. 3,100, had been carried out by substituting forgeries for letters stolen in the Ajmere and Jeypore Post Offices. It was believed that the gang in question had been connected with a series of offences forming a connected chain extending over no less than three years; and it was proved by the conviction of some amongst them, that they had fraudulently obtained Rs. 13,500, in eleven different payments at places so distant from one another as Jeypore, Indore, Delhi, Hoshangabad and Joudhpore on credit of forgeries substituted for letters stolen two years previously in the Muttra Office. The same gang was convicted of inducing the despatch by post of gold to the value of Rs. 17,000, of which they failed to obtain delivery only through the illness of a postal accomplice and his consequent inability to steal letters. The vigilance of the Ajmere Police under Mr. Bower mainly contributed to the exposure of this series of frauds; it was owing to their observance of suspicious conduct that two of the gang were arrested; and the evidence of one of these led, under Mr. Turton Smith's direction, to the arrest of twelve out of the thirteen persons convicted. Mr. Saunders, Commissioner of Ajmere, and Colonel Tyrwhitt, the Inspector General of Police, North-Western Provinces, greatly helped the investigations by placing at Mr. Turton Smith's disposal the services of specially qualified officers.

57. This kind of systematic fraud on a large scale was first brought to notice in 1873-74, when a gang of forgers, whose head-quarters were at Poona, was broken up by the conviction of several of the number. Two of the principals at that time absconded; but they were arrested in the year under review, the prosecution (for which Mr. Turton Smith's services were made available) resulting in the conviction and sentence of both of them.

58. The gang of 1873-74 last referred to was quite distinct from the gang that was brought to trial in the year under review; the one being composed principally of Deccan Brahmans, the other of Banials and Mahajans belonging to the upper provinces of India.

59. A reference may be made here to Appendix VIII, containing a statement of the number of convictions and departmental punishments in each postal circle. The following abstract compares the results of the last two years:—

	1875-76.	1876-77.

60. Highway robberies.—The usual abstract of highway robberies is given on the margin. The most noticeable point is the comparatively small aggregate number of robberies, and also the fact of the greatest decrease being in foreign territory. The decrease of this class of crime in recent years is very marked, as will be seen from the figures given below:—

HIGHWAY ROBBERIES IN British territory. Number.	Foreign territory. Number.	Total Number.
1871-72 . . .	24	12	36

1874-75 . . .	19	6	25
1875-76 . . .	14	12	26
1876-77 . . .	12	4	16

The decrease is perhaps to some extent nominal, owing to greater care of late years to exclude from the returns cases where theft with the collusion of postal employes was carried out under the appearance of highway robberies.

61. The localities in which the various robberies took place are given in the following statement:—

62. The only cases of much importance were two of those in Bombay; in one the mail travelling towards Ahmednagar by mail cart was attacked with poles and axes, the passengers and driver being left for dead. None of them died, however, and the robbers, who expected a remittance of treasure, got only some three hundred rupees. One of the passengers was a Deputy Collector. Two of the robbers were convicted and sentenced to transportation for life. In the other case, which happened at Akhij in the Baroda territory, the importance consisted in the value of the property stolen, which amounted to Rs. 6,500. The robbers were believed to have come from Rajputana, but no satisfactory clue was obtained.

63. Appendix IX shews the numerical strength of the establishment in the several postal circles. The abstract on the margin includes all grades below that of Post Master General or Chief Inspector.

SECTION VI.—NON-POSTAL BRANCHES OF THE DEPARTMENT.

64. The lines over which goods were booked by the bullock train offices remained the same as before, viz., Calcutta to Peshawar, with branches to Fatehgurh, Landour, Simla, Ferozepore, Bábawálpur (through Mooltan), Sialkot and Murree. The number of bullock train offices was reduced from 39 to 36. The designation of bullock train is becoming year by year less appropriate, as the old means of transit by bullock carts is superseded by the railway. In the year under report, the service by bullock carts on the portion of line between Wazirabad and Jhelum was changed into a railway service. The transit by means of bullock carts (which formerly extended all the way from Calcutta to Peshawar) is now reduced to the portion between Jhelum and Peshawar and to the various branches already enumerated.

65. The Punjab military horse van dāk is undergoing a similarly gradual contraction as the Railway advances; although in the year under report there was an extension from Khushálgarh to Rawul Pindi, with the object of affording regular communication between Kohat and Rawul Pindi, independently of the Kohat pass. The extension was not a remunerative one. The open lines at the end of the year were as follows:—

Jhelum to Peshawar.
Wazirabad to Sialkot.
Rawul Pindi to Murree (summer only).

Amritsar to Pathankot (summer only).
Kohat to Rawul Pindi.

66. The other postal lines on which travellers were conveyed were: Carágolah and Sili-guri on the Darjeeling line, Umballa and Kalka on the Simla line, Bareilly and Ranibag on the Naini Tál line, and Mooltan and Báháwálpur.

SECTION VII.—FINANCIAL RESULTS.

67. The financial results continue to be favorable. The increase of postal revenue was about 3½ lakhs, and the increase in charges amounted to about 1½ lakhs; the net revenue being thus improved to the extent of about 2 lakhs. Further details are given below:—

other items of charge as per margin have to be taken into account, and I understand the Government to be anxious that these items should be made as complete as possible. I have therefore added to the list of the year under report the cost of stationery supplied from the Government Depot. I have not seen my way to make any alteration in the calculation of the pensionary charge. There is no doubt that in a growing Department like the Post Office, the yearly accretion of liability on account of future pensionary claims must exceed the capitalized value of the pensions actually assigned; but for all practical purposes, I think that the capitalization of pensions actually assigned is sufficient. And if it be desired to go further, I should think that an extra ½ lakh would amply cover the difference between this and the whole yearly accretion of liability.

69. Taking the total net revenue as shewn in paragraph 67 at Rs. 10,92,384, and deducting the total of the items now in question, we arrive at a net profit of Rs. 1,21,557.

70. As pointed out in my last report, the former system of charging official correspondence at full postage rates has been discontinued since 1872-73. The revenue from official correspondence has thus been brought down from 50 lakhs, as it stood in 1865-66, to 12 lakhs in the present year. The present charge does not more than represent the actual cost entailed by the conveyance of the Government despatches. Thus, not only is the official correspondence conveyed at an exceptionally low rate (the postage on a 10-tola letter being only 1 anna), but the postal revenue is now beginning to exceed the total charges which a profit and loss account shews against it.

71. It is not, I believe, the wish of the Government to make the Post Office a source of profit, and notwithstanding the continued existence of financial pressure, the year following that under report has already seen several measures bearing the character of reductions of postage. These will come under report next year, and I shall here only say that I refer specially to the reduction of book postage, and of parcel postage, carried out last summer, as well as the abolition of re-direction postage, partly introduced in April 1877, and sanctioned as a complete measure with effect from January 1878. And there is another way in which the improving financial position of the Department has been, and may reasonably be, allowed to have its effect,—I refer to the expense attending the improvement of its establishment and the extension of its operations. Even in this time of financial restriction, the means for improvement and extension, though necessarily curtailed, have not by any means been stopped, and I trust that even the curtailment may soon be removed. There are few of these measures, whether the character be that of reduction of postage or of increase of postal facilities, which do not in the first instance involve financial loss, but there are few also which do not in a comparatively brief period re-act on the finances by stimulating or extending correspondence.

72. I ought, perhaps, to explain here, what has been explained before (paragraph 7), that the cost of maintaining communication with Great Britain and foreign countries by means of the contract services of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company has never been treated (except in the English accounts) as a charge upon the Indian Post Office. The subsidy is paid by the British Government, and all the sea postage realized by the Indian Post Office is credited to Great Britain as a set-off against the subsidy. In other words, the accounts of the Indian Post Office contain neither the revenue nor the charges of what is called the eastern mail service. The revenue of the eastern mail service falls short of the cost, and India's share of the net loss for the year under report was £62,170 (as already shown in paragraph 7). Whether this payment should or should not be regarded as a charge upon the Indian Post Office is a question which may fairly be raised. It is a payment made primarily for the maintenance of regular sea communication between India and Europe; and the correspondence of those who have direct relations with Europe does not fully pay for it. The Government of India pays its share of the balance, and the question is whether this payment should be reckoned as a charge upon the Indian Post Office; it has never been so reckoned, but, owing to its being entered under the head of Post Office in the home accounts, it has often been mixed up with the accounts of the Indian Post Office. Whatever may be the proper view to take of this point, it may be observed that it will require only a few more years of the present rate of financial progress to make the profit of the Indian Post Office cover even this item.

SECTION VIII.—GENERAL REVIEW OF PROGRESS.

and expenditure, is exhibited in the statement on the margin; the point selected for comparison being the first complete year (1855-56) after the introduction of a moderate scale of postage rates in connection with the organization of the Department under the Postal Act of 1854. The Indian Post Office looks back upon 1854 in the same way in which the British Post Office looks back upon the year 1840, when the "penny postage" was introduced.

SECTION IX.—NOTICES OF POST OFFICE OFFICIALS.

74. To Lieutenant-Colonel W. M. Lane, as Post Master General of the Punjab, and to Mr. Philip Sheridan, as Chief Superintendent of the Railway Travelling Post Office, fell the burden of organizing and controlling the special postal arrangements connected with the Delhi Assemblage of January 1877, already alluded to in this report, and I gladly bring their names forward, not only as having done that service well, but as being amongst the most tried and successful administrators of postal circles. I record also, with regret, the death in a service of 21 years had won the confidence and respect of superiors and subordinates.

75. For special services in lower grades, I have to look mainly to the several Post Masters General and Chief Inspectors for information, selecting for special notice from among the names brought forward by them. In Madras, Mr. Turner commends his subordinates generally, with special reference to the discharge of duty during a season of famine and consequent difficulty; in Bombay, Mr. James mentions Mr. Stuart, Post Master of Bombay, for the maintenance in his office of a long-established character of efficiency, and among the Inspectors he names Mr. Cursetjee Sorahjee for successful efforts in improving the rural delivery, Mr. Girdhar Mahadeo for a useful re-organization of lines, and Mr. Cowasjee Jamsheedjee for special energy and success on a difficult mission to Goa; in the North-Western Provinces, Mr. Hutchinson specially mentions Pundit Sundar Lal for his assistance in connection with the prosecution of the gang of forgers, whose conviction has been separately referred to in this report; in the Punjab, Lieutenant-Colonel Lane mentions among the Inspectors Mr. Hodgkinson, and in other grades Messrs. Melita, Phillips, Smith, Considine, Charde, and Grice, for good work in connection with the Delhi Assemblage; and in the Railway Travelling Post Office, Mr. Sheridan names among his Superintendents Mr. Hill for his services in connection with the Delhi Assemblage, and Mr. Goodburn for his exertions on the occasion of the breaking of the Sutlej Bridge.

Column 2.—These figures represent the net proceeds of the sale of ordinary postage stamps after deducting the sale discount.

Column 3.—The great difference observable in this column are due mainly to changes of system in the treatment of official correspondence, which was charged full letter rates up to 1865-66, at the same rates as ordinary correspondence (letters and newspapers, &c.), from that year on to 1872-73; after which a privileged rate of 1 anna for each letter not exceeding 10 tolas (about 4 ozs.) was conceded, thus reducing immensely the postage income.

Column 6.—The figures in this column are useful as showing the revenue undisturbed by the changes of system in respect of official correspondence explained in this note referring to column 2.

Column 12.—The figures in this column show the proportion of the cash collections in column 3 to the total postal revenue of columns 2, 3 and 4. The comparison commences with the year 1872-73, when the official postage rate was reduced (see note on Column 3) and the whole collected in stamps.

Column 26 and 27.—These figures cannot be given prior to 1873-74 owing to a difference in the system of statistical record.

Column 28.—The registration of newspapers only commenced in the year 1871-72.

Column 31 to 36.—Three digits are omitted from the figures in these columns.

E. R. DOUGLAS,

Offg. Depy. Director General of the Post Office of India

No. 1700, dated 8th March 1878.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

Read—

The annual report on the operations of the Post Office of India for the year 1876-77.

RESOLUTION.—Mr. Monteth's analysis of the postal history of 1876-77 is complete and interesting. The increasing income of the department has now placed it in a position from which measures of reform, even when they are experimental and tentative, can be safely and advantageously initiated. The reforms effected during the year under review would have been of greater prominence than they were, but for the financial difficulties that existed. Still, they were not unimportant, and comprised the admission of British India into the General Postal Union from the 1st July 1876; the consequent revision and reduction in the rates of foreign postage, involving the issue of stamps of the 6-anna and 12-anna denominations; the extension of postal facilities to the rural population; the continued absorption of the district dāk lines by the Imperial post; and the partial (since made universal) abolition of re-direction postage. The successful operations against the gangs organized for systematic fraud through the agency of the post office (paras. 55-58), and the postal service of the Delhi Camp in December 1876 and January 1877, require notice to complete the prominent features of the year's administration. Several further proposed administrative reforms came under consideration during the year, and some of these have since been brought into operation.

2. The effect of the reduced rate of postage, resulting from the adhesion of British India to the General Postal Union, is precisely what might have been expected. The higher rates of 8 annas and 6 annas, which prevailed before the 1st July 1876, were probably only unappreciably prohibitive. The adoption of the reduced rates of 6 annas and 5 annas have merely resulted in transferring a portion of the correspondence with the United Kingdom from the Southampton to the Brindisi route. The increase in the aggregate of correspondence with the United Kingdom, viz., $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. in letters and 2 per cent. in newspapers, is almost certainly due to causes independent of the decrease of postal rates. The variation of route which resulted in one case, i.e., that of letters received in India from the United Kingdom, is great enough to be rather remarkable. The Brindisi route carried 63 per cent. of this portion of the correspondence as against 55 per cent. in the preceding year. Doubtless the shorter route would become more popular every year from independent causes, but the result of the change so far is to further demonstrate the comparative inutility of the Southampton route as a purely postal convenience.

3. PARAS. 23, 24.—The abolition of re-direction postage on foreign correspondence, newspapers, books, and registered letters (since made universal) is a gain in convenience both to the public and to the department. In India, where changes of residence of all officials (who comprise an important portion of the letter-writing community at present), are so sudden and so frequent, the public benefit of the reform is sufficiently obvious. To the department the necessity no longer exists of retaining the custody and of subsequently disposing of pamphlets, &c., rejected by the addressees.

4. PARAS. 25-32.—Postal receptacles increased considerably—post offices from 3,661 to 3,852, and letter-boxes from 4,985 to 5,454. The number of rural messengers increased by 255. The Governor General in Council has received with much pleasure the information given in paras. 26 to 30, illustrating as it does the increasing popularity of the post office with the inhabitants of the interior. All that is wanting to make that popularity universal is to convince the people by practical demonstration of its efficacy and certainty. It is feared that the mass of the native population, i.e., those living away from head-quarter stations, do discredit, and not causelessly, the certainty of the machinery. Towards removing the causes of complaint, viz., loss or tardy delivery, the attention of the controlling officers of the department is required continuously. In connection with this subject, it may be noticed that the character of the subordinate post office employes for honesty still leaves much to be desired.

5. The statistics of correspondence show an increase of 2.57 per cent., the calculation being based on a system prescribed by the regulations of the General Postal Union, which requires the results to be calculated on the experience of two weeks in each year. In the present instance the numbers are probably shown too low, the increase of revenue in the items of "Cash Receipts," "Sale of ordinary Postage Stamps," and "Sale of Service Postage Stamps" being 3·3 per cent. Thus :—

			1875-76.	1876-77.
			Rs.	Rs.
Cash Receipts	21,28,245	21,80,904
Sale of ordinary Postage Stamps	35,98,306	37,13,288
Sale of 'Service' Postage Stamps	11,44,901	12,06,884
Total	68,71,442	71,01,076

The further decrease in the number of unpaid letters, 0·63 per cent., is satisfactory, the number of paid letters having increased 3·54 per cent.

6. PARA. 36.—The history of the "Overland parcel post" is even more encouraging than usual. The net revenue reached Rs. 78,876, and this in the fourth year of its existence. But much further development is not to be certainly looked for. The field of operations is limited, and the system has long been familiar to all, in the East at any rate, who are likely to take advantage of it. The continued high comparative average in the weight of parcels addressed to India is a little curious.

7. PARA. 40.—2,539,143 articles out of a total of 122,541,753 were received in the dead-letter offices, and of these only 691,261 were finally undisposed of. The successful dealing with 64 per cent. of the total number received is creditable to the working of this branch of the department.

8. PARA. 61.—The prominence of the territories of the North-Western Provinces in the matter of mail-robberies will be brought to the notice of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor.

9. PARA. 64.—The term "bullock train" is undoubtedly inapplicable to the altered circumstances of the present and future decades. Some more appropriate designation for this service should be introduced.

10. PARAS. 67-72.—The financial results show a nominal net revenue of Rs. 10,92,384, including Rs. 9,00,989 received from the sale of service stamps. A more complete estimate of expenditure reduces the net revenue to Rs. 1,21,557, but there is apparently nothing to indicate upon what basis the estimate of the departmental share of the liability for local marine subsidies has been calculated.

11. The introduction of the half-anna envelopes has been an unqualified success from every point of view. So great is the demand for these envelopes that almost everywhere the supply has failed to meet it. Arrangements have been concluded with Messrs. De la Rue and Co. through the Secretary of State to supply 74,400 reams of these envelopes annually. This is the maximum which can be demanded under the present contract. But as the supply has always been insufficient, there is nothing to show that even this amount will suffice. If the experience of the coming year should indicate the contract maximum to be still inadequate, the Secretary of State must be again addressed with a view to the revision of the contract with Messrs. De la Rue and Co.

12. His Excellency in Council, in endorsing the opinion of the Director General as to the services of the various Post Masters General and subordinate officers enumerated in paras. 74 and 75, takes the opportunity of again placing on record his appreciation of the ability and zeal with which Mr. Monteath continues to conduct the operations of this great and important department of the public service.

ORDERED, that a copy of the Resolution be forwarded to the Director General of Post Offices of India, and that the Report together with the Resolution be published in the supplement to the Gazette of India.

ORDERED, further that extracts para. 61 of the report and para. 8 of the Resolution be forwarded to the Government of the N. W. Provinces and Oudh for information.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

SCARCITY AND DISTRESS IN THE NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES AND OUDH.

No. 79B (Famine), dated Camp Lucknow, 26th February 1878.

From—C. Robertson, Esq., Secretary to Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh,

To—The Additional Secretary to the Government of India, Public Works Department (Famine).

I am desired, in continuation of former correspondence regarding the effects of the serious drought in 1877, to submit the accompanying abstract of the reports on the condition of these provinces for the week ending February 16th.

2. As already reported, the abundant rain which fell between the 5th and 10th of October enabled the cultivators to complete the preparation of their lands for the rabi crop and to sow it under most favourable circumstances. The whole of the provinces, however, were not equally fortunate in this respect. A portion of the centre and east of Oudh, parts of the Goruckpoor and Azimgurh Districts, and the Ghazipur District, generally received a very scanty supply of rain, and in consequence a considerable area could not be sown, while in many places the seed sown did not germinate. In other districts, however, the area sown, including lands in which there would have been a kharif crop under ordinary circumstances, is unusually large. The returns received show that on an average it is 25 per cent. above the normal rabi area and exceeds any thing that has been witnessed in the memory of man. This result was largely aided by the liberal distribution of takavi to cultivators, who, but for this assistance, would have been unable to procure seed when it was selling at exorbitant rates or to dig the kucha wells which were in places required for the irrigation, without which there was no hope of the seed germinating.

3. By the first week in December the unirrigated crops were everywhere urgently in need of rain, nor was it withheld. On the 9th and 10th of that month there was an unusually heavy fall over the whole of the Western Divisions and the northern section of the Eastern Divisions. It did not, however, extend to the south-east part of the provinces or was very scanty there, and thus the districts which most urgently needed it did not benefit. There was another fall on the 18th, which also was confined to the upper part of the provinces. On the 29th December there was a slight fall of rain, which did much good in the Mirzapur and Ghazipur districts. This rain was succeeded by four days of intense cold and frost, which did much mischief everywhere. Of the wheat crop very little escaped. Field peas, on which, as an early ripening crop, great hopes were based, suffered severely especially in the districts where the rain had been deficient and the pressure on the people was greatest, while in the eastern half of Oudh and parts of the Benares Division great injury was done by the frost, even to the wheat and barley. On the 11th of January there was a fall of rain in the Ghazipur District, which brought up much of the seed that had been lying in the ground for two months without germinating, too late unfortunately to be of much use, and also did great good to the crops that had come up at the proper time, and had retained vitality in spite of the long drought. On the 13th and 14th January there was a pretty general fall of rain, especially heavy in the trans-Jumna districts and parts of Oudh, and on the whole doing more good than harm.

4. Up to this time the rain that fell had on the whole been beneficial, and if the last fall had been followed by clear weather, the crop would have been unequalled in outturn as it is in area covered. Unfortunately this was not the case. On the 26th and 27th January, and again from the 10th to the 12th February, there were in most districts showers of rain which developed rust and blight, and were accompanied by destructive hail-storms. On the latter occasion the hail did considerable damage to large tracts in Mainpuri, Furruckabad, Sitapur, Lucknow, Fyzabad, and elsewhere. Still, with all these deductions, there is yet on the ground the promise of a magnificent crop; and if only fair weather is vouchsafed until it can be harvested, there is good reason to hope that there will soon be abundant provision of food in the country.

5. After the fall of rain in October, the prices of grain fell a little, but the great and sustained drain on stocks which had been caused by the large exporttation to Madras and Bombay and the scantiness of the supply of the usual kharif grains, told unfavourably on the markets. Prices generally but slowly have risen since the beginning of 1878, and must have risen more than they have but for the large importations from the Punjab, Central Provinces, and Bengal. The extent of these importations and the increasing dearthness of grain in spite of the promise of a splendid harvest, indicate unmistakably that the stocks in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh are almost exhausted, and that in great part of the provinces the people have been living on imported grain. During the last few days, as the crops are beginning to ripen and in some places early grain is coming into the market, a tendency to fall in price is manifesting itself.

6. It was intimated at the time that though the rainfall of October had for the time saved these provinces from distress amounting to famine, a considerable part of the population would inevitably be reduced to sore straits in the interval between the sowing and the ripening of the crops, and this prediction has been only too fully verified. The copious rainfall in December and January was not an unmixed blessing, for it deprived the laboring classes of the work they would otherwise have obtained in irrigating the crops; and the general failure of the kharif grains on which they ordinarily subsist, and which have been less abundant in the markets than wheat or barley, and quite as dear, deprived them as well of their usual food. The result has been that unable to obtain their usual work, and with the grains on which they ordinarily depend for food selling at famine rates, the large class of day laborers have been in a great measure compelled to eke out their subsistence by eating the green leaves of sarson, gram, and other plants. These remarks apply chiefly to the Agra and Rohilkhand Divisions, the greater part of Oudh, and parts of the Benares Division. The distress was much aggravated by the quite abnormal cold which came upon us so very suddenly and unexpectedly after the rain which fell in the first part of January. In ordinary years the poorest classes have abundance of straw for their bedding, and are thus kept warm at night when the cold is most severe; but this year when in some places even the thatch has been pulled off the houses to feed the cattle, they were unable to get this auxiliary to their scanty clothing, and the cold acting on frames already enfeebled by insufficient nourishment has undoubtedly produced a mortality considerably in excess of the usual rate at the present season of the year, although it may be questioned whether it will not be found hereafter that the comparative immunity from cholera and fever which, owing apparently to the drought, the Provinces have enjoyed during the past year, will not compensate for the losses caused by insufficient food and clothing, and make the mortality generally little, if at all, higher than in an ordinary year. The deaths have been most numerous amongst the class of wandering and professional beggars.

7. The preliminary steps that were taken to make provision for relief when this anticipated condition of the laboring classes rendered it necessary, were fully reported in the papers, of which a copy was forwarded to you with No. 180A, dated 27th November, in the Public Works Department. In every district where severe distress was expected certain works were selected by Colonel Fraser in consultation with the Commissioner of the Division, which it was arranged should be opened as soon as the district officer satisfied the Government that the people in the neighbourhood were in such a state of distress that they must perish from starvation if relief were not afforded. Authority was given, when circumstances rendered it necessary, to open in each district affected a poor-house, to be conducted strictly on the system followed by Sir J. Simchev at Moradabad in 1861, to which only those should be admitted who from whatever cause were too feeble to work, and from which the paupers should be drafted off to a relief work as soon as they became fit to labor.

8. The programme thus sketched out has been closely followed. In some districts, viz., all of the Rohilkhand division except Budhon, the poor-houses opened in September have never been closed; for the general impoverishment of the people had dried up the stream of private charity and compelled all those who live by begging to flock to the large stations and, if sent adrift, they must have died. The numbers in the poor-houses have gradually increased since the first fall of rain in December. From the beginning of January it became necessary to open similar institutions in Budhon, Agra, Muttra, Furruckabad, Etah, Azimgurh, and various districts in Oudh, and to set agoing some of the works which had been arranged for as the means of affording relief to those able to work.

9. In only one district, viz., that of Rai Bareilly in Oudh, were the arrangements inadequate to the emergency. When Colonel Fraser went on tour, the Commissioner did not anticipate that special relief measures would be required, and none were therefore arranged for. Events have shown that he was mistaken. It may be admitted that he could not have foreseen that this part of his division would be exceptionally unfortunate in respect of rainfall, and would be one of the greatest sufferers from frost. Be this as it may, there is no district in which distress has manifested itself more severely or more suddenly, and arrangements had in consequence to be made for relieving it with undesirable haste. These measures, however, are now working satisfactorily.

10. In the Rohilkhund division generally the laborers who are in distressed circumstances are represented to have shown great reluctance to come to relief works, preferring to sit idly at their homes when they found they were required to do a fixed task. This apathy has undoubtedly tended to increase the numbers in the poor-houses, as admission could not be refused when they had become too feeble to work, and must have starved if they were not admitted. It was stated also that not a few who, on being discharged from the poor-house, were sent to a relief work ran away. When these reports were received, and it appeared that the numbers in the poor-houses were becoming unmanageably large, His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor deputed the Commissioner and one of his Secretaries, Mr. H. J. Sparks, to make a special investigation and to report on the relief measures generally. A copy of the Commissioner's report on the Shahjehanpur poor-house is annexed. The careful inspection that was made both there and at Bareilly shewed that while in the former district a few were employed on poor-house work who could do ordinary earth work, there were none of this description in the house at Bareilly. The inmates were found to be chiefly those who at all times are dependent on charity for support, and are unable to work. Those able to do ordinary work at Shahjehanpur were at once drafted on to the relief works.

11. As it appeared that one of the objections made to laboring on a relief work was that the task exacted was somewhat beyond the powers of some of the people by reason of their already enfeebled state, it was at once reduced to an amount which such people could be fairly expected to perform. But the chief difficulty which the local authorities have had to contend against is the reluctance of the people to give any equivalent at all for their food in the shape of work. They say "the Sirkar fed us for nothing in 1868," and they cannot understand why they should not be similarly favored now. As soon as they found that work was expected from them, they hied to their homes. This impression and its consequences are, of course, much to be deprecated; but the local officers were instructed to use all the influence at their command to bring the people to a sense of what was due from them to Government, as well as what was due from Government to them.

12. In explanation of the large number employed on relief works in the Agra district, it must be stated that not only did this part of the country suffer very seriously from the drought, but both it and Muttra are overrun by half-starving immigrants from the adjacent native states. Colonel Fraser, who is now on tour, inspected these works on the 23rd instant, and telegraphed to the Lieutenant-Governor that "after full inquiry, he considers the people employed have a fair amount of work exacted from them, and are in fair condition."

13. In Lucknow, the number needing relief is very large, and His Honor regrets that as the arrangements for dismantling the old fort and erecting the new one are not sufficiently advanced to allow work to be begun, the labor of those needing relief will not be so remunerative as it might have been. Great difficulty has been experienced in selecting suitable works, but those which have been finally decided on will, it is believed, be productive of some benefit, and be sufficient to give employment until the crisis is past.

14. In Azimgurh, Rai Bareilly, Fyzabad, Unao, and the other districts where laborers in distress are being employed, the works are of the ordinary type, viz., improvements of communications, which in course of time must have been undertaken under any circumstances.

15. In the Meerut Division the necessity for giving relief has not yet been very great, but as the rabi crop ripens later there than elsewhere, it is probable that both local distress and the wants of immigrants from other quarters will render it incumbent to have recourse to relief measures. Poor-house relief on a small scale has already been begun. Elsewhere, as the crop ripens and the laborers find employment in cutting it, the numbers relieved will diminish. But though the pressure will then be greatly lightened, it is to be feared that many of the poorer classes will continue to be much pinched till the kharif grains come into the market. It is unquestionable that there has been and still is very severe distress; but everywhere the arrangements appear to be such that His Honor believes no man need die of starvation. There are poor-houses for the reception of those too feeble to labor, and relief works sufficient to support all others who have no other means of subsistence until the anxiously looked-for arrival of better times.

No. 28, dated Bareilly, the 12th February 1878.

From—R. M. Edwards, Esq., Commissioner, Rohilkhand Division.

To—The Secretary to the Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh

I have the honor to report that, in accordance with the instructions contained in your No. 324A., dated 4th instant, I proceeded to Shahjehanpur, and carefully inspected the working poor-house at that station on Saturday and Sunday last, the 9th and 10th instant.

2. The poor-house is well situated, being some $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles from cantonments in two large groves on the Furruckabad road. The Mahomedans occupy that on the right, the Hindus the one on the left. These groves are so extensive that arrangements for 10,000 paupers could be made without difficulty. The numbers amounted to 5,180 on the 9th, but on that day there were upwards of 200 discharges against 106 admissions, and the women fit for employment on relief works had still to be withdrawn; they were to be discharged along with the men on the 10th. These people would be accompanied by numerous children.

3. The management of the poor-house is mainly in the hands of Doctor Gardner, Civil Surgeon, who has devoted much time and labor to it since its commencement in October. The Collector, Mr. Duthoit, closely supervises its working, and is there daily save when on tour.

4. The numbers of women and children are very great, and many of the former who have recovered their strength can be drafted to the works with their children.

5. There are two hospitals, one for the general sick, the other exclusively for small-pox patients, of which there were 75 at the time of my visit. The average number of deaths per diem including those from small-pox has lately been 15.

Considering the great numbers in the institution, the fact that it contains the sick, infirm, and helpless poor of the whole district, remembering also the usual death-rate in small-pox and the mortality in other years in January, the coldest month of the year, I cannot consider the rate as alarmingly high. Far more people have died from cold than from starvation during the last two months. The weather is now milder, and the death-rate is falling.

6. Mr. Duthoit's arrangements in the interior of the district are excellent, and in my opinion sufficient; he has already described them in detail to the Secretary to Government; they are working well, and no man need starve. Arrangements for immediate relief and for the transmission of the weak and emaciated to the poor-houses are in full swing in every tahseel, thana, and dispensary in the district. There is not a chowkeedar who does not know how to act when the necessity arises. The committees at the tahseels pass and forward those who are helpless to the Sudder, sending all bad cases to the dispensaries. This system, which is understood by all concerned, which is in full working order, and is also in accordance with that of Mr. now Sir John Strachey at Moradabad in 1861-62, is in my opinion better than scattered poor-houses throughout the district, which cannot be sufficiently supervised, and which soon degenerate into free kitchens.

7. The district of Shahjehanpur is living on importations by railway, but they are sufficient, and prices are slightly but steadily improving. I am unable to state the amount of grain delivered at Shahjehanpur, but at Bareilly station alone it has amounted to 135 lakhs of maunds in the last six months.

8. The promise of the rabi is still very good, but much anxiety has been felt during the late wet and cloudy weather.

Yesterday rain fell at Shahjehanpur in considerable quantity, and a violent storm of rain and hail passed over Bareilly in the afternoon, and probably visited Shahjehanpur also. The hail, however, does not appear to have done any harm, and to-day is clear and bright, with a strong sun and westerly wind. If we get dry weather the spring harvest will be a very plentiful one.

9. The greatest difficulty is experienced in getting the people to resort to the relief works. Their obstinacy in declining to work even when the alternative is pretty certain—death, is unintelligible, but it is nevertheless a fact: they prefer wandering about in a purposeless manner, picking up a little here and there, to regular food and shelter if it involves exertion. Very many are now quite unfit to lift a phuorah, but this would not have been the case had they taken advantage of the relief works which were open to all.

10. I may mention that Mr. Sparks, deputed to Shahjehanpur by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, concurs in the views expressed by me in the note on the Shahjehanpur poor-house, and on the alterations therein proposed.

No. 1183A, dated the 4th March 1878.

From—S. C. BAYLEY, Esq., Addl. Secy. to the Govt. of India, Public Works Department,

To—The Secy. to the Govt. of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

I am directed by His Excellency the Governor General in Council to acknowledge your letter No. 79 B of 26th February, giving an account of the distress and scarcity in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, as reported for the week ending 16th February.

2. From this report, His Excellency learns that while the area sown with spring crops was less extensive than usual in the centre and east of Oudh, in Gorukhpur, Azimgurh, and Ghazipur, yet on the whole, in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, 25 per cent. more land than is usual was sown with these crops.

3. From various causes, however, such as cold and frost, hail, unseasonable rain, blight and insects, the outturn is not likely to come up to its original promise. With all these deductions, however, "there is yet on the ground the promise of a magnificent crop, and if only fair weather is vouchsafed until it can be harvested, there is good reason to hope that there will soon be abundant provision of food in the country."

4. Owing to last year's exportation of grain to Bombay and Madras, and to the almost universal failure of the kharif harvest, the Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that the stocks of food in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh are nearly exhausted, and people have been living for some time on imported grain. At present the spring harvest is ripening, and there are indications of a fall in prices. In the meantime the class of day laborers are in great distress, and subsist to a great extent on innutritious and unwholesome food. The unusual cold of January added to their misery, and led to considerable mortality. In anticipation of this distress, arrangements, which were reported at the time, were made in October last to start relief works in each district where severe distress was expected, and authority was given to open relief houses on the system already approved by the Government of India. Relief houses were accordingly opened at that time in most of the Rohilkund districts, and they have been subsequently opened in Budaon, Agra, Furukhabad, Etah, Azimgurh, and in most of the Oudh districts. His Excellency in Council is glad to learn that in the opinion of the Lieutenant-Governor these arrangements have everywhere been sufficient (save that there was a temporary want of arrangement in Rai Bareilly,) and that they are now on such a footing that no one need die of starvation.

5. It is, however, observed that in the Rohilkund division people have exhibited great unwillingness to come to the works, and strive for State maintenance without giving any labour in return, the result of which has been that they are now in such a depressed state as to be fit only in many cases for gratuitous relief. The same phenomenon has been observed in other provinces, but it has always been found that if the people can only be brought to the works, and when there, are not too highly tasked at first, they rapidly improve in health and spirits, and soon become efficient laborers.

6. It is the opinion of Sir George Couper that as the crop ripens and the laborers find employment in cutting it, the numbers relieved will diminish; "but though the pressure will then be greatly lightened, it is to be feared that many of the poorer classes will continue to be much pinched till the kharif grains come into the market."

7. From the tabular statement appended to your report, showing district by district the state of affairs in Oudh, His Excellency in Council learns that relief works have been opened in nine districts, and relief-houses in seven districts. On the relief works some 33,000 people were employed, of which no less than 20,000 are debited to Rai Bareilly, and the numbers in relief houses did not, when the report was drawn up, amount to more than 5,500, not a large proportion out of the whole population of Oudh. In regard to prices also, though they undoubtedly maintain a very high level, yet the cheaper grains, which form the staple food of the laboring population, range generally from 12 to 14 seers per rupee, prices which indicate severe pressure, but not the extreme severity of famine.

8. On the whole, His Excellency in Council is satisfied that the arrangements have been timely and sufficient, and that the measures taken have been, and in Sir George Couper's hands will continue to be, equally removed from panic on the one hand and from negligent indifference on the other; and I am to express the sympathy of His Excellency in Council with the labour and anxiety which the distress has thrown on the whole administration of His Honor, and the confidence of the Government of India in the vigour and foresight with which Sir G. Couper and his subordinate officers have prepared to meet it.

9. There are still, however, some points on which His Excellency in Council desires to receive further information.

10. For the districts in the North-Western Provinces the numbers on relief works and in relief houses respectively are not given, as they are for those in Oudh, nor is there any indication in your report of the range of prices in the districts of the North-Western Provinces. Nothing is said in your report as to the prevailing rate of wages given on relief works, the nature of the task exacted, or the daily ration given in relief houses. His Excellency in Council feels it incumbent on him to call for this information, not from any desire to interfere with the relief measures of Sir G. Couper, which he believes to be based on thoroughly sound principles, but because, for the purposes of future famine administration, it is most necessary to collect and compare the experience of different systems in different provinces.

11. Weekly statements should also be made up and forwarded, showing district by district the numbers on relief works and in relief houses respectively, the increase and decrease of these numbers, and the rise or fall in prices.

12. Finally, for financial reasons, His Excellency in Council is constrained to ask for such an approximate forecast as the Lieutenant-Governor may be able to arrive at as to the time during which relief operations are likely to last, and the numbers that may altogether be thrown on the hands of Government for maintenance. From one passage in your letter it might be inferred that relief operations of some kind or other may have to be continued throughout the year, until the next kharif harvest, but the general tone of the report seems to indicate that most, if not all, operations may close when the rabi harvest is fully gathered in. In the former case His Excellency in Council will be glad to learn if, as originally anticipated, provincial funds will suffice to meet the strain, or whether any call will be made on Imperial Funds.

13. Your report, I am to say, will be published in the forthcoming Gazette of India.

WEEKLY CONDITION REPORT OF THE DISTRESSED DISTRICTS OF THE MYSORE PROVINCE.

PROVINCE OF MYSORE.

(No. 54).

Special Famine Report for the Week ending 16th February 1878.

[Statement No. 54, regarding Famine Relief Operations in the Province of Mysore, for the Week ending the 16th February 1878.]

The harvesting of the dry crops is now nearly complete throughout the Province, and the threshing out of the grain is making good progress. The out-turn of the crops, though by no means equal to the first expectations, is yet not altogether discouraging. In former reports, the prospects of the Bangalore and Kolar Districts have been roughly forecast, in the absence of more accurate information still awaited, and it was stated that there was no immediate anticipation of distress increasing or becoming serious, though caution was necessary. It is also necessary to be prepared for a larger influx of numbers needing relief, in April and May, till rain falls. The Famine Commissioner has now made a tour in the Tumkur District, and comparing his impressions with the experience gained in his visit in December last, is of opinion that prospects on the whole are favorable. This tour has confirmed his belief that the most affected area is the wedge of country between the Devanoy Drug and the Nundydrug ranges of hills, comprising the Kortagere and Madgere Taluks of Tumkur; Goribednur and Gudibanda in Kolar; and Devanahalli and Dal Ballapur in Bangalore. In this tract, the dry crop can scarcely be put down on an average at more than a 3-anna crop, but on the whole there is food enough in the country for the people, and generally where the dry crop is least, the wet lands are most abundant. What is necessary, therefore, is, as stated in last report, to provide for those who belong to the poorest classes and who chiefly congregate in the towns: on such, the very high prices of provisions at a time when agricultural labor is slack, must press heavily, and must entail careful watching. As yet no increase of distress is visible: there is no panic; little or no aimless wandering along the roads; no general emigration: no well marked demand for relief. But food is exceedingly dear; there is a demand for imported produce; and the numbers upon relief have a tendency to increase notwithstanding better supervision and a somewhat stricter enforcement of tasks.

2. Imports of grain by rail amounted to 1,732 tons or 548 more than last week. The exports from Bangalore to the interior were 485 tons, or 120 tons less than for the previous week.

3. The number of laborers on Civil Relief Works was 4,758, or a slight increase of 242. Two new works have been opened, one near Anekal (in Bangalore) and one near Chintamani (in Kolar) and have already attracted considerable numbers. The return from Paugarh (Chitaldrug District) shews a decrease owing to the opening of a new P. W. D. work in that Taluk to which labor has been transferred.

4. The Department Public Works employed 12,210 laborers, being an increase of 553, occurring mostly in the Tumkur District, where the works are fairly popular. The following is a list of the more important works:—

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

WEEKLY CONDITION REPORT OF THE DISTRESSED DISTRICTS OF THE MYSORE PROVINCE.

PROVINCE OF MYSORE.

(NO. 55).

Special Famine Report for the Week ending 23rd February 1878.

Statement No. 55, regarding Famine Relief Operations in the Province of Mysore, for the Week ending the 23rd February 1878.

The weather has been warm with dry easterly winds. There is now little field labor procurable, except in rice lands, and there has in consequence been a small but general increase on Relief Works. Permission has been given to revive the grain dole in villages to infirm and bed-ridden paupers, as there appeared likely to be a necessity for this precaution during the next two or three months. Measures have also been taken to strengthen the system of road-patrolling by the Police along the main routes. The latest reports from the districts are satisfactory and shew no increased pressure on the people.

2. Imports of grain by rail amounted to 1,522 tons, or 210 tons less than last week; still imports are slightly on the increase: 4,267 tons were received in the 4 weeks ending 29th December; 5,719 in the 4 weeks ending 26th January; and 5,902 in the 4 weeks ending 23rd February. From Bangalore 604 tons, or 119 tons more than last week, were sent to the interior.

3. The number of laborers on Civil Relief Works was 6,317, or 1,559 more than for the previous week. The increase was chiefly due to a tank work having been opened in Anekal (Bangalore) and at Tūmkūr. A good many of the admissions on the latter work were from the Relief Camps.

4. The Department Public Works employed 43,623 persons, being 1,413 in excess of the week before. The following is a list of the more important works in progress:—

No.	District.	Name of Work.	NUMBER EMPLOYED.
			Previous Week.	Present Week.
1	Bangalore	State Railway	14,808	14,583

16	Do.	Kotgunda Tank	542	671
TOTAL			41,064	41,829

5. The number in Relief Camps was 3,528, or a trifling increase of 9, due to the re-collection of some discharged cases at the Camp near the Railway Works. There were besides 281 persons in receipt of grain doles in their villages. There were 721 admissions to the Relief Camps: 117 inmates were sent to their homes and 863 to Relief Works. The following persons were dealt with in Bangalore:—

Sent to Railway Works	735
Do. Special Gang	158
Do. Relief Camp	45
Do. Hospital	42
TOTAL				980

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS
FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 5th MARCH 1878.

GENERAL REMARKS.—No rain has fallen during the week in Madras; it is said to be wanted in parts of North and South Arcot, Chingleput, and Madura; the harvest of rice and raggi continues in the South, with rather a poor outturn; the standing crops are however generally in fair condition, though damage from insects is reported in Nellore, Bellary, North Arcot, Madura, Tinnevely, and Coimbatore, and from blight in Godavery, Nellore and North Arcot. Prices are said to be rising rather generally. The total number on relief works is 126,969, and gratuitously relieved 133,131, a decrease of 13,037 and 9,433 on the figures of last week respectively. No rain is reported from Mysore, where there is no change in prospects; the number on works for the week ending the 23rd February was 49,940, and on gratuitous relief 3,809: the former is more by 2,972 and the latter by 224 than in the previous week. In Bombay slight showers are reported from Sind, with benefit to the rabi crop; elsewhere the weather has been dry; the harvest of the rabi is in progress in most districts. In the Central Provinces the weather is now clear; the cutting and threshing of the rabi is progressing in all districts; the outturn of the crops harvested is below the average, especially in Betul, Chhindwara, Seoni, Nimar and Jubbulpore; export continues, and prices are still rising. In Berar the outturn of the rabi harvest has been good, except in Basim, where the crops have suffered from blight. In Central India the scarcity of water in Malwa is becoming more and more felt; the prospects of the wheat crop are fair, except in the Northern Districts of Gwalior where the crop has failed. In Rajputana the week has been clear; the prospects of the crops are fair, but cattle are reported to be dying for want of fodder in Ajmere and the Tonk and Harrowtee states. In Bengal there has been rain in most parts of the Central and Eastern districts, in parts of Burdwan, and in a few other districts; the state of the standing crops is on the whole satisfactory, with the exception of the poppy in Mozufferpore and Chumparun; exportation continues, and prices are very high. In Assam there has been slight rain; prospects are good. In Burma the crops have been reaped and there is nothing new to report. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh the weather is now dry and clear; prospects are good; reaping has begun in the Benares Division and Eastern Oudh. In the Punjab the weather is now more settled, though a little rain is reported from a few districts; agricultural prospects are generally good, except in the Peshawar district.

		General Remarks. —Slight showers continue in Sind, benefiting rabi ; cholera decreasing in Surat; rabi generally being harvested; weather cooler throughout Presidency.
Bengal—
Chittagong ...	0.98	Weather variable; sunny and cloudy at times; in some stations the lands are being ploughed for pania aus by bunding hill streams; the cold-weather crops want more rain; the price of rice is from 9 to 13 seers per rupee, in the south it is from 12 to 16 seers; cholera is reported from Raojan, and small-pox from Satkania.
Noakholly ...	Nil	Weather warm; the cold-weather crops are progressing favourably, but would be improved by a little rain; public health is good.
Chittagong Hill Tracts...	0.7	Weather seasonable; a slight fall of rain on the 24th February, which has improved the prospects of tobacco; the hillmen are busily engaged in cutting jungle for jooning.
Hill Tipperah ...	Nil	Weather generally fair, but occasionally cloudy; nothing particular to report regarding the state and prospects of the crops; chillies are being gathered here and there; the price of common rice has risen to 13 seers for the rupee.
Backergunge ...	Nil	Things are generally in a satisfactory state, but food continues dear; rice is selling at 12 pucka seers per rupee, which is very high.
Furzedpore ...	0.80	Weather cloudy; prospects of the rabi crops are good; sugarcane has been harvested; the ground is being prepared for the early rice crop.
Dacca ...	0.16	Weather good; rain fell on the 28th ultimo, and since then it is cool; state and prospects of the crops are favourable; the rain has allowed ploughing to be done, and sowing in places.
Mymensingh ...	1.32	Weather unsettled; the cold-weather crops have been generally gathered; ploughing has commenced.
Tipperah ...	0.3	Weather warm, with a southerly wind; unsteady and cloudy; about three-fourths of the sugarcane crop have been cut, with a fair outturn; chillies have begun to be gathered; rice is being exported to Narayanganj, Calcutta and Noakholly; price of rice ranges from Rs. 2.9 to Rs. 3; the average price is about Rs. 2.13.
24-Pergunnahs ...	Nil	What crops there are on the ground promise well, but rain is wanted; public health is generally good, though a few cases of cholera are reported.
Jessore ...	0.35	Weather cooler after the rain; the winter crops are harvested; ploughing is going on for spring sowings, which will be commenced now that the rain has fallen; in Khoulua, Narail and Bagirhat the boro dhan has suffered from drought.
Nuddea ...	1.10	There has been rain generally; the weather was oppressive and hot, but since the rain it has become cool; there is not much on the ground, and what there is, is poor; the mango blossoms have been injured by the wind, but the rain has been of much use in enabling the cultivators to prepare their lands for rice.
Moorsheadabad ...	0.18	Weather seasonable; a little injury has been done to the crops in Gowas and Melimpore thanas by hail and rain, but favourable reports are received of the crops elsewhere; cholera prevails in three thanas.
Pubna ...	1.10	Weather warm during the first and cold during the latter part of the week; rain with hailstones, attended by a heavy storm, fell on the night of the 27th ultimo; the prospects of mutter , khosai and masur appear to be not bad; the rabi crops promise a fair outturn; nearly fifteen annas of haldi have been gathered.
Rajshahye ...	0.05	The prospects of the rabi crops continue to be satisfactory; kora paddy is now being transplanted; jute is also being sown; a few cases of cholera and small-pox have been reported from Lalpore and Bagmara police stations, and from the Naobata outpost.
Dogra ...	0.02	Weather clear and seasonable; no change in the state and prospects of the standing crops; jute and sesamum are being sown in the eastern part of the district.
Dinagepore ...	Nil	Weather fair; rice is selling at 18½ seers the rupee; purchases are being made in large quantities; a rise in price is expected.
Rungpore ...	A few drops of rain on the night of the 27th ultimo.	Westerly winds are prevalent; state and prospects of the crops continue to be satisfactory; the outturn of sugarcane will be good; cholera is somewhat prevalent in the east of the district.

Presidency or Province and District.	Rainfall for week preceding.	State of agricultural prospects.
Bengal—continued.
Cooch Behar ...	Nil	The weather is mild yet, but is gradually becoming warm; the prospects of cheena and kaua are good; the cultivators are busy in preparing lands for sowing bitri dhan ; tobacco is being cut; public health is generally good, but in Dinháta a few cases of small-pox have appeared.
Jalpaiguri ...	Nil	Weather seasonable; the land is being prepared for dhadoi paddy; mustard, tobacco, cheena , kaon and wheat are promising.
Darjeeling ...	0·07	A good deal of high wind, which has dispersed the mist and clouds so long hanging about; all the crops are progressing favourably, but there is nothing of importance on the ground at present.
Midnapore ...	Nil	Weather grown somewhat cooler in the sadar station, unseasonably warm elsewhere; the crops are nearly all harvested, but the outturn is not quite satisfactory.
Howrah ...	Nil	Weather rather cooler this week; little or nothing on the ground but the boro dhan , which is planted on the edges of the Rajapur bheel ; a larger area has been planted than last year, and it is doing well; small-pox is on the increase.
Hooghly ...	A few drops of rain.	The rain was accompanied with thunder and lightning; weather cloudy, close in the first part of the week, but cool since the night of the 27th ultimo; sugarcane is being planted out; the rabi crops are being reaped; the outturn will be about fourteen annas; public health is normal; one case of small-pox has been reported from Bullagur station.
Burdwan ...	A little rain at Rancee-gunge on the 27th ultimo. Bood Bood, 0·24 Culna, 0·56 Cutwa, 0·81	The rabi crops have been almost reaped; potato has turned out tolerably well; til is being sown; cotton plants are improving; sugarcane is good, and is being cut; state and prospects of the crops in Rancee-gunge and Cutwa sub-divisions are as before; cholera still rages in Culna sub-division; both cholera and fever are still prevalent in Jehanabad sub-division.
Baukoora ...	Nil	Weather very warm till the night of the 27th ultimo, when a thunderstorm cooled the air; the cold-weather crops are being reaped, and giving a large outturn.
Beerbhoom ...	Nil	Weather somewhat cooler than last week; the cold-weather crops are doing well; the sugarcane crop is very good.
Sonthal Pergunnahs ...	Nil	Weather very cool; no change in the state and prospects of the crops; cholera and small-pox are prevalent in Deoghur.
Blágálpur ...	Nil	Weather cloudy and warm, with strong west winds in the early part of the week; within the last few days it has become quite cold again, and the days are now calm and bright; the rabi crops promise well everywhere; prices are again rising in consequence of heavy purchases for export; health is good.
Monghyr ...	Nil	Weather cold; with west winds; the crops are excellent, especially the poppy.
Purneah ...	Nil	Weather very cool for this time of year; prospects of the crops continue good.
Maldah ...	Nil	Weather fair, with great variation of temperature; state and prospects of the crops are generally satisfactory; public health is fair, but a few cases of cholera and small-pox are still reported.
Durbhanga ...	Nil	Weather seasonable; state and prospects of the crops are satisfactory.
Muzafferpore ...	Nil	Weather cool, with strong west wind; the rabi crops are going on very well, and a good average outturn may be expected if the weather continues favourable; the poppy crop everywhere is very poor; there is promise of an excellent mango season.
Sarun ...	Nil	Weather hot and dusty, west wind prevailing; no change to report in the state and prospects of the crops; the rabi is all round a good average crop; prices are stationary; public health is good.
Chumparun ...	Nil	Weather cool at night and hot during the day; it is becoming warmer day by day; the prospects of the rabi crops are the same as reported last week; the poppy prospects are not favourable; rain is much wanted to make the existing plants blossom well.
Patna ...	Nil	Weather seasonable; nothing new to report about the state and prospects of the crops.
Gya ...	0·02	There has been a return of cold weather since the 1st instant; maximum thermometer in the shade 94° 60; no change of prospects; wheat, barley, gram, and peas are being cut in places; prices are rather easier.
Shahabad ...	Nil	Strong west wind blowing; weather now and then cloudy; wheat and gram are being harvested; peas are somewhat damaged by insects, which have appeared of late; cheena promises well; public health is good.
Hazáribágh ...	0·01	Weather unseasonably cold; the rabi crops are much below the average both in acreage and in produce; export of food-grains is very great; prices are very high, and tending upwards; no actual distress is yet felt, but a great number of the poorer classes are emigrating to the tea districts.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 14th March 1878, and is, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons, hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. IX of 1878.

An Act for the better Control of Publications in Oriental languages.

WHEREAS certain publications in oriental languages printed or circulated in British India have of late contained matter likely to excite disaffection to the Government established by law in British India, or antipathy between persons of different races, castes, religions, or sects in British India, or have been used as means of intimidation or extortion :

And whereas such publications are read by and disseminated amongst large numbers of ignorant and unintelligent persons, and are thus likely to have an influence which they otherwise would not possess ; and whereas it is accordingly necessary for the maintenance of the public tranquillity and for the security of Her Majesty's subjects and others to confer on the executive Government power to control the printing and circulation of such publications : It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. This section and sections eleven to sixteen both inclusive apply to the whole of British India ; the other sections of this Act apply only to those parts of British India to which they may from time to time be extended by the Governor General in Council by a notification in the Gazette of India.

Interpretation clause.

2. In this Act—

'Newspaper' means any periodical work containing public news, or comments on public news, printed wholly or partially in any oriental language, and includes two or more copies of a newspaper bearing the same name, whether published on the same day or on different days, and also includes any series of newspapers, whether printed on one day or different days, or with one name or with different names ; and

'Print,' 'printed' and 'printer' apply not only to printing, but also to lithography, engraving and photography.

3. Any Magistrate of a district or Commissioner of Police in a Presidency town, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any newspaper is printed or published, may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government and subject to the provisions of section five, call upon the printer and publisher of such newspaper to enter into a joint and several bond, or when the printer and publisher of such newspaper are the same person, call upon such person to enter into a bond, binding themselves or himself, as the case may be, in such sum as the Local Government thinks fit, not to—

(a) print or publish in such newspaper any words, signs, or visible representations, likely to excite disaffection to the Government established by law in British India or antipathy between any persons of different races, castes, religions, or sects in British India ; or

(b) use or attempt to use such newspaper for the purpose of putting any person in fear or causing annoyance to him and thereby inducing him to deliver to any person any property or valuable security, or anything signed or sealed which may be converted into a valuable security, or to give any gratification to any person, or for the purpose of holding out any threat of injury to a public servant, or to any person in whom they or he believe or believes that public servant to be interested, and thereby inducing that public servant to do any act, or to forbear or delay to do any act, connected with the exercise of his public functions.

EXPLANATION.—"Valuable security," "gratification" and "public servant" are used in this section in the senses in which they are respectively used in the Indian Penal Code.

4. When any bond is executed under section three, the said Magistrate or Commissioner may further require the obligor or obligors of the same to deposit the amount thereof in money or the equivalent thereof in securities of the Government of India; and the money or securities so deposited shall, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, remain so deposited until fifteen days after the person or persons depositing the same has or have made and subscribed a declaration under Act No. XXV of 1867, section eight.

When such person or persons has or have subscribed such a declaration, and fifteen days have elapsed from the date of subscribing the same, he or they may apply to the said Magistrate or Commissioner for the restoration of the said money or securities, and thereupon such money or securities shall, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, be restored to such person or persons.
